Dear Mama
I am having all sorts of a good time here with Buster. Tige is such a dear dog. But he believes in silly superstitions about such things as ghosts and supernatural things; as if there were any such things– I suppose he believes in luck and fate too. but then he is only a dog– and people can be good and sweet and still believe in rot. After all it isn't what we believe but what we do.. Why do people write such things as ghost stories? Why dont they write some thing to make us laugh– We are all anxious to laugh and only waiting for the chance — it is better than medicine

2. PAINTER: "Say, boss, have you got a match?"
LEANDER: "NO! Look out there, you blooming idiot, you'll daub that newly coated wall with that brush, and the stain will never come off."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, don't speak so crossly."

3. PAINTER: "What's th' matter with yer? I didn't daub no wall."
LEANDER: "! ! ! x x x ! ? x x — — ! !"
LULU: "Oh, Leander, I knew something would happen. Just see what you have brought upon yourself."

PAINTER: "W-E-O-W!"
LULU: "Oh, you cruel Leander! Don't strike the poor man. It was only an accident."

5. PAINTER: "You miserable little putty-faced lobster! Give me one in the smeller, will you?"
LEANDER: "W-E-O-W! H-E-L-P!"
LULU: "Oh, Leander, WHY did you irritate the man? WHY did you start this row?"

6. THE AMBULANCE SURGEON: "Oh, he's all right. No bones broken. His eye will be all right in a couple of weeks. That stain will wear off in a month or so."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, WHY did you do it? Now our wedding will have to be postponed AGAIN."
LEANDER: "Take me to the morgue."

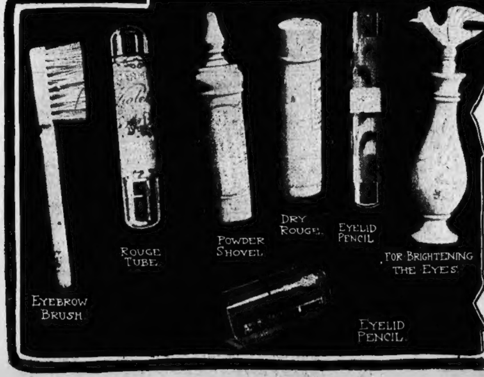
It's Correct Now to "Make Up"

The Fashionable Set Now Appear at Opera, Horse Show and Private Functions with Rouged Cheeks, Pencilled Eyebrows and "Touched-up" Lips.



How Smart Society Paints.

A YEAR ago the cable news told us that the fashionable women of Paris were "painting," and last Summer in Newport a few American women returning from abroad appeared with touched-up cheeks and eyebrows. Would this newest fad spread? was asked. The New York Horse Show, late last Fall, answered the question. The Smart Set in the boxes were unmistakably "made up."

That settled it. The French fashion had been approved and accepted by American social leaders. So when the grand opera season opened the boxes displayed the rouged cheeks, pencilled eyebrows and tinted lips of all who really must be "smart." And the jewelry stores now reflect the new fashion with a multitude of gold, silver and jewelled rouge pots, lip pencils and other accessories

Women of the best set no longer retire behind closed doors to dab off their shining noses with a little rice powder, looking guilty and ashamed if discovered. Their toilet tables are boldly strewn with every accessory that an actress may find necessary to the proper advertisement of her beauty. Instead

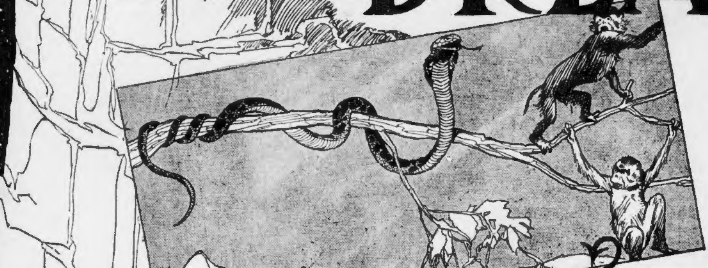
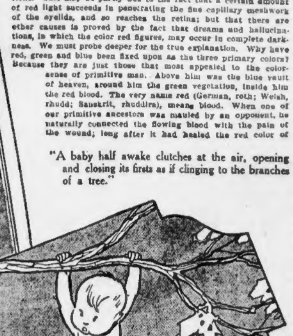
DREAMS

Science Shows That Nightmares Are the Inherited Memories of the Fearful Falls and the Horrible Monsters Encountered by Our Tree-Dwelling Ancestors of Prehistoric Ages.



"No animal but the snake could silently ascend to the tree-tops."

"Our ancestor, the Pteranodon, from which we inherited our dreams of flying."



"A baby half awake clutches at the air, opening and closing its firsts as if clinging to the branches of a tree."

"Man's gesture of despair comes from the ape's movements when his prying fingers are hurt."

AT last a plausible and interesting explanation of the most common of our nightmare dreams has been found. According to Mr. C. Marsh Beadnell, a well-known English evolutionist, we dream of falling because our ape-like ancestors, who slept in the tree tops, had frequent tumbles. Those who saved themselves by catching limbs handed the memory of the sensation down through their descendants to us.

Those who fell to the ground did not live to have children after the accident. For this reason we never dream of striking the bottom.

The monsters which pursue us, but never catch us, though our limbs seem of lead, are inherited memories of the real monsters that existed in those days as shown by fossil remains. Dreams of flying, of the color red and other sensations such as the universal horror of snakes are all explained by hereditary memory.

BY C. MARSH BEADNELL.

EVERYBODY has experienced the horrible nightmare of falling over a precipice and tumbling down, down, through the air—but before you strike the ground you always wake up. The explanation of this and other persistent and universal dreams is both interesting and simple.

Study of evolution shows us where we got this dream, and all the other common ones, such as the pursuing monster from which we flee with limbs that feel like lead. Our inherited memory flashing up now and then when our higher faculties are asleep gives us a recollection of some of the most thrilling experiences in the lives of our animal ancestors. These terrible experiences made such deep impressions upon the brains of the survivors that they were transmitted by heredity in the form of a dormant memory.

It has long been demonstrated that a sort of hereditary memory exists in our instincts. A baby who has had no experience to teach him as yet is naturally afraid of dark places and big animals. This instinct and many others are traced back to the earliest times when our brute ancestors learned by painful experience that dangerous animals lurked in caves and dark places.

The falling through space dream dates back in evolution a comparatively short distance, to the time when our ape-like forefathers lived in trees.

The Falling Through Space Dream.

Usually, just as the victim is about to be dashed to pieces at the bottom of the imaginary cliff, he awakes with a startled cry; thus, though suffering all the mental agony of "falling," he escapes the shock of the actual "stopping," and this, as we shall shortly see, has an interesting explanation.

Our remote ancestors, in order to avoid their nocturnal foes, slept, like the existing apes, cradled in the tree-tops. To fall from their perches during heavy sleep or boisterous weather could have been by no means an uncommon event, though it is highly probable that they did not fall the whole way to the ground, but succeeded in saving themselves in their headlong flight through the darkness by clutching the branches.

Now, it is significant that the motions of "frantic clutching" may be witnessed in the human being, when, through any cause, his higher intellectual cells are less active than the lower ones. This is the normal state of affairs in the child, for, its lower mental centres arriving at maturity before the higher, it may be observed to constantly throw its arms above the head and at the same time to open and shut its little fists. Again, in dreams and certain stages of surgical anaesthesia, the hands are sometimes thrown upward, alternately opening and shutting in a spasmodic manner.

Drowning men clutch at a straw. Why? Because the higher mental centres have given up the ghost, and from the lower ones emanate orders that would have been useful under somewhat similar circumstances tens of thousands of years ago; hence drowning men, even though good swimmers, when about to sink, throw up their arms with wild clutching movements of the hands.

Why should this "falling through space" dream recur so persistently in the human race? Because the vivid sensations consequent upon the "falls," to which our arboreal ancestors were so liable, produced in their cerebral cells definite molecular readjustments, which, in time, became transmitted to descendants. When, in the descendants, these particular collocations of cerebral cells are stimulated into activity, a phantasmal fall through space is experienced.

Those of our ancestors who fell to the very bottom of the tree were either killed outright or so injured that death from secondary causes prevented them from reproducing their kind; therefore, molecular changes in the cerebral cells due to the shock of "stopping" would not be transmitted. This explains why, just before reaching the bottom of the dream-precipice, we awake.

The Pursuing Monster Dream.

Another unpleasant and not uncommon dream is that of being chased by ferocious animals. A characteristic of this nightmare is the complete inability of the victim to flee from the terrible monster which he imagines to be chasing him. Shrieking with terror, his legs like lumps of lead, he is in much the same plight as a small bird, who, hypnotized by the cold stare of the serpent, is unable to escape. Fortunately, in such dreams also, we awake just before the dream-monster actually pounces upon us.

In prehistoric epochs our wild ape-like progenitors lived surrounded by formidable leviathans, flying dragons or pterodactyls, atlanto-saurians with thigh bones six feet long, and hosts of other awe-inspiring behemoths. In such perilous times they must have been frequently chased by these huge beasts; those lucky enough to escape would transmit to their descendants the cerebral molecular changes resulting from the exciting "run for life."

In some unpleasant dreams, in delirium, and particularly in the delirium tremens of the drunkard, loathsome reptiles and insects harass the unfortunate sufferer on every side; snakes, rats, and horrible black beetles crawl and run over the bedclothes in quick succession; he "peers into all corners, behind the doors; he lifts imaginary objects from the ground, shakes them and throws them down again, stamps and scrapes with his foot on the ground as though crushing an insect. Suddenly he claps his hand to his thigh, in order, as he says, to crush a huge black spider who is crawling up him."

Monkeys, and, to a less extent, human beings (especially women, who have less control over their emotions than men), show an innate horror of snakes and all creeping animals.

The reason for this horror of snakes is not hard to find. No animal but the snake could noiselessly and without jar or shaking ascend to the tree tops and seize the sleeping apes or ape-like creatures from which we came. Comparatively few animals can climb a tree. Of those that can many are too small to attack an ape. The others, such as the bears and big cats, can only do so at the expense of some effort and much scrambling and shaking of the tree. Before one of these beasts climbed half way to the top his nimble prey would be chattering at him from the next tree.

When our fingers are burned or otherwise hurt we flick them to and fro in a manner very suggestive of a monkey endeavoring to shake off a hurtful insect. We flick the fingers because such action was of immense benefit to our ancestors when a noxious insect clung to their prying fingertips. Given sufficiently painful emotion, even the most staid and dispassionate of men, when wringing his hands in despair, reverts to this primitive movement. "Picking at the bedclothes" is an alarming symptom in delirium, implying, as it does, approaching dissolution. This movement of the hand and fingers is just that of a person essaying to snatch up some foul insect and throw it away.

Color Dreams.

The color red plays a conspicuous part in dreams and hallucinations. This may be partly due to the fact that a certain amount of red light succeeds in penetrating the fine capillary meshwork of the eyelids, and so reaches the retina; but that there are other causes is proved by the fact that dreams and hallucinations, in which the color red figures, may occur in complete darkness. We must probe deeper for the true explanation. Why have red, green and blue been fixed upon as the three primary colors? Because they are just those that most appealed to the color-sense of primitive man. Above him was the blue vault of heaven, around him the green vegetation, inside him the red blood. The very name red (German, roth; Welsh, rhudd; Sanskrit, rhuddira), means blood. When one of our primitive ancestors was mauled by an opponent, he naturally connected the flowing blood with the pain of the wound; long after it had healed the red color of blood would be associated with pain. The sight of blood will infuriate the wild buffalo, and every one knows the effect of a "red rag to a bull." Flowing blood will kindle the latent passions of strife not only among savages, but among the coarser natures of civilized races. The Australian aborigines work themselves into a frenzy just before going into battle by sprinkling their blood over each other's thighs. Certain monkeys exhibit disgust and horror when shown bright red blood, and among the more refined members of the civilised world the first sight of blood causes nausea, faintness or even complete loss of consciousness.

Many animals are parti-colored red as an outward sign to their would-be destroyers that they are unpalatable (the Sphinx caterpillar has a bright red tail to warn off hungry birds), or dangerous, as we see in the red spines of many fishes and the red sterns of some stinging insects. The wattles of the turkey, the comb of the cock, and the cheek of the maiden become deep red under the influence of passion; and this universal recognition of red as a danger color has even been extended to signals, poison labels and doctors' lamps.

Professor Gower describes how, in one of his epileptic patients, visions of a red light always preceded the epileptic fit. Again, in one of Graham's epileptic patients, the aura consisted of the appearance of a hideous old woman in a red cloak, who advanced and struck him on the head with her cane, whereupon he fell to the ground in convulsions. The epidemic of dancing, which raged in Germany and the Netherlands in the Middle Ages, was a malady characterized by hallucinations, convulsions, and dancing fits; the attack was often brought on by seeing the color red. Many of the afflicted thought, while dancing, that they waded in blood. One observer describes how a patient with delirium tremens was haunted by red lanterns swinging from trees.

More examples might be quoted, but enough has been said to convince the reader that the color red must have strongly influenced primitive man, and hence enters largely into many of the hallucinations and illusions of present-day individuals.

Dream sensations of suffocation recur with comparative frequency. Local causes, no doubt, account for some—e. g., the bed clothes fall across the face, or an over-full stomach interferes with the action of the heart and lungs. However, their persistence warrants the assumption that they owe their origin to "automatic explosions" of groups of central cells, whose ancestors received impressions, millions of years ago, at a stage of the world's history when our forefathers were terrestrial-aquatic in their habits.

Music in Dreams.

At that early period in the history of the race when all life was aquatic sound vibrations were "felt," but not "heard"; later, when our ancestors emerged from the waters and struggled for existence, first on the littoral shores and then on dry land, a portion of the epiblast in the cephalic region became modified into a primitive organ of hearing, and confused noises were, for the first time, dimly heard.

As the ages rolled on, and this primitive receptacle of sound evolved and improved, regular sound vibrations—in other words, music—began to be discriminated. Now, music is "organised noise," and may be divided up into simple or melodic and complex or harmonic. Many of the lower animals and all races of men appreciate melody; but harmony, which is a late product of the evolution of music, is only appreciated by civilised races. Our prehistoric ancestors, though delighting in melody, had no knowledge of harmony, and only melody or the most rudimentary harmony appeals to the present-day savage.

In dreams, as already stated, we hear imaginary noises or irregular sound vibrations; elementary music or melody is also heard, but to a less extent. Finally, complex music or harmony is only dreamed of on the rarest occasions, and then, probably, only by the gifted few. All this may be explained by the fact that a knowledge and appreciation of harmony is a comparatively late achievement of the human intellect.

Dream Passions.

Although civilised people have acquired the power of controlling their passions, yet in dreams, hallucinations, and conditions of mental instability this power is to a great extent lost, so that the most timid and demure among us behaves in a quite unnatural manner. A monkey has the most violent passions of love and hate, over which it possesses little or no control; prehistoric man was governed by far more intense passions of love and hatred than is the untutored savage of our own times. A man in a towering passion gives most unmistakeable evidence of having possessed ape-like ancestors. He frowns. Why? Because his forefathers found themselves at an advantage in fighting when they, by a similar movement, excluded the sun from their eyes. His nostrils dilate, he grinds his teeth, draws back his lips—to show the primitive weapons of war—his clenched fists are advanced, his face is flushed or hideously pale, his very voice is changed, for he no longer possesses perfect control over the vocal chords, and he repeats one word with ever-increasing vehemence, until all that can be heard is a beast-like growl.

Nearly everybody has experienced that most delightfully realistic dream in which one is flying or soaring through the air. Sensations of "floating in the air" precede loss of consciousness following the administration of certain anaesthetics. The intoxication of hasheesh is thus described by Gautier: "It seizes you and lets you go again, lifts you up to heaven and carries you back to earth." The brain-impresses causing these sensations must have been engraved on our forefathers at a very distant date, probably at or about the time when the earth was peopled with great flying saurians, and it is quite conceivable that man, in his line of ascent from simple bioplasm to his present high estate, may have passed through an intermediate stage of some animal capable of flying or at any rate soaring. Be this as it may, it is difficult to explain the persistence of these peculiarly vivid dreams otherwise than on the theory of hereditary transmission from the obscure and misty past.

How Not to Be an Old Maid.

The Very Interesting Experiment of the Five Philura Girls, Who Really Wanted to Be Wedded, and How the Experiment Succeeded.

Miss Louise Hager.

"They were manicured and perfumed as never before."

Miss Clara Boardman.

"I want to be tall and wealthy!" cried one.

A LITTLE book in which the heroine was transformed from a faded old maid into a blushing bride is responsible for the formation of the Philura Club, now famous from end to end of the Pacific Coast.

It was founded by some half dozen girls who were tired of being husbandless. They were in the same dilemma as dozens of girls the country over have been and are. They wanted husbands. But how were they going to get them? The problem increased, as that problem is so apt to do, with their ages. Every year it became more serious. Every line in their faces, every gray hair in their heads made it more difficult to solve.

They sighed, as even the most earnest of bachelor maids is apt to sigh, when they thought of their lonely futures, without the sign of a protective masculine arm to lean upon.

Then suddenly it chanced that on a certain day among the roses of Oakland, one of the prettiest of California towns, just over the bay from San Francisco, a bachelor maid happened upon a little volume called "The Transfiguration of Miss Philura."

As she read its pages her cheeks became as red as the reddest roses in her garden. Like Miss Philura, she was transfigured.

In Miss Philura she saw herself, she saw her coterie of bachelor girl friends—Louise Hager, Clara Boardman, Luella Morgan, Effie Vance, Lillian Cable. Like herself, they were leading starved lives, while hungering, as Miss Philura had hungered, for the good things which they believed a distant and indifferent Creator had denied them.

"Ask, and believe that you have!" the Boston lecturer had said to Miss Philura of the faded eyes and shabby bonnet. "Declare that it is yours! Expect it! Believe it!"

And Miss Philura had asked, and believed, and expected, and declared. By these methods Miss Philura, wanting a husband, had finally achieved one!

The little bachelor maid in the rose-scented garden of Oakland snapped the little book together with a bang.

Breathlessly she summoned Louise, Luella, Effie, Clara, Lillian.

"Ask, and believe that you have!" she cried out to them. "Declare that a husband is yours! Expect it! Believe it!"——

The great lesson that Miss Philura had learned in cultured Boston was then and there taken to the hearts of the Oakland maidens. Then and there the Philura Club was formed to propagate the methods and to reap the successes of Miss Philura.

The club is only a few months old, and already five of its foremost and most intelligent members are engaged. Throughout California bachelor maids, who have wearied of bachelordom, and their anxious mammas, who never approved of bachelordom, are inquiring into the mysterious methods of the victorious five.

One of them has, of course, revealed the hidden secrets that led to success and a husband. She has at heart the good of thousands of other bachelor maids who are in danger of becoming perpetual old maids.

The first thing, it has been learned, expected of each applicant for membership in the Philura Club was to make the acquaintance of the original Miss Philura—Miss Philura Rice—she who went to Boston and learned of the unseen Good, the "All-Encircling Good that hems us about on every side. It presses upon us, more limitless, more inexhaustible, more free than the air that we breathe," heard Miss Philura. "Out of it every need, every want, every yearning of humanity can be, must be, supplied."

Miss Philura had gone to Boston in a faded bonnet and a shabby gown; her face was pinched and wistful, her twenties outgrown, her eyebrows meagre and insufficient. She was a guest at her cousin Maria Van Deuser's, and that cousin was responsible for her introduction to the Woman's Ontological Club, where she heard for the first time about the Unseen Good.

"Desire itself," thundered the lecturer, "is but God—Good—Love, knocking at the door of your consciousness. It is impossible for you to desire anything that is not already your own! It only remains for you to bring the invisible into visibility—to take of the everlasting substance what you will.

"And how must you do this? Ask, and believe that you have! You have asked many times, perhaps, and have failed to receive. Why? You have failed to believe. In the asking and believing is the thing made manifest. Declare that it is yours! Expect it! Believe it! Hold to it without wavering—no matter how empty your hands may seem. It is yours"——

This was the doctrine poured into Miss Philura's ears; this was the doctrine upon which the first Philura Club, avowedly banded together with matrimony for its object, was founded.

Miss Philura had faith. She wanted fine clothes, and she got them. She wanted a husband, and she got him, too.

"The Transfiguration of Miss Philura" furnished the by-laws for the Philura Club of Oakland.

"Now, then, girls," cried the president pro tem., according to what is believed to be the most correct report of the club's proceedings, "the first thing is for each one of us to determine what she wants.

"A husband!" the club cried simultaneously.

"Yes, yes, of course, the ultimate end and aim of every sane-minded mother's daughter in the world," assented their leader. "But what is the shortest road to him?"

Instantly a member of the club quoted Miss Philura's confession: "I wish to be beautiful and admired. I want two new dresses, a hat with plumes, and a silk petticoat that rustles. I want some new kid gloves and a feather boa (a long one, made of ostrich feathers). I wish to have a lover and be married!"

Up jumped another member. "He is mine," she said, solemnly. "I am engaged to be married at this very moment!"

What a meeting that was! One after another the bachelor maidens breathed out their requests.

"I want to be tall and wealthy," cried one.

"Order half a dozen pairs of the newest high-heeled French shoes!" commanded her companions.

"But they are so expensive"—— began the short one.

"In the all Encircling Good," quoted the club as with one voice, "there is plenty of money—why, then, should you not spend it?"

That money is as plentiful as love was one of the absolute doctrines upon which the club was founded—as absolute as the mandate, "Believe, and thou shalt have."

"I want to have golden tints in my hair!" cried a brown-haired, demure-looking person.

"Of course you have them. Consult a hair dresser—the best—and have faith!"

"But"——

The brown-haired one ceased as if ashamed that she had even doubted.

"I want a great picture hat laden with plumes"——

"I want perfumes and flowers and laces"——

Each maiden recorded her desires, and each repeated solemnly, "They are mine."

"Remember," said the president, "the husband"——

"We are engaged to be married this very moment!" cried the club unanimously.

After the formation of the Philura Club Oakland observed with wonder that certain of its single ladies were vastly improved in looks.

"My, but Clara Boardman certainly has improved!" you heard on all sides.

"Yes, and look at Luella Morgan—her hair is just too pretty!"

"And Effie Vance—I don't know as I ever before saw her so becomingly dressed!"

"Order half a dozen pairs of the newest high-heeled French shoes," commanded her companions.

"He is mine," she said solemnly. "I am engaged to be married at this very moment."

"I shouldn't be a bit surprised if those women were getting ready to be married!" exclaimed the knowing ones who had achieved that distinction.

The members of the Philura Club consulted their text book and then they walked abroad prepared for anything.

One of them was approached just as Miss Philura had been by a dear, inquisitive friend.

"Have you had a fortune left you?" she asked. "They say you have and that you are engaged to be married!"

The Philura Club member repeated her lesson silently. Then, in the words of her text book, she answered: "I haven't exactly had money left me—I have all that I need"——

"But you're going to be married?"

It was a difficult moment, but Miss Philura's disciple faced it boldly. Like Miss Philura, she answered, "Yes!"

And then the other persisted—"Who is it? Who?"

"Ask and believe that you have," murmured the Philura Club member. "He is mine!" Aloud she said: "You shall meet him later."

Then she rushed to the club, and with glowing cheeks related to the other members just what had happened. They, too, had had similar experiences. They were all greeted as heroines, and in unison they repeated the words that Miss Philura had said to herself:

"Everything that I want is mine! I shall see him soon. He still lingers in the Encircling Good, but he is mine—mine!"

Now it happened, as in the case of Miss Philura, that the belief in their ultimate happiness improved the looks of these lucky members of this "How to Win a Husband Club" to an amazing extent. A new light glowed in their eyes, the roses deepened in their cheeks. Charming new gowns added new charms to their appearance. They took the trouble to dress becomingly in expectation of him who still lingered in the Encircling Good. They brushed their hair till it shone; they massaged their faces till all lines had disappeared; they culled the prettiest roses for their belts; they were manicured and perfumed as never before.

Gossip noted about them and reached the ears of certain young men among California's best. They heard so many attractive things about these young women that they made it a point to seek them out. They found them all that they had been pictured—amiable, charming, confident. Some of them were in despair because they heard that these loveliest of girls had already announced that they were engaged.

The most attentive of the young men were told by several anxious women that the girls were crazy. However, it seemed a pleasant sort of craziness, a craziness that sent blushes to their cheeks and notes of tenderness into their voices.

One of the young men made bold even as the Rev. Silas Pettibone had been bold with Philura Rice, and with similar happy results. He enlightened four other young men who, he knew, felt toward four other young women as he felt toward a certain one.

Close upon this information followed the announcement that Louise Hager was engaged to James Tallman; Clara Boardman to Frank L. Kanson; Luella Morgan to Lynn Carmley; Effie Vance to Will O. Morgan; Lillian Cable to Dr. Stratton.

These girls, like Miss Philura, the maiden whom they emulated, had, with the desire to be loved, grown beautiful, interesting, fascinating. They exerted themselves to the utmost to attract. That is the secret of their success.

Their advice to weary bachelor maids is to have faith and go and do likewise. "Ask, and believe that you have!" With a Philura club back of the bachelor maid she will even be bold enough to declare that a husband is hers, to expect him, to believe in him.

WONDERCITY-BUILT BY ANTS TO BE DESTROYED BY MAN.

The Curious "Honey Cows" of the Ants Waiting on a Blade of Grass for the Dairy Maid Ant to Come and Milk Them.

How the Intelligent and Ingenious Insects Founded a Remarkable City of 20,000,000 Inhabitants, with Skyscraper Dwellings and Even Milk Cows—And the Sad Fate Awaiting Them.

WITHIN a few hours' journey by rail from New York City the total destruction of a most wonderful city, of probably 20,000,000 inhabitants, is taking place.

Ten, and even fifteen, story dwellings, tenements, flats and institutions are all being demolished. A well-trained standing army is being demoralized and wiped out, unit by unit. The whole fabric of a very unique system of municipal and domestic government is in process of obliteration, entailing, as it does, the destruction of every dweller in the city from royalty down, grade by grade, to the commonest laborers, and reaching even the cows and other domestic animals in the city's public pastures.

A Worker Ant Carrying a Pebble Three Hundred Times Its Own Weight Uphill.

Many readers of this paper will be surprised, no doubt, to learn now for the first time that such a city was ever in existence. A year ago it reached the zenith of its power. Then came the decline. To-day very little of the city is left, and at the present rate of destruction every trace of it will have been wiped out before the beginning of May.

Ants alone builded this wonderful city, selecting a site in a forest a few miles south of Altoona, Pa. With infinite care they erected two thousand dwellings and set up a form of government which strictly conformed to every rule, regulation and precept known to ants from the very beginning.

Always Ready for War.

In every house of the city there are three graces of people and they are as far removed from each other as are the famous castes of India. The royalty is composed of the queens and kings. Then there are the aristocrats who manage the affairs of each great skyscraper and compel obedience to the unchanging laws. Their word is law for they have at their disposal large and well-trained standing armies of soldiers who are armed with enormously developed jaws which are their weapons of offense and defence. A well-regulated police force keeps order at all times.

The third caste is composed of the workers, and these are the little people who built this great city and who do all of the work. The workers build the houses, forage for food and go out and get herds of cattle, and some of them act as stableboys while others are the milkmaids and dairymaids.

There are sentries who stand, from morning until the curfew rings, at the door of the house and keep a watchful guard. At nightfall they shut and bolt the door. No enemy is allowed to enter, and if another faction should declare war and send an army of millions of trained soldiers to fight these sentries give the alarm.

It takes but little time for war to begin. The standing armies are always mobilized. After the sentries have given the alarm the least possible time is required before a great army of soldiers, with sharp, cruel jaws wide open, rushes out and falls upon the invaders.

Their buildings, which are really constructed on the same principle as the modern sky-scrapers, rise high above the surface of the ground sometimes to a height of four or five feet and with circumference often as much as forty feet. Every one of these dwellings appears as a huge cone, but its architects and builders have tunelled deep into the earth, and far below the surface there are often as many stories as there are above the surface.

The front door of every house is near the top of the mound. From this a round hallway from one-fourth to one-half inch in diameter leads downward into the house. At a depth of about nine inches galleries branch off from the main entrance or hall in every direction. These galleries lead to different rooms and their size depends upon the purpose for which they were constructed. Some of the rooms in a house are two, even three, inches long and an inch or more in width and three-quarters of an inch in height.

Below the first, or highest story of galleries, there are many others. Each story is conected by galleries which slant downward like stairs. Every different story in the house contains many rooms. There are the bedrooms, the royal chambers for the queens, the living rooms, the hatching rooms where the eggs laid by the queens develop, and then cute little nurseries where their babies are raised by trained nurses. Some of the floors of a well-arranged house are devoted to the storing of food. There are granaries, which are filled every Fall, and there are rooms in which the fodder for the milch and honey cows are kept.

Deeper down in the earth they have their stables where they keep their cattle, and during the Winter they are just as careful of their cows as they are of their babies.

The aphids, or plant lice, are the milch cows. The dairymen know everything about milking and tending to their little cattle.

Besides the aphids they keep another kind of cattle for honey. These are the brownie bugs, or tree hoppers. These little fellows are the funniest looking things. They have big humps on their backs, and ridges on their shells give them the appearance of wearing great goggles through which they peer with keen, droll eyes.

Both of these breeds of cows are given the very best attention. In the Spring, after the grass has started to grow and the young leaves to sprout, the cowboys drive their aphids out and place them on tender shoots of grass, and the brownie bugs are driven up the trees to where the young leaves are. Every day the cows are driven into fresh pastures. The workers carry them from one blade of grass and from one nice leaf to another. There they are watched all the time. When milking time comes milkmaids stroke the little bugs gently with their feet until they give up a drop of milk. This is swallowed by the milkmaids, who hurry down into the ant hill and give it to nurses, who take it to the children in the nursery.

Where the Ants Built Their City. The Mounds Are the Skyscrapers Where They Live.

How They Herd Their Cattle.

The workers who conduct the dairies are careful never to be without milch cows. When stock gets low they search for more cattle, and when they find them they overpower them and carry them home. They are placed in stalls in the stables far underground and are fed just what they want to eat. In a short time the cows are so well pleased that they are very glad to give the ants all the milk they want. A large stock of fodder—leaves and dried grass—is laid up every Fall for the cattle during the Winter. They even breed cattle in their stables, and the young are tended carefully and are brought up to increase the size of the herds.

It is not strange that they are so particular with their cattle when one thinks of the number of babies that are growing in the nurseries all of the time. There are millions of them. The queens lay thousands of eggs every day, and their personal attendants take them away and place them in little beds. It takes from fifteen to twenty days for the eggs to hatch; then the children are taken by the trained nurses to the nurseries.

There the children are by the million, every one of them as hungry and as restless as can be. In every house there are thousands of trained nurses whose duty it is to attend the babies. They are continually running around picking up the little ones and placing them in new positions, just like anxious human mothers do with their babies.

The nurses run to the milkmaids and get all the milk they can carry, and then hurry back to the nursery, where a thousand small heads will pop up for a taste of the delicious milk.

After a few weeks the babies spin for themselves tiny, soft blankets, in which they wrap themselves, and then they go fast asleep. When their nap is over, which often lasts for many days, they awaken and kick their way out of the blankets, and they look like the grown-ups with the exception that they have wings.

Then there is excitement all over the house. The nurses are kept as busy as busy can be. They help the young ones out of their blankets and assist in smoothing their crumpled wings. Each one of the little ones is given a good bath by the nurses from head to foot and from wing tip to wing tip.

Then it is time for the children to begin life on their own responsibility. They leave the house in a great swarm led by the queens and their consorts and fly high in the air.

The queens after their aerial honeymoon, tear off their wings and settle down to the responsibilities of raising a family. Some of the queens with millions of their little daughters, the workers, start to make homes and houses of their own while other queens are taken to houses where the queens have died or where others are needed.

It isn't long until the workers have dug down into the earth far enough to provide their queen with rooms. She is then given a body guard of soldiers and attendants, and sentries are placed at the door of her room and a company of soldiers stationed at the entrance to the house to give alarm if danger threatens, or to beat off soldiers from any other house should they come too close.

Ant Hanging by One Leg from a Pair of Micro-Forceps and Holding a Coin Five Hundred Times Its Own Weight.

When the queen begins to lay eggs, the nurses have all that they can do to attend to their part of the work and, as the new house must maintain a large standing army as well as a good police force, the dairymen and the foragers are given a great task to feed all of these mouths. Then they have the winter's food to look after and to store, while other workers are kept busy underground, digging out granaries, forage and fodder rooms.

The dairymen are sent out to get a large herd of milch cows and they soon get them, and when the first children are born they have milk in plenty.

Each city is very carefully policed. The police force is no respector of persons. If the queen starts to escape, as she often tries to do, some big policeman will nab her with his jaws and drag her back into the royal chamber, whether she wishes to or not. These struggles are interesting, as the queen is always much larger than the policeman.

Doors Close at Curfew.

The door of each house in the city is guarded day and night by companies of soldiers. Last thing at night, when the curfew rings, the guard takes a last look around to see that everything is safe and then the door is closed. Everyone living in the house is supposed to be within doors at closing time, and as the guard is very prompt many a brisk and amusing struggle happens when latecomers try to force their way past the guard. At dawn, the guard which has kept watch all night in the rooms right at the entrance, open the door and the day's work begins.

The little people who build these great cities are stronger for their size than any other beings on earth, and they are as active as they are powerful. They don't have a lazy bone in their bodies. When it is known how strong and smart they are it is not so strange that their houses are the marvels they really are. Why, one of these little citizens of this city in the Allegheny Mountains can lift a pebble weighing eight hundred times as much as she does. She never uses her shoulders, but does all the lifting with her powerful jaws. It is nothing at all unusual to see a carpenter or stonemason dragging some log or stone thirteen hundred times as heavy as she is.

When they are all hard at work building their houses the greatest feats of strength may be seen. If a load is too heavy for one to budge she will run for help, and if two cannot move the pebble or stick, three or four, or as many as necessary, will be called to help. One thing is sure, if there is any chance at all to move that load they will do so. They do not know what failure means.

It is no wonder that these little people succeed in doing whatever they want. There are millions and millions of them in every house, and every one must do something. There is not a shirker among them, for the instant any one gets too tired or too lazy to work he is either driven out of the house or his head is bitten off by a policeman. This is the law, and it is as unchangeable as that of the Medes and Persians.

The Pretty Romance of Two Steamer Chairs

How Cupid Arranged the Deck Furniture of the Good Ship Koenig Albert and Thereby Made Certain a Charming International Love Match.

PRETTIEST of international romances—because it involves no tarnished coronet to be regilt with American gold—is that of the distinguished Italian artist, Pilade Bertieri and Miss Genevieve Wilson, who is a descendant of Washington Irving.

When Archbishop Farley performs their marriage ceremony, the graceful gray spires and Gothic doors of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York will frame a wedding scene of more than ordinary interest. The guests will represent the best society of two nationalities, and it is whispered that Caruso, the famous principal tenor of the Metropolitan Opera House, will act as best man.

This romance had its beginning on a transatlantic steamship sailing from the port of Genoa. It owes its happy culmination to that famed matchmaker among the seas, the blue Mediterranean.

Miss Genevieve Wilson was watched by many admiring eyes as she walked up the gangplank of the Koenig Albert. Of this she was quite aware, although wholly indifferent. For had she not been accustomed to looks such as these all her life? At first they had been for the plump, large-eyed infant, at sight of whom every one had exclaimed:

"Isn't she lovely? That is Mary Sutherland Wilson's baby."

For her mother had been a notable. In the circle of the Knickerbocker families she had been recognized as a successful litterateur. She had written a dozen novels chiefly of New York life. After her talented mother and her well-to-do father, John Wilson, had died, persons looked after her with the exclamation:

"Isn't she lovely?"

They said: "You know she is the grandniece of Washington Irving."

Now, after nine years in school, in a convent in Florence, they still exclaimed:

"Isn't she lovely?"

But the average Italian, knowing little of Washington Irving and nothing at all of Mrs. Mary Sutherland Wilson, added:

"She is a daughter of America."

Their Steamer Chairs Were Neighbors.

So, when a tall young man whose dark hair and mustache, turned sharply up at the ends, and whose eyes had the reflective expression of the dreamer, who is also a creator, took the deck chair which his man had identified as his—one that chanced to be next to hers—and gave her a glance of respectful admiration, the glance did not at all embarrass her. Yet she started a little with surprise, and looking out across the blue waves, at the receding white dotted hills of Genoa, wrinkled her fair brow as one does who solves a vexing problem.

The tall young man watched the hills, too, for a few moments, then tossed his rug carelessly aside and strode away to the cabin. He wrote one farewell letter.

"Dear Tomasso: Why this custom of farewell letters carried back by the pilot and received next day? Nothing of any moment can happen in the twenty minutes or so granted us for the task. After shaking your hand and kissing your cheek on the pier I came on deck and waved again my adieu, dear friend. Giovanni had found my deck chair, and when I could see you no longer I rested in it for a few minutes. Nothing, absolutely nothing, has happened, and yet—there was a beautiful girl in the chair next to mine. She is, I think, an American. She sits gracefully, which is sometimes harder to do, as we artists well know, than to stand well. Her profile reveals strong, yet classic features. I noticed that she did not fear the spray, for her hair curled prettily under its fingers. But what I liked best were her eyes. She looked at me quite calmly and impersonally for a second, and I noticed that their color was wine brown, chianti eyes, we would say. The purser is collecting the letters and I find that mine is full of the strange girl. How foolish.

"Adieu, my dear Tomasso. I will return when I have painted a few more portraits of American millionaires and their wives.

When he returned to his chair the girl as still there.

"Could I only have told this to Tomasso!" reflected a moment later, for at last thing happened.

know you," she said. "I recognized from this."

From a portrait by Pilade Bertieri," the young man read. He bowed and smiled gravely. "Yes," he said, "I had the pleasure of painting Mrs. Frank Gould."

"She is very young," the girl said.

"Yes. Almost as young as you."

"I am eighteen. I shall be nineteen next Summer."

"Then she is somewhat older."

"And she is charming, I imagine?"

"Very. But not so"——

We may not know the extravagance of the impending compliment, for eyes of the color of chianti have a way of going to young men's heads and making them foolish, but at that moment the girl's chaperon appeared. She was a German and the governess of the girl's brother.

"Frau Haengel," she said, "this is the artist whose portraits we have admired. Don't you remember his 'Death, the Consoler of Human Misery'? It was bought by the Italian Government. And he is a Knight of the Defender of the Crown. Do you not remember that we bought his photograph in Florence? I remembered him just now when I read his name in this portrait. And this, Signor Bertieri, is my little brother, John. He is four years younger than I, and is already a composer."

Frau Haengel made her curtsies to genius.

"Signor Bertieri," she murmured. "Ah, Signor Bertieri."

And she and Master John Wilson sat in the deck chairs next to Miss Wilson, and the three faces, beaming pleasant recognition upon him, were the most grateful tribute to his fame the young artist had ever received.

He glowed and expanded under it. He told them of his plans. He had spent three Winters in New York. This was his fourth.

"I like New York," he said. "The New Yorkers are like a strong east wind, bracing and tonic. I enjoy to go there and paint portraits part of the year. But to paint the pictures of imagination and the soul I would rather come back where the masters have lived. And so I shall divide my year into three parts, the Winter in New York, to make money. The Spring in London, to see and study the crowds, and Florence and Rome the rest of the year, where I can see the old paintings and dream the old dreams and paint what I wish."

Eyes the Color of Chianti.

While he spoke the artist saw that he had what every man desires, an audience. Opposite him sat a girl with eyes warm and brown as mellow chianti, and hair that curled prettily under the fingers of the spray, a girl who was visibly interested and who frankly hung upon his words as upon the utterances of an oracle. It was a sight to flatter a man less modest than the brilliant young painter of Florence.

She was even prettier in the moonlight, he concluded after dinner. Her beauty took on vagueness under the stars. And when they walked the deck and the wind blew her cape across his face, blinding him in the embrace of its perfumed folds for an instant, she laughed, and he was amazed that he had noticed how like music a girl's laughter may be.

Three days lie between Genoa and Gibraltar. They were days of delicious monotony. The sun shone in full September brilliancy. The stars were large and luminous and benignant. The waves were strangely blue. There may have been other persons on board. The artist was vaguely conscious that the chaperon and Master John Wilson were more or less remotely about. But the sky and the sea and the ship were to him merely a frame for a girl's exquisite face and a girl's tall, young figure moving with free grace beside him along the deck.

Mrs. Frank Gould, from a Portrait by Pilade Bertieri.

"Signorina—Miss Wilson," he began, "it is true I have known you but thirty-six hours, but—you understand—I"——

Orally, he was floored, but the mellow brown eyes, smiling shyly at him seemed to make reply, "Yes, I understand," and he was comforted.

"It is as though," he began one and a half hours later, "that we were a fairy prince and princess, sailing away to an island of—of—of"——

It is not given to many mortals to be rarely expressive in more than one art. Signor Bertieri's brush was eloquent, but his speech faltered. He would have been deeply mortified at this strange flight of words, but the girl's eyes again spoke for and solaced him.

Under the frown of Gibraltar he essayed adequate verbal expression again.

He Found Words to Win Her "Yes."

"Ah, Signorina Wilson," he sighed, "I am so glad that you speak my beautiful Italian. I should like to see you again under Florentine skies."

His peroration failing, the girl lifted a glance to him that said:

"Let us hope that you will."

"With one beside him who understands and cares, a man knows no fear. Fate may bear the frown of that mighty rock, but the man is not afraid because—because"——

Miss Genevieve Wilson, Who Is Engaged to Marry Signor Bertieri.

He paused, wishing that he had learned more of American customs while he painted American portraits. In Italy love was swift and fervid. It was told in the studios of Florence that a young man had fallen in love with a girl at a ball, had told her so, and in the transport of his love had fallen dead at her feet among the dancers. In Italy they sighed and understood when they heard the story.

But in the United States it was different. There was sentiment, he supposed, but it was hidden deep. And in America they were so liable to laugh if you talked of love. But this girl was only half American. She had lived in the United States but half her life, all the rest in Florence. Would her view of the grand passion be that of the Florentine or the New Yorker? He could not bear to be laughed at by those chianti colored eyes, he felt. And so in moods of hope and indecision the days from Gibraltar to New York passed.

And on the day of landing Signor Bertieri, before he departed for his studio at No. 4 West Fortieth street ascertained that for Signorina Wilson home would be 93 Madison avenue. From Frau Haengel and Miss Wilson he received an invitation to call. Then he went to the studio and wrote:

"Dear Tomasso. I am alternately in torment and in heaven. I am in love. And the young lady—yes, the girl who sat in the next deck chair—I think. I hope she is pleased with me. I have been in America for one hour. Adieu, Tomasso, for I am going to call on her PILADE."

The welcome in eyes and voice when he called, as he did daily, encouraged the artist. The manifest liking of little brother John and the motherliness of Frau Haengel gradually drove fear out. It was exactly one month from the day when she pointed at his portrait, reproduced in the American magazine, that Signor Bertieri found words for a formal proposal of marriage. Whether he succeeded in finishing the sentence does not matter. It elicited a "Yes."

"And we would have been married at once," said the painter, "but my orders had to be finished, and I could not neglect my pictures and would not neglect my bride. We will go after our wedding to our home in Chelsea, London."

Copyrighted, 1908, by the American-Journal-Examiner.

The Cleverest Gentleman Confidence Man Who Ever Swindled Rich and Fashionable Americans.

Mrs. Sidney Lascelles, Innocent and Unsuspecting Wife of the Famous Swindler, Writes of the Exciting and Deplorable Adventures She Was Whirled Through, Day After Day, as Her Reckless Husband Left His Trail of Victims All Over America and Around the World.

THE career of Sidney Lascelles is known in fragments, as he travelled the world over, living by his wits and imposing upon the wealthy and the fashionable, sometimes as "Lord Beresford," "Lord Courtenay," the "Duke of Devonshire," "Sir Harry Vane, of His Majesty's Light," "Dr. Edward Swan, of Cambridge University," etc., etc. But what little is known comes, as usual, from the police records, partly accurate and only half the truth.

On this page to-day is given the diary of the unfortunate, the trustful and the misled wife—a most remarkable and unusual glimpse behind the scenes at the fireside of a brilliant criminal. And the moral lesson of all this for young girls is to study well the man who asks you to be his wife and escape the shocking revelations to which Mrs. Lascelles awakened with dismay but loyal fidelity.

How It Feels to Be the Wife of a Conscienceless Rascal

By Mrs. Sidney Lascelles, Wife of the Bogus "Lord Beresford," "Duke of Devonshire," "Sir H. J. Asquith," "Lord Ross," Etc., Etc.,

CHAPTER I.

Our Courtship and Marriage.

THERE was nothing romantic in the little new town of Fitzgerald, Ga., in the year 1897 (my nineteenth), when Sidney Lascelles stepped from the train. Fitzgerald, in fact, was only two years old, and all the topics of conversation were mortgages, interest, land and rheumatism. With his arrival the town took on a new importance in the eye of the State. He was commonly believed to be an English nobleman, either one of the Lords Beresford or the Duke of Devonshire, and why he was in Georgia was but one of the causes of wonder regarding him. How he had been unjustly convicted of fraudulent dealings and sentenced to seven years in the Georgia penitentiary had been in every paper in the South, and his speedy pardon and release were gladly hailed.

Sidney Lascelles was a person of courtly manners, fine presence and great personal magnetism. His good breeding, which would have marked him even in a large city, was almost startling in little Fitzgerald. He looked the "lord" in every part.

The three thousand pioneer settlers all looked up to the superior person and at once turned over their projects of advancement to him. He soon was in charge of the waterworks and electric light building. Every man in Fitzgerald thanked the town's lucky stars that such a man had come to them.

I was organist at the Episcopal Church, and there I met Mr. Lascelles soon after his arrival. He was a natural organizer and took a hand in church matters. There was no choir at this time, so he at once organized one and sang solo himself.

There were no houses to be had in town, so father and I boarded at the Mansion House while he was preparing to build. The Mansion boasted one of the three pianos and the only bath tub in Fitzgerald. Mr. Lascelles called frequently to rehearse the music with me on this treasured piano. We had many tastes in common, as he remarked several times, but I did not suspect that he was taking any more interest in me than these tastes would account for. Still I wondered why he asked me so many personal questions. He had an adroit way of cross-questioning me until he could find out what I was thinking about.

One day all the young people and some older folk went on a picnic to Bowen's Mills. Mr. Lascelles and I found ourselves on the log of a dead tree beside a little lake. We were discussing music—the Swan song of "Lohengrin"—when I think I must have yawned, for he said suddenly:

"Clara, you want to see some excitement."

"Oh, no," I replied; for excitement meant shooting affrays or lynchings at that time, and, in fact, even now, in this vicinity.

"I mean seeing exciting new things, Monte Carlo—real life—Europe. Now we'll just do that," he continued, sort of to himself, "we'll take in all the great"—

I demanded an explanation of such language, and he suddenly came to himself and apologized, saying that he had meant to propose first. Then he forthwith did do so. I refused him, but he argued so earnestly and convincingly that when I said "No" the last time, I was morally certain that I did not mean it.

"Well," said he, "take a week to think it over, and remember whatever else may fail in the future, my wife shall never lack excitement."

That day a second sensation startled the little town almost out of a year's growth. If Lascelles's airs and graces astonished the citizens of Fitzgerald, they were still more upset when the first pair of French heels was seen in the streets. The heels were attached to a pair of very low-cut patent leather slippers, and above these were the first pair of red silk stockings beheld in Fitzgerald. The rustlings of a silk petticoat came from beneath the gray silk skirt with red silk trimmings, which swished above them. These clothes, truly marvellous to the eyes of the worthy natives, were carried by a dashing figure and capped by the bold, handsome face of a brunette of thirty years. I think we women noticed the details of this apparition about as I have mentioned them, beginning with the feet and heels.

She was introduced to every one—and we were all crazy to meet her, though every woman felt that she was some sort of an adventuress. As to her business in Fitzgerald—a question demanded of every stranger—she frankly told us that it was none of ours, and we had to guess. Her name was Marcella Montfort, of Paris. She stayed at the Mansion during the week, and one night I decided to confide to her that I was considering accepting Sidney Lascelles. I thought as she was a woman of the world, she might be able to estimate his real worth better than I.

She looked at me searchingly, sneered, and walked down the path, and I saw that Sidney was approaching. They talked a moment excitedly, cast a quick glance at me and then walked away.

I knew this was strange and felt that they were talking about me. But we all considered them strange beings, and when Marcella in a wise and motherly way next morning told me that I could not possibly do better than marry Sidney, I thought it was all right, and decided to accept him.

Sidney insisted on marrying me at once, and I yielded to his arguments, chiefly because I was sick of Fitzgerald and wanted to see a bit of the world.

Sidney was a little mysterious about his past, but admitted there had been ups and downs in his career. We were married on May 19, 1897, at the home of Prof. and Mrs. McIntosh.

We went on a short honeymoon to Atlanta, Ga., and a few other places, returning after a fortnight. My husband was making money from the Lascelles Grocery Company, and was to receive $10,000 for his services in the waterworks project very soon. Yet one night a few days after our return he decided to leave.

That evening he was late to supper, and I sat waiting for him on the piazza of the McIntosh residence. He approached at a faster walk than usual, and bounded up the steps with the joyous, boyish expression which I learned later to dread.

"What did I promise you that day at the Mills?" he asked, in a whisper, as he bent over me.

"Excitement—Europe," I said absently, thrilled by this suppressed excitement, which seemed to radiate from my husband.

CHAPTER II.

Her First Suspicions.

"Pack your trunks to-night, but don't say anything. We leave to-morrow morning."

I did as he said and we took an early train to Savannah, where we bathed in the sea and I shopped to my heart's content. He was most attentive and whenever I bought the best the city afforded, he regretted in a sort of princely way that we were not in Paris, where dresses and laces are worth buying.

"The first pair of French heels in town."

To me Sidney was still a man of mystery, but he had promised to explain all about himself some day, and I looked forward in delicious anticipation, with sometimes a little vague anxiety. Strange things happened which disturbed me.

We were strolling along one fine Sunday afternoon when an astonishing change came over my husband. A heavily built young man in a blue serge suit, with rather large feet, stood in front of us. My husband gripped my arm and forced me into a faster walk. I looked up and hardly knew him.

All his fine presence was gone. He had run his fingers through his mustache until it looked straggly and unkempt. His jaw had dropped a little and his lips were drawn in as if he had lost his front teeth. All his features looked different. Even his clothes seemed changed. His hat was at an unbecoming angle. One shoulder held higher than the other made wrinkles in the coat which once looked, as a Fitzgerald woman said, "as if it had been made and ironed on him." His frock coat fell away from his collar and his shirt bulged out. He was a sight.

Before I could more than gasp at this transformation, he said, "Don't say a word, march right ahead."

As usual, I obeyed first and thought afterward.

The look of interest on the face of the man in blue faded away as we passed him. Mr. Lascelles shuffled round a corner with me and said:

"See if he is following—it hurts like the devil to walk bow-legged this way."

When I assured him that he wasn't, I beheld another transformation. He swung his arms, touched his hat, slapped his chest, turned out his toes, straightened up and—behold, I was again walking with the gentleman of whose appearance I had been so proud. He looked at me as we took the next side street and burst out laughing.

I didn't like it at all, and told him that I felt more like crying than laughing; that he had made himself look like a Georgia "cracker" because he was afraid that the man in blue would recognize him—and that he could explain at once or take me right back to Fitzgerald.

He became serious immediately.

"That was one of those bally Englishmen who are trying to beat me out of my inheritance," he said. "Now, that's all the explanation I can give you just now, little girl."

"Very well, then we are going right back to Fitzgerald," I insisted.

Next morning after the trunks were packed and the tickets bought he seemed worried. At last he told me that a draft on Baring Brothers had not arrived, and on that account he was in temporary financial difficulty in Fitzgerald. He wondered if I could persuade my father to help him out with a loan.

I thought this would be easy to arrange and he seemed relieved.

When father met us at the station he seemed cold and would scarcely speak to Sidney. As soon as I saw him privately he accused my husband of a long series of crooked things in the management of public and private moneys, and flatly refused to loan him a cent. Furthermore, he asked me to leave my husband, whom he called the most daring adventurer who ever visited the South.

My husband denied my father's accusations so earnestly and with such apparent injured innocence that I was ashamed to have repeated them, and sent him to persuade father.

When he returned he had that boyish look again, and shouted:

"Don't unpack—we're off again!"

Off we went. Sidney had $5,000 which he had borrowed from father, as he explained to me. In reality father gave him the money in return for his promise never to return to Georgia again.

Marcella Montfort, after a brief absence in parts unknown, was back again in town, and stood, a vision of gray silk and wrath, on the station platform awaiting us.

I had read a novel about the "evil eye," and her blazing glances directed at Sidney and myself frightened me, though I had no idea of what was wrong.

She watched at first in silence while my husband checked the baggage and bought tickets.

At last, apparently choking with anger, she strode up to him and fairly screamed in his ear:

"So ze partnership of ten years is to be dissolved for thees girl," and she snapped her fingers in my face and broke into French.

So fast and incoherent were her words that my knowledge of French was not sufficient, at that time, to understand her.

At last the train started and she called out to us:

"Wait till ze little American must open ze fingers of ze law when my lord is caught, like Marcella can—zen Marcella laugh."

"Poor Marcella," sighed my husband. "We were indeed partners, but business partners. I am afraid she expected me to marry her, but I never loved her, so how could I?"

"But why did she advise me to marry you and even attend our wedding so cheerfully?" I asked.

"Ah, I hadn't the heart to tell her I loved any one else, and when she suggested that I was only marrying you for your money, I told her 'yes,' and she thought it a good plan. She expected me to get your money into my hands and then desert you for her. Now she knows better and her hope of vengeance lies in marrying your father and causing your disinheritance."

He listened meekly to my lecture in which I told him how despicable such deceit was and how disappointed I was in him.

At last he begged me to stop, saying that he was unworthy of me and that he would return me to my father along with the $5,000, and never bother me again.

Whether it was love for the man or just his influence over me, I don't know, but I could not bear the thought of parting at that time, so we went on. We only stayed two days in Savannah, and proceeded to Atlantic City. Here three weeks went by most joyously, and Mr. Lascelles spent money like water. He had the $5,000 from father and about as much more, which I understood was his draft from England. I worried a little that he should spend his money here and in trips to Washington, Albany and other places, instead of relieving his financial embarrassments in Fitzgerald. Still, I had a taste of real life and the temptation was too strong to just let Sidney take any responsibility there might be.

I received a shock when he registered at the Seaside Hotel, not as Mr. and Mrs. Lascelles, but as M. W. Allen and wife, of Chicago. When the door of our room closed after the bellboy I demanded an explanation.

He looked me in the eyes with the same look that caused cashiers to honor paper they knew nothing about, and said: "Don't suspect—don't worry. Do you want to go back to Fitzgerald?"

Indeed, I didn't want to, and I asked no more; but my conscience had been dealt a hard blow.

At last we grew tired of Atlantic City and took the train to Philadelphia, where we boarded the boat for Boston. Our stay of three days at the Vendome in Boston, during the last of August, was uneventful. F. S. Lancaster was our name after we left Philadelphia.

These changes of name, coupled with the fact pointed out later by the police, that he was without visible means of support, made me very unhappy, and I told my husband so.

To my surprise, he answered: "Very well, my little girl. I will settle right down to work. I have just been offered the position of general agent of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company, of Westfield, and will open offices in Worcester, Mass. Get the trunks packed—we're off to-day."

CHAPTER III.

The Worcester-Yukon Mining Swindle.

Once arrived in Worcester, my husband was all business and seriousness. We took a suite of rooms at the Bay State House and opened offices in the State Mutual Building. I saw little to interest me in Worcester. I volunteered to help my husband in his office work.

When Sunday arrived he led me to our private pew at All Saints' Episcopal Church. He worked hard and so did I, but from the correspondence I could see that it was all going for nothing. We were not doing any business.

The Saturday night after the second week's hard work my husband was a little feverish when he went to bed, and during the night talked in his sleep.

"Don't tell my wife about those checks," he said. "I don't care so much about the Fitzgerald checks as the Atlantic City ones. Whenever I settle down to honest work I get in trouble."

I didn't wake my husband. In the morning he looked so worried and unhappy that I put off the unpleasant scene which an accusation must bring.

"Never mind the insurance business," said Sidney, cheerily, Monday morning when I reached the office. "There is nothing in it, and I have something better."

He handed me the prospectus of the "Worcester-Yukon Mining, Development and Investment Company. Capital, $250,000, in 50,000 shares; $5 per share, non-assessable."

I read with interest that:

"On March the 1st, 1898, this company intends to send from Seattle its own steamer, with fifty men, under the direction of competent mining engineers.

"The party will be composed entirely of New England men, and each and every one must be a stockholder in the company. * * * Two-thirds of the net earnings will the company and one-third to the members expedition.

"Reports of progress and shipments of go be made monthly direct to Worcester, and dends will be paid to the stockholders as shipment is received.

"Applications for stock can be made per or by mail to the officers of the company 716 and 717 State Mutual Building, Wor Mass."

"I am the company," said Sidney, g when I looked up.

I mailed copies of the prospectus to thousand people, while Sidney interviewed personally. Very few responses came fro mail, but my husband had great success personal interviews. Money was turned ov

Before we moved in fate, in the form of Jack Mullen, intervened. Jack Mullen was one of the principals in the first prize fight ever witnessed in Fitzgerald. Mullen recognized my husband in a cafe in Worcester, and in return for a $500 loan was considerate enough not to inform the police.

Sidney came to me with the information, and said he must leave at once, as Mullen was "hitting it up" in the bars, and would soon be in a garrulous condition.

This was the 19th of September. All big things, good or bad, seem to happen to me on or about that day of the month.

"What am I to do?" I gasped, as he put on his hat and looked at his watch.

"Don't say a word and get your trunks ready. 'll send you a telegram which will give you an xcuse for leaving."

One can imagine my feelings that night, alone o a strange city, with only $12 and a big hotel bill to pay—perhaps deserted by a husband whom now knew to be all that my father had said of him.

In the morning I had little desire for breakfast, but I went in from force of habit. I was scarcely seated when a messenger brought me a telegram. It read:

"Father very sick. Meet me at R. R. station Hartford, next train. J. M."

"J. M." proved to be Mullen, who met me in the Hartford station with red eyes and uncertain gait, but with $100 from Sidney, together with instructions to meet him at an entrance to Jordan & Marsh's store in Boston at 2 p. m. the next day.

I spent the night at Hartford and took an early train. My husband found me even before I had reached the rendezvous. He hustled me into a carriage, explaining that we had just time to catch the train to Buffalo.

On the train we had it out, and the result of several hours of talk and tears was an agreement that I would stand by him till he got out of this trouble, but that as soon as he was free from pursuit he would settle down to an honest living and pay up all he owed.

CHAPTER IV.

Disguised in Boy's Clothing.

I took rooms at the Iroquois Hotel and Mr. Lascelles at another, because he feared our identification if seen together. On the third day a telegram reached him under his assumed name of C. H. Davis. It was from "J. M." and warned him the Boston police knew we had bought tickets for Albany.

"That means moving to-night," he said. Then he asked what my various measurements were and made a note of them.

"I am thinking about a disguise for you," he explained simply.

I bought the tickets and had the baggage put aboard the steamer for Cleveland, while Sidney looked after other matters. I met him at my room. He had a large bundle which he proceeded to unfold.

It was a complete suit of boy's clothes.

I burst into tears, but put them on, the boy's clothes, at his earnest request to "just get into them anyhow."

I could not help laughing at myself in the glass.

I made a perfect boy. My hair was curled behind at that time, and with the large felt hat my husband had bought, I had the appearance of a youth with short, curly hair.

The thing was so funny that I was soon good-natured and ready to try my disguise in the streets. First, however, Sidney made me practice walking a little. After I had learned a shuffling gait sufficiently unladylike to suit him he made me locate my various pockets and took away my handkerchief because it was too small.

Finally my better half handed me a little air rifle, picked up the two dress suit cases filled with the clothes I had taken off, and we started. Nobody took any interest in us and we entered our stateroom unnoticed. It was still dark when we changed boats at Cleveland, and it was dark again when we stepped ashore at Detroit.

All the baggage except the suit cases was sent to one hotel, while we went to another. Mr. Lascelles registered us as Ephraim Ferguson and son. Twenty minutes after we had been shown to our room I had changed my clothes and was walking out of a side door with Sidney.

Our next steps were of little interest until my husband surprised me with the information that he had been made general manager of the Minneapolis Consumption Cure. I was then dressing in short skirts as his daughter. I didn't like the idea of masquerading as a little girl all Winter and persuaded him to look for something in another town where I could appear as a grown-up. He consented, and, as usual, told me to pack the trunks.

As I packed I noticed my husband was dressing himself in his Prince Albert with the greatest care. He made a selection of collars with much deliberation, warmed and put on a new pair of patent leathers, spent a long time in arranging his necktie, drew a monocle from a case in his pocket and put it on.

From his trunk he produced a dozen or more check books of various sizes and colors, looked them over, selected two and returned the rest.

Standing in front of a tall pier glass, he inserted his monocle and proceeded to mumble to his own image in the glass. I caught a sentence:

"Yes, if the president is not in, the cashier would perhaps do."

"What on earth are you doing, Sid?" I asked.

"Don't bother me," he replied, staring coldly through the monocle. "I have an important engagement shortly, and am—ahem—considering what I shall say."

That important engagement, I learned later, cost a bank, the name of which I have forgotten, just $1,000.

Our next stop was at San Antonio, at the Menger Hotel. For two weeks Sidney was busy somewhere every afternoon, but had little to do but amuse himself and me the rest of the time. We now bore the name of Robert Turnbull. This name was my own selection. On the train Sidney asked me to pick a nice name, and I chose Susan Turnbull, from Gunter's novel, which I was reading.

Our stay at San Antonio was cut short by the discovery that my husband was, in addition to his other accomplishments, an inveterate gambler. He had spent all the afternoon in the poolrooms, and was almost "broke" when I learned of it.

"I boarded the steamer disguised as a boy."

I told him to choose between me and gambling, and in a most tragic way, with his hand on his heart, he vowed never to play the horses again—a promise he missed but few opportunities of breaking.

We moved down to Laredo, on the Mexican boundary, which he recommended for two reasons.

"I like bullfights and boundaries," said he.

At Laredo we arrived almost without a cent. This caused my husband again to dress with great care. He omitted the monocle this time, substituted a silk for a linen handkerchief and wore a gorgeous display of false jewelry.

Again there was a rehearsal and an important engagement.

"Now, what is up?" I asked.

"I regret to state that a thorough search of my person reveals the embarrassing fact that we are at present without funds," said he, lighting his cigar. "I am about to negotiate a small loan."

"But you don't know anybody here," I ventured.

"So much the better, my dear." With that he bowed himself out.

CHAPTER V.

Gambling and Disaster at Mexico City.

In reality, he cashed a worthless check for $200 and hurried away with me to Monterey, Mexico, where his first act was to borrow enough from an utter stranger to make his Laredo check good and take us to Mexico City.

Kind friends of the hour introduced my husband to the Jockey and the American clubs at Mexico City, where he began his gambling again. He had wonderful luck in the beginning. The first day he dropped a roll of $500 into my lap.

"I forgot myself and gambled a little at the American Club," he said, shamefacedly. "However, if you feel very angry I will return the money and never go there again."

Well, I didn't scold very hard.

The next night, when he appeared with another "roll" and the same apology, I am afraid I didn't scold at all. This good luck continued, with a few bad days, for two weeks. Then suddenly it turned.

In one day he lost $7,000 of his own money, borrowed $5,000 more from Manuel Sanz, proprietor of our hotel. This money followed the first at the Jockey Club.

Will Crittenden, son of a former United States Minister to Mexico, was induced to lend $200, and others contributed a few hundreds more. But his bad run kept on.

At last he returned to the Hotel Sanz and explained the situation to me. It was no time to lecture him—the question was how to get out of our difficulties.

Sidney said it had been invariably the case that his runs of hard luck always changed to the opposite if he could only keep going. He cited a number of instances and fairly persuaded me that if he could only obtain a few thousands more he would win everything back, pay his debts, quit gambling and go to work.

There was no legitimate way by which we could raise money that next day. Sidney sat in deep thought a while.

Finally he announced that he had a plan.

"I am going to Parker H. Sercombe, president of the American Surety Bank, and cash a check for $2,000."

"You can't," said I. "Sercombe is no fool, and he knows nothing about you."

"That he knows nothing about me is in my favor," he replied. "I will tell him about my plantation in Georgia; of the hundreds of darkies I have working for me; of the turpentine camps and the acres of cotton and of great, clean pines.

"I have spent money and gambled like a rich man, and why shouldn't he believe it?"

I watched him dress for the occasion with misgivings. I did not know whether to hope he would or would not get the money.

His last words were:

"I'll land the coin sure, don't fear, and I'll telephone you from the club how things are going."

He called me up late in the afternoon, said he had succeeded and that he knew his luck was changing, because, though he was not winning, still he wasn't losing at all.

The next day he won $1,000 and said, "I told you so. Long before the check is returned protested I will have money enough to settle the matter and all my other debts."

The day following was the fateful nineteenth of December, though we thought nothing of the date. Sidney expected to win from $4,000 to $7,000. Instead he lost every cent, and information reached Mr. Sercombe in some way that the Chemical National Bank of New York held no funds of my husband's.

Sidney was arrested, and I could see nothing ahead but the Mexico City jail, called "Belem" (Mexican for hell).

But, no. Sidney was full of plausible excuses. Sercombe was informed that my father was a wealthy property owner in the States of Rhode Island and Georgia, and that if nothing was said he would make everything good.

Mr. Sercombe believed this, and it was indeed true that my father held property in those States.

CHAPTER VI.

Borrow from Peter and Pay Paul; It Helps Your Credit.

I promised to write father at once. In the meanwhile Sidney was held on his own recognizance.

I knew that writing to father would bring no results, but would have done so had not Sidney devised a little scheme of his own.

He forged a letter purporting to be from my father, which stated that he was willing and able to settle for all Sidney's debts, but that his money was all tied up at that moment. However, if Mr. Sercombe would give him a little time he would settle.

This letter Sidney enclosed in another and mailed to a friend in Fitzgerald with the request to drop it into the mail. In course of time Mr. Sercombe received the letter and was so well satisfied that he loaned Sidney $200 more. We were preparing to get out of Mexico when I got word that my father had died suddenly.

The news worried Mr. Sercombe and he kept a closer watch on Sidney, who talked him into advancing $200 more to send me to Georgia to settle up the estate.

The executors refused to help Sidney out, and would only allow me $100 a month until I was of age, which would not be for nearly a year.

Back to Mexico City I went and told Sercombe, Sanz and the other creditors that they could receive nothing for a year. I signed a variety of papers and every one was satisfied. Things looked pleasant and we began to plan how to run across the frontier when another creditor started trouble.

In Mexico the law at that time permitted imprisonment for debt, and J. O. Rice, one of the higher officials of the Cuernavaca and Pacific Railway, insisted on putting Sidney in jail for a small matter of $800 which my husband had borrowed. Rice was one of the few men whom Sidney could not influence.

My husband would talk in his most persuasive way, with tears in his eyes, and so convincingly that others who heard would put in a good word for him, and at the end Rice would say:

"Get out—you're a crook and I'm going to put you in Belem."

But he didn't, for Sidney's smooth tongue prevailed upon Mr. Sercombe to take up Rice's notes. My husband said that if he went to jail nobody would be paid. The banker was frightened into buying Rice out.

For just about a year my husband and I lived in or near Mexico City. He engaged in business, made and lost money, gambled and won and lost, and borrowed in all $18,000.

CHAPTER VII.

How We Escaped from the Mexicans.

George Drake, a wealthy carriage builder of Philadelphia, and Colonel Hampson, owner of the Cuernavaca and Pacific Railway, were the chief creditors.

December 13 arrived, and with it came the determination to make a try for the "States."

In compliance with the law, my husband obtained a signed permission from his regiment of creditors to spend two weeks sightseeing in Mexico. At the end of that time, he assured every one, my estate would be settled and all his debts paid.

There arose, as usual, the difficulty of obtaining money. This time I had to help my husband out, and visited Mr. Sercombe in his private office at the bank. I asked for $100. He flatly refused.

Then I pointed out that as any settling of Sidney's debts would have to come from my estate, it would not be good policy to refuse such a small loan. The banker saw the point and gave me the $100.

Lying on Mr. Sercombe's desk was my husband's gold watch and chain, which the banker held as security for some small part of his loans.

I picked it up and asked him to let me have it. As I expected, he refused. But I sat right there, holding on to it and arguing in the hope he would let me have it to get rid of me.

At last he said: "Well, if you can give me a real good reason why it is to my advantage to let you have that security it's yours."

"Certainly," I answered. "I would give it to Sidney as a Christmas present and save $100 toward paying the debts."

"Well, then, get out of here before you ask for the bank itself, and tell that husband of yours that 'Belem' is waiting for him if he doesn't square up in the next two weeks."

Then he renewed an offer he had made to me several times before and which I as often refused.

A Spanish widow, thirty-eight years old, but quite handsome, had set her heart on my husband. Her name was Inez Varero, and she was very wealthy. The more my husband became involved in debt and violation of the law the more pleased she was, for she saw a way of getting him in her power and holding him.

When things looked at their blackest she called on me and proposed to settle all my husband's debts and in addition make me a present of $10,000 if I would return to the United States and leave him to her.

I refused indignantly, though Sidney advised me to accept, saying cheerfully that he would soon follow with the rest of the woman's money.

I would have nothing to do with such deals, however, and ordered the woman never to speak to either of us again. She then went to Mr. Sercombe and offered to settle all debts and give him $3,000 in addition if he would induce me to surrender Sidney. Sercombe never missed an opportunity of trying to make this deal. It was hopes of this arrangement that kept him cheerful and confident up to the day we escaped.

That night we spent in Queretaro. Sidney thought it would be an evidence of good faith to wire Sercombe of our whereabouts and that we were bound for San Luis Potosi, where we arrived two days later.

Sidney's first act at San Luis was to send a second message of our arrival and intention of spending a week in town. Now was the time to make a dash for freedom.

But Laredo, on the boundary, was still far away and we had used up the $100 I had borrowed.

This time we took a room at a hotel just long enough for me to change into my boy's clothes, which I still carried with me. I now wore a wig, bought six months before by my thoughtful husband when he observed that I had changed the style of wearing my hair.

With this wig I made fully as good a boy as before. My husband used his persuasive powers on the American consul, but secured only $40, and left as security both his watch and mine. This money was barely enough to bring us to Laredo.

At the little Mexican fonda in Laredo, near the railroad station, I hastily changed myself from a small boy with a half-eaten apple, which I carried in place of the air rifle, to a woman.

My husband pleaded, promised and threatened for two hours and a half in his efforts to secure tickets to San Antonio. At last the ticket agent was bluffed into giving us tickets in the belief that my husband's pocketbook and letter of credit had been stolen. However, he attached our baggage.

Once in San Antonio, my husband felt quite free and I was no longer afraid to cash a check on my bank, the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company. I drew $500, sent for our watches, paid the lien on our baggage and went to Fitzgerald, Georgia, to settle the estate, while Sidney waited for me in Nashville, Tenn.

I now felt sure that we were about to settle down into the uneventful life which a palmist had once promised me. It was indeed unfortunate for me that I did not know what appalling things the future held.

CHAPTER VIII.

Our Golden Year in Europe.

It took only a few days to wind up my affairs in the State of Georgia. My old friends and acquaintances viewed me with various degrees of hostility and curiosity.

Marcella Montfort had indeed tried, as Sidney prophesied, to marry my father. His sudden death upset her hopes and she left town, never to be heard from again.

I met my husband at Nashville and went with him to New York City, where he remained two days while I settled the matters of my father's estate in Rhode Island. Mr. Lascelles knew too many people in New York, and had grown very uneasy while I was away. On my return I deposited $7,000 in bonds in the Garfield Safety Deposit Company of New York City and bought a letter of credit on Lazarre Bros., of Paris, for $4,000. Then we took the first steamer to Europe—La Champagne—reaching Havre January 25, 1898.

I wanted to settle up Mr. Lascelle's debts in Mexico, but my husband thought I had better save the money for him to start in business in Europe. Up to his dying day he professed the belief that some day he would be a multi-millionaire.

"When that day comes, Clara," he said over and over again, "I want you to go around over my crooked trail and settle up all my debts. It will take a million or more to square things, and you will have to circle the globe to do it. Then I will live in the open and be as much respected as any capitalist.

"When I die the minister of our church will tell the weeping congregation of the town's great loss. He will say, 'another great and noble soul gone to rest.' All the papers will regret that my influence is no more. I can see the headline in the local Fitzgerald papers:

"'ANOTHER GOOD MAN GONE.'"

Mr. Lascelles took charge of the letter of credit. Instead of gambling, he played the stock market and did remarkably well. In Paris we spent a month doing little else than buying. Sidney made money fast, and seemed to spend it all on me. He bought me $12,000 worth of jewelry, but my chief delight was in the clothes I bought.

Of course, we took in the Carnival at Nice. My husband was most anxious to see it. When my husband was very anxious for a harmless affair I always found later that he had, as the lawyers say, an ulterior purpose. In this case it was Monte Carlo nice and handy.

Mr. Lascelles spent his time at Monte Carlo, playing baccarat and winning from three to five thousand dollars at a sitting and losing but slightly on his bad days.

I tried my hand for the first time at the "Circle" at Nice, playing Trent et Quarante. I won twenty-nine times running on the red and made $100. If I had been a little less conservative I might have equalled Sidney's records.

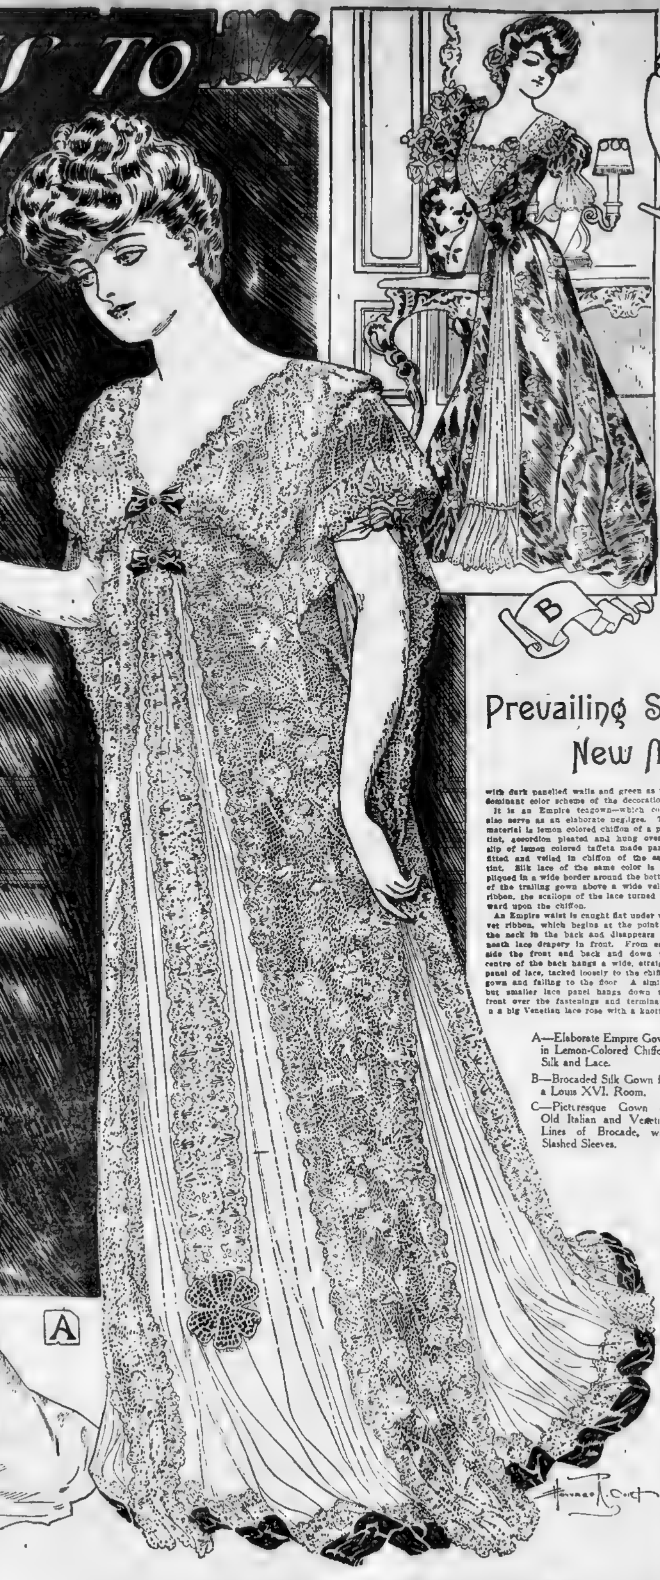
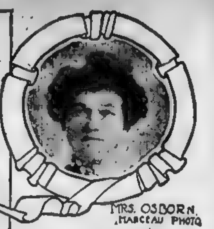
GOWNS TO MATCH ROOMS

BY

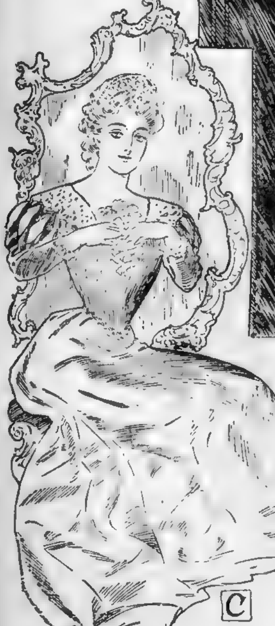
MRS. OSBORN

CREATOR OF FASHIONS FOR THE FASHIONABLE WOMEN OF AMERICA.





MRS. OSBORN, MARCEAU PHOTO



GOWNS to Match the Period and Color Schemes of Rooms in Which They Will Be Worn.

Long Flowing Lines Prevailing Style in the New Mode of Dress.

A VERY pretty fad which has been adopted abroad is taking some hold in America, that of dressing to harmonize with the period of the room in which the gown is principally to be worn.

In carrying out this charming fancy a woman becomes a picture and her room the setting for it, the effect being something so fascinating to the observer that whether the woman be old or young, handsome or the contrary, she gives the impression of beauty and harmony to the beholder.

Every year we Americans have grown more and more into artistic perception and feeling. We understand art better and appreciate it more, and this evolution in the art of dressing is one example of it.

What could be more attractive in a room furnished in Empire style than to see a woman gowned in the flowing robes of Josephine's time as a last touch of artistic completeness?

Such a teagown is shown in Figure A, not in Empire decorated surroundings but against the dark panelling of a library, where it is also extremely effective. A quiet cup of tea in a library poured by a woman in a picturesque gown has about it an aroma of tranquility and an inspiration to enjoyment that tea under other conditions cannot achieve.

Women make a study of old pictures, and from these evolve some of the quaintest Dutch gowns, to wear in Dutch rooms; old English costumes and stately garments [illegible]ned after those worn centuries ago [illegible]al women of Rome and Florence, Paris and Madrid.

The costumes are not always made with too exact harmony with facts; for instance, a Spanish gown looks well in either a Moorish or old English setting; the Italian gowns are worn with a Venetian surrounding. Oriental kimonos and elaborate teagowns are worn in rooms that are not always furnished in strictly Oriental style, but which are sufficiently decorated after the Chinese and Japanese type to prove harmonious.

More rooms of state are furnished in French materials and articles than in those of any other sort—at least, in large cities—and, therefore, French gowns of Pompadour brocades, carrying out the dress worn in the reigns of Louis XIV., XV., XVI and XVIII are particularly in evidence in functions given in such surroundings.

Empire gowns will not confine themselves to any style of room, since they will be so generally worn in the house, but they may be given a touch in the way of material or drapery to make them harmonize with their surroundings.

Americans are beginning to understand something of the Japanese art in dress, which has quietly toned walls as a background for the gorgeous raiment of the women who inhabit them. Not only do women dress according to the period of their home decorations, but to the color scheme of the rooms in which the gown will principally be worn.

The gown in Figure A is built along such lines. It is intended to be worn in a room furnished in white and gold, and in one with dark panelled walls and green as the dominant color scheme of the decorations.

It is an Empire teagown—which could also serve as an elaborate negligee. The material is lemon colored chiffon of a pale tint, accordion pleated and hung over a slip of lemon colored taffeta made partly fitted and veiled in chiffon of the same tint. Silk lace of the same color is appliqued in a wide border around the bottom of the trailing gown above a wide velvet ribbon, the scallops of the lace turned upward upon the chiffon.

An Empire waist is caught flat under velvet ribbon, which begins at the point of the neck in the back and disappears beneath lace drapery in front. From each side the front and back and down the centre of the back hangs a wide, straight panel of lace, tacked loosely to the chiffon gown and falling to the floor. A similar but smaller lace panel hangs down the front over the fastenings and terminates in a big Venetian lace rose with a knotted centre. Similar lace flowers are appliqued upon each chiffon panel between the lace panels, and occur a little below the hip on each side, catching the edges of the side panels of lace together. The draped panels are of a wonderful material of silk brocaded flowers upon alternate broad stripes of thick silk and filmy lace, the whole bordered with lace scallops in an irregular pattern.

One of these panel pieces is draped around the shoulders like a berthe, beginning in a point in front and passing over the shoulders, from which they hang in a straight drapery to the hem. Where this berthe passes over the little puffed sleeves the silk lined taffeta sleeves are almost hidden. A piece of lace is set flat in the pointed neck, and around this filmy lace is caught in ripples all around by the application of Venetian lace roses. Two small velvet bows, with jewelled buckles, finish the front of the gown. Similar velvet bows, on a band of shirred chiffon, finish the little sleeves.

At the bottom of the taffeta underslip a number of frills and ruffles of silk and chiffon, one above the other, give the necessary fulness to the bottom of the skirt.

Figure B is a pretty illustration of a gown made to harmonize with a room decorated in the Louis XVI period. It is of flowered silk—but may be of flowered material of any desired sort, made open in front to show a front of lace over silk. This front panel may be made of chiffon, silk, net or any contrasting material of a plain sort that will combine well with the material of the gown. The pointed bodice and small sleeves of the period are worn, and the gown may be made very rich and stately for a drawing room, or very simply, of wash fabrics, for a morning room, upholstered and hung with flowered cretonnes.

In figure C another period gown is shown. This one is intended for use in a room decorated in Italian or Venetian style. It is of chiffon velvet, with chiffon pulled through the slashed sleeves and a full skirt and fitted, pointed bodice of the time. The material should be a stiff brocaded silk or a brocaded chiffon velvet according to the figure of the wearer. Plain velvet or crepe would be made up in the same way. The pointed neck is draped with lace.

Egyptian costumes are sometimes selected, and the general trend of the day is to have gowns with long, flowing lines, and looseness of fit, that will not prove too strong a contrast to the vogue of the day.

Stay at Home

We are trying to tell every boy and girl, every young man and woman, every over-ambitious or too-easily-discouraged man and woman: Stay at Home.

The old "going to the city" spirit has changed for the better and the American people are learning that industrious people win more happiness, health and independence in their own home towns than they can as the hard driven human machines of some great city firm or corporation.

No better chance to earn the most money in the shortest time at the pleasantest occupation has ever been offered than by selling yearly subscriptions to THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL and THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

You can secure a handsome start in life or make a generous living in this way. For besides the large commission paid on every subscription there is a rebate plan which applies to accumulated subscriptions. Besides these there is, each month, a distribution of $5,000 in prizes of $500 and less. And, last and best, there is in effect every quarter of the year a prize fund of at least $40,000.

The Unsweetened FOOD

Why it Makes Healthy, Strong Babies

First place, it's a wheat food.

Why? Ask the Doctor—he will tell you that all the elements needed to make firm, rosy flesh and strong muscles, bones and teeth are locked up in a kernel of wheat and in no other grain. And there's no sugar in it. Why? Because sweet foods make flabby fat and not solid flesh.

And there's no pepsin or other medicine in it. Why? Because none is necessary. Its own food properties make it easily digestible. Babies so weak that they can't retain or digest anything else thrive on it. It helps and strengthens the little stomach not only for the time being, but for all time. In short, it's an all-round, natural food—one that all babies need and crave—and nothing else.

Try it for sick babies—it will make them well. Use it for well babies, big or little—just see how they will grow! How sturdy, strong and happy it will make them, what appetites they will have, how sound they will sleep.

How You May Be Guarded Against Marrying the Wrong Man.

By the Rev. Madison C. Peters.

There Is No Insurance Policy of Happiness Furnished at the Marriage Altar

"Any woman of fair looks and ordinary sense can marry some sort of a man. If you take a husband just for the sake of having one, you will find him a mortifying trophy and an inconvenient property."

MORE than 500,000 divorces have been granted in the United States in twenty years, and only 214,841 in all Europe during the same time, with 380,000,000 population against our 80,000,000; so that it does seem that there must be many, not only unguided, but misguided, marriages.

Still it does not follow that from a domestic viewpoint we are below the moral standard of European communities. The best men in the world are in America. Nowhere do men toil, purpose and plan for the happiness of wife and children like American men. Nowhere is woman enthroned as in America.

The average European woman thinks that man may impose upon her by divine right. In many parts of Europe to-day women are nothing more than beasts of burden, and are ruled in the spirit of the Dark Ages. Denied education and completely subordinated to her husband, woman lives in fear of and in subjection to her lord and master.

Our advancing civilization has enlarged and sublimated woman's ideas and, with a better comprehension of her nature and rights, the average American woman would rather make her own way in the world than live a lie with a man for the sake of a home. Still it is undeniably true that we are living in a time of unhappy marriages. And as the woman suffers more than the man when a mistake is made in the selection of a lifetime partner, it is well for us to stop a moment and ask how a woman may guard herself against selecting the wrong man.

If you are looking for an angel you are on a fool's errand. There are none unpledged.

Better to enter the marriage state in the frame of mind of that company of American settlers, who, in naming their town, called it Dictionary, "because," as they said, "that's the only place where prosperity and happiness can always be found."

There is no insurance policy of happiness furnished at the marriage altar.

Not All Roses and Honeymoon.

Marriage is a bitter-sweet, with the sweet predominating if the proper conditions are observed. Married life is not a hill Olympus, wholly clear, without clouds; under any conditions it is not all roses and honeymoon. Thorns will be found concealed beneath the rose leaves, and some bitter ingredients will be mixed up with the sweet ones in the cup of joy.

Any woman of fair looks and ordinary sense can marry some sort of a man. If you take a husband just for the sake of having one, you will find him a mortifying trophy and an inconvenient property.

Nothing causes so many mischievous marriages as making "old maid" a term of reproach. Some of the brightest and most interesting women in every community are so much absorbed in the serious business of life that they regard husbands as altogether unnecessary inconveniences. In such cases singleness is an honorable state and the woman an unappropriated blessing, an unwedded queen.

The Bible says, that "it is not good for a man to be alone." It does not say it is not good for woman to be alone, for God knew many women would be better off alone.

The frogs in Aesop's fable were extremely wise; they had a great mind to some water, but they would not leap into the well because they could not get out again. Look before you leap! If you are determined to try marriage, these things observe with care in the choice of a companion:

Don't look upon matrimony as a mere matter of money. Cupid having grown old, has changed his name to Cupidity. So common is the mercantile estimate of marriage becoming, that I should not be surprised to see the hymeneal market lists chronicled with the prices current on the stock exchange.

If money is your real object, the older and uglier the man is the better, for nothing should come between you and your golden calf.

Better have a fortune in your husband than one with your husband. The poor man should have something besides his poverty to commend him. He should have a position which may reasonably be depended upon to yield a comfortable living.

Don't Be An Old Man's Darling.

What respect can a woman have for a man who is rich in money, but poor in all those elements that make up a man. Ancestry and wealth cannot cover up mental imbecility and moral baseness. Gold cannot buy happiness, position cannot bring it. What is the interest on one million dollars in comparison to dividends drawn from a loyal heart and an educated brain? Not only are the rich of to-day often to-morrow's poor, but the commercial leaders of the next generation will likely be the poor boys of to-day.

Don't marry a man to mend him or reform him. If the man were not deformed he would not need to be reformed. The risks are great enough for any woman, even when she marries a man who does not need reforming.

"The average European woman thinks that man may impose upon her by divine right."

"Father, I would rather have two at twenty-five."

Marry a man nearly your age. A father said to his daughter: "I don't want you to throw yourself away on a foolish young fellow; how would a nice, sober, settled man of fifty suit you?" The daughter very sensibly replied: "Father, I would rather have two at twenty-five."

The marriage of a young girl to an old man is a mockery that blushes to the skies. And yet how many young women are making a business of marriage, perverting and degrading a contract which should of all be the most sacred and dear. Daily we find young women are bartering away their happiness for worldly display.

We put the mark of Cain upon the man who takes a bribe and do not allow the grave to erase the foul blot from his memory. What shall we say of the woman who has her price and turns what is pure and noble away to become the willing victim of an old man who has the money? The legal forms in such a marriage may be complied with and thus seal the lips of criticism, but wife she is not. Promising as the prize may seem, she who marries for money seldom fares well. She finds that a serpent often lies coiled among the orange blossoms.

Marry a gentleman. I use the word in the broader sense —it has no reference to fine raiment and white hands and the veneering of society polish merely—but to those who have noble qualities, however hard their hands and sunbrowned their faces.

Avoid the dandy—dressed up he is like the cinnamon tree, the bark is worth more than the body. Discriminate between show and substance. Be as careful in the choice of a husband as you are in the purchase of a dress. When women look for a dress how they test the strength of the fabric, submit it to the scrutiny of the most competent, and ask almost endless questions about it. They do not trust to appearances. Yet men and women alike risk a life-long happiness upon less actual information of each other's real nature than a good horseman would exact of his carriage horse's pedigree.

Don't be in too tremendous a haste to marry. Happiness in married life is possible only to those who have deliberately chosen each other, not in a momentary passion, but for solid worth. The burden of married life is heavy enough, even under the most favorable conditions, but other things being equal, there is more chance of happiness between persons whose habits and tastes and education would put them somewhere near upon a basis of equality, than between those who are widely separated in social position. One man is not the equal of every other man, any more than one horse is the equal of every other horse. Marry into a family you have long known.

Some of the happiest homes in the world, set up under the red hot anathema of parents, have turned out Edens, but almost invariably clandestine escapades end in unspeakable sorrow or divorce. I like the Jewish way of publishing announcements of engagements in the newspapers. It is a challenge to inquire. But heroes of escapades avoid publicity, because their double-distilled extract of villainy cannot stand the lime-light of publicity.

These matrimonial escapades are to be deplored because they imply a woman's descent from a higher social plane to a lower. A man marrying a woman below him in society may raise her up. She goes to his level.

If there is ever a time in a young woman's life when she should be deliberate and careful, it is when she contemplates giving herself to another. Nobody has your interests more at heart than your parents. You will seldom go wrong if you take their advice and heed their warning.

MADISON C. PETERS.

How You Can Entertain a la Japanese.

Valuable Hints About the Dainty and Interesting New Fad, and How to Prepare the Japanese Menu.

Of Course, No Tables or Chairs Are Seen at the Japanese Luncheon.

UPON the fad for the Japanese room and the Japanese kimono has followed the fancy for Japanese cooking. It is among the smart folk, with money and time to spend for novelties in amusement, a custom to order a Japanese dinner once a week or oftener, and on the tables of the rich it is not uncommon to see a Japanese dish steaming beside a heavier English or American one. And if you are invited to a chafing dish party you are more liable to be served ketchinmushi than Welsh rarebit. You need no longer go to Tokio for a Japanese menu. You may dine on water lily roots or bamboo shoots as deliciously in New York.

If a smart woman in New York wants to give a Japanese dinner or luncheon she may take her friends to one of the new Oriental dining parlors downtown, where the walls are hung with tapestries four hundred years old, and paintings of Japanese court beauties in kimonos stiff with gold embroidery done by famed Tokian artists; where the portieres are changed every month, according to the changes of the climate every thirty days, as is the custom in the Island Kingdom. Or, if she wishes, she may have the dinner served by Japanese in her own home. Or, better still, may learn how to cook the dishes of the Flowery Kingdom and train her chef to prepare them, and so give a Tokian dinner without outside aid.

Even the Lemon Slices Are Scalded for Somen Soup.

Not only are Japanese dishes served to guests in Japanese rooms, but eating in the Japanese manner and seated as the little Oriental women pose themselves at their repasts, are the very latest and smartest innovations among hostesses who are always on the look-out for some entirely new way to surprise and entertain their friends.

Everything is entirely Japanese with the exception of the guests and their garb. The dainty little invitations are in some novel device or other which is distinctively Celestial. The guests are received by the gracious hostess in thoroughly American fashion, but upon being ushered into the room where the dainty feast is to be served the manners of the Occident are forgotten.

An attractive Japanese rug covers the floor. Japanese pictures depend from the walls. Japanese curtains conceal the doors and elaborately painted Japanese screens complete the decorations. There is no table, no chairs, nothing of the sort. Instead arranged in a semi-circle, are several cushions, and in front of them are odd little stools upon which are placed dainty and delightful Japanese teacups, saucers and dishes.

The hostess and each of her guests sink upon their knees in the exactly proper Japanese fashion on the cushions, and then the novel feast begins. Much merriment is always the result. No matter how the unaccustomed crouching fatigues the knees, it is not Japanese etiquette to change the pose.

Every Japanese repast begins and ends with tea. Tea is served throughout the meal, and throughout the day. Japanese ladies drink from ten to twenty cups of it a day, and yet they are the most placid women in the world. In the boudoirs of Tokio nerves are unknown. That is because the tea is brewed in a way to make it harmless to feminine nerves. Served in a tiny tinted bowl, small as an eggshell, it is the color of pale lemon juice, and tastes like water into which has been dropped a tiny drop of some delicate indescribable essence. Japanese tea, robbed of all menace to the nerves, is made thus:

The Way They Brew Their Tea

Two teaspoonfuls of fresh green tea are measured carefully into a china pot that holds exactly one pint, for the women of Tokio are mathematically exact in their tea brewing. The teapot must be thoroughly dry and the tea may not be measured into a spoon the least moist. The slightest carelessness would mar the exquisite and elusive flavor which the small brown women prize as they do the fragrance of the cherry blossoms of the island. The two teaspoonfuls of dry tea in the dry teapot, a pint of boiling water is poured over it and the heavy lid carefully replaced and jealously guarded. A hasty or inquisitive lifting of the lid and the delicate aroma would escape. Thirty seconds should elapse before the tea is drawn, and then it is poured into a large bowl. All the water in the teapot is thus drained out, but none has been served.

A Dainty Japanese Luncheon Can Easily Be Prepared in a Chafing Dish.

"The first pouring is the fragrance," explains the tea server, so it is allowed to stand and give forth perfume, serving the same purpose as the American Beauty rose in its vase on the table. Again the pot is filled. Again there is a wait of thirty seconds. Again is the water poured into a large bowl as mere preparatory waste.

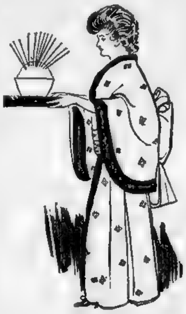
"The second pouring is bitter," says the Japanese tea server. A third time is the teapot filled, a third time do we wait exactly thirty seconds. Then is the pale yellow liquid served in the tiny cups, and those who have never liked tea as it is drunk in the United States sip it and say, "Ah! delicious." Many do not like tea as it is made in America. Every one who tastes the Japanese beverage enjoys it. The difference lies in the choice of fresh green tea, brought to this country loosely in sealed cylinder shaped boxes, and in the manner of the making.

Even in the pouring is the Japanese server mathematically correct. He does not pour a cup for Mrs. Brown, another for Mrs. Smith, and continue until Mrs. Jones's portion is that nearest the leaves and so the strongest. Each cup is a quarter filled, then the small teapot hovers over the cups again, distributing its contents impartially, and the cups are another quarter filled. Then a third time, and a fourth, the tea is poured, and the cups finally filled.

Tea is the first course, soup the second, of a Japanese dinner. Somen soup is the favorite. In preparing it the cook makes an appeal to the eye as well as the stomach. In the island country it is called "frost water," and brought on in a thin, hand-painted bowl. It carries out the Japanese idea of a picture. The color scheme includes the red of the lobster, the green of spinach, the white of a shred like macaroni, and the yellow of a lemon rind. The lobster ingredients of the soup have all been cooked separately. The lobster has been steamed for a half hour alone. The macaroni has been cooked until soft, yet keeping its delicate form. The spinach has been just steeped in hot water, leaving it still of fresh and feathery greenness. Even the lemon slices have been scalded. Carefully then in each individual bowl the bit of lobster has been placed. Then next it the spinach. Then a bit of the macaroni, and out of the tuft of spinach peeps the lemon rind. That done, the boiling water is poured over them and the bowl covered with a plate. Thus the Japanese national dish, the favorite somen, is brought to the table and placed before each guest.

The teapot has not been removed. Nor the soup. That is because the etiquette of Japanese dining demands that all the dishes be left on the table, so that the guest may return to any of them if his fancy prompts.

After the soup is served the fish, and with it a bowl of rice, both with chop sticks. The rice is brought on in a large wooden vessel, covered casklike, with a heavy brass-bound lid. In this the rice is kept hot, without any artificial heat, for three hours, or as long as the banquetters choose to stay at the board, for rice, like tea, is a running obligato of the meal. Rice is rinsed carefully through cold water three times, then boiled continuously in the same water until done. The Japanese argue that the American cook who pours the water off boiling rice and renews it robs the cereal of its strength and finest flavor. The rice is lifted into the individual bowls with a large wooden spoon, and the wooden case closed, to await your order for more.



The Rice Is Served with Chopsticks.

Ketchinmushi (steamed stuffed fish) is the favorite dish of Japan. Any fish caught in American waters may be so prepared. But it is daintiest if small. For a fish of average size, one weighing from one and a half to two pounds, use:

Two eggs.
One tablespoonful raw carrots.
One-half tablespoonful dried seaweeds and
One-half teaspoonful of water lily roots.

The carrots should be peeled and scraped. The eggs boiled for three minutes. The dried seaweed and the roots of water lilies soaked until pliable with a fork. These are then chopped in a wooden bowl, and the fish stuffed with the mixture. The fish is steamed for fifteen minutes, or longer, if necessary.

Okonomona salad is brought on with the third course and remains with the rice and tea and cooling fish on the table until the meal is finished. On one side of the small plate is a spoonful of coarse white cabbage that has been soaked in brine for a day or ten days to taste. On the other, for the Japanese think an actual mixture of foods before the eye is vulgar, are slices of preserved melon. Or the salad may be hayashi curi (Japanese cucumber) cut in thin slices lengthwise and dressed with a mixture of vinegar, shoi, which is a strong, dark extract of beans, rice, oats and wheat, tasting like some of the English dressings, salt and sugar, the ingredients used in proportion to suit the palate.

The Hash Unhashed.

Kuchitori would in America be called salmagundi, but it is a hash unhashed. It is composed of beans, lobster and hatsu (water plant roots), in these quantities:

Half pint beans,
One lobster,
Two ounces water roots.

Each of the ingredients must be cooked separately. The hatsu are cleaned by rinsing through water several times until thoroughly cleansed, then boiled until of a consistency that they can be sliced. Thereafter they must be soaked for two or three days in a jar filled with vinegar into which salt and pepper may be sprinkled to taste. But the Japanese uses little pepper.

The beans having been cleaned and soaked are cooked in separate vessels, half of them boiled for two hours, the others an hour and a half. Those that have been cooked two hours are then mashed into a pulp, and the pulp mixed with those beans which had been cooked the lesser time. The device is purely decorative, for beans which have been mashed are more palatable, but those cooked not too long to preserve their form and outline are of more attractive appearance. A pinch of mustard and two tablespoonfuls of sugar are added and stirred thoroughly into the beans with a wooden spoon. The beans are placed in a mold that gives them the form of ice cream bricks. Placed upon a long narrow individual plate, the brick of beans supported on one side by the delicate white hatsu, sliced thin as possible, and on the other by the vivid scarlet of a broiled lobster claw, the dish is what the Japanese design all their dishes to be, equally pleasing to eye and stomach.

For dessert there are no dyspepsia begetting pastries, nor digestion shocking ices. A deep bowl contains oranges, cut in thick, horizontal slices, from which the skin may be peeled by one deft movement. There is more tea if you wish it, and so the Japanese dinner, the simplest dishes of which may be cooked in a chafing dish, is done.

Why It Is Now Correct in Smart Society to "Make Up."

of ordinary tin make-up boxes to contain pencils and rouge, many of the swell set have ordered silver cases and boxes—monogrammed and supplied with special trays and drawers for special make-up needs. These they display quite as openly as the court beauties of the day of Louis XVI displayed the boxes of little black patches that they used to heighten the effect of their whitened faces.

After all, painting seems to be only a matter of fashion. Sleeves are smaller, skirts are fuller, and to paint is a la mode. Fashion has approved it just as markedly as in past years it condemned it as vulgar and declared its only legitimate service to be behind the footlights.

During the present opera season the fact that this fashion had arrived was evident in every box. A natural complexion was a rarity. Nature assisted was everywhere.

Occasionally one saw a young girl with a color that had not been bought in a jar or a little round box. But in most cases the daylight revealed hints that were unmistakable of cosmetics. Sometimes it was a soupçon admirably done, again it was overdone and showed disagreeably. [illegible] since everyone of the so-called best set does it more or less, one may no longer [illegible] vulgar or common.

"The women of New York and Newport [illegible] and they paint admirably," says Dr. Calssarato, the famous expert on all [illegible] of beauty. "[illegible] increase here in the art of make up in the last year has amazed me," he declared the other day in speaking of the [illegible] women of the most fashionable set. "In looking about me I scarcely see [illegible] women who do not use artifice to [illegible] defects. When it is badly done [illegible]. When it is skilfully done it [illegible] be detected. But to do it [illegible] is an art. I have many pupils in this art. They come to me to learn how to make up properly."

These truths and many others she learns from the beauty specialist, who makes it his business, if he is learned in his art, to enhance the beauty of his patient, but never in the daytime, at least, to create it.

"Oh, there is a great difference," said Dr. Calssarato, who, from his long experience as Sarah Bernhardt's specialist and from his wide experience among our American women, is qualified to speak.

The first thing the professors of make up teach is that the face should be thoroughly cleaned with some cold cream or grease. Then it should be wiped off carefully till just a little of the grease is left. Only then should the painting begin. Be careful, above all things, that the grease is put on evenly; otherwise the powder will not be distributed on the face evenly, but will stand out in lumps.

Powder the face thoroughly after you have applied the cold cream. The best thing to put the powder on with is a bit of absorbent cotton, which you yourself can make into a soft, round ball.

Be very careful with your rouge. Everything depends upon the way it is put on. As a general rule remember that white brings out the features and red loosens them.

"Now, then," he says, "run your color up [illegible] the eyes just a little, then graduate it off toward the ears. Very little—yes, so, that is enough. Study the effect for yourself so that you may use the same amount next time. Now dust the eyebrows off carefully to rid them of all powder, take a small brush, outline them faintly, faintly.

"Be very careful how you paint your eyes. The least bit too much of Arabian kohl will make you look common. If you use any let it be as little as possible; just a line very faint under the eyes may be permitted.

"Now the lips—so! No, no. I would not curve them up. It is characteristic of you to have a slightly drooping mouth. Keep that characteristic. It goes with your face. Do not try to correct nature; merely supplement it. That should be the first lesson for a street make-up.

"Pallor," says the professor on occasions, "is very interesting in some women if they have regular features and dark eyes. It is indeed not to be corrected. Paint the lips red if they need it, so as not to look unhealthy, and leave the cheeks pale."

So the lessons go and the art of painting grows with them. To rouge seems to be considered as necessary as to powder, and not a whit more vulgar. It is fashion's very latest fad, and gives every evidence of having come to stay.

Answers to the Hippo and Fish Puzzles, by Sam Loyd.

A GREAT many of our young puzzlists have written to the Puzzle Editor during the past few days claiming that they had solved the Mrs. Hippopotamus puzzle which appeared last Sunday in six moves. A few others showed how it could be done in five moves. Not one answer was received showing the correct solution in four moves.

The correct answer, which will be best understood if you first draw two parallel lines on a piece of paper and mark them off into 12 squares, numbered from 1 to 12. Now place four buttons to represent the little bears in squares 4, 6, 8 and 10, and four other buttons of a different color to represent the little giraffes in squares 3, 5, 7 and 9.

First move—4 and 5 to 11 and 12.
Second move—7 and 8 to 4 and 5.
Third move—10 and 11 to 7 and 8.
Fourth move—3 and 4 to 10 and 11.

That will give you the desired result, all in four moves. The four bears are side by side and so are the four giraffes.

The accompanying diagram shows how the little fishes solved the funny net puzzle, which also appeared last Sunday. The dotted line shows where they swam and how they bit their way out of the net. Count the number of strands severed and you will see that the fishes were able to escape from the net in twelve cuts.

FINDING PIRATES' GOLD ON TROPICAL TREASURE ISLAND

How the Secret Cave on Cocos Island, Where Buccaneers Hid Millions in Gold, Silver and Precious Stones Seventy Years Ago, Was at Last Discovered.

"They spent some hours in vain digging."

THIS is the true story of the real "Treasure Island." If Robert Louis Stevenson were alive to tell it, you would find it fascinating—no boy, with a boy's natural, healthy love of adventure, could afford to miss it.

Think of gold, silver and jewels enough to make eleven sizeable boat loads, taken from the banks and the altars of Catholic churches of the Peruvians when their land flowed with the blood of a revolution in 1839, and buried on a lonely little island out in the Pacific Ocean.

Then remember that that same little island had been for nearly a century the secret storage place for the booty of the most successful pirates that ever harassed the seas, and who had been captured and hanged or exiled without revealing the exact spot where their treasure lay hidden.

Think of these two great stores of imperishable treasure, which none of the many men who have gathered together every scrap of evidence about them estimate at less than one hundred million dollars in present value, still buried on that little island—for the one searcher who ever found it, and carried away all his pockets would hold, was killed with the secret locked in his dead heart.

And now comes the news from Valparaiso, Chili, that the latest of a score of treasure expeditions which have torn up the earth and rocks of this lonely Pacific island is acting so mysteriously that the city is aflame with excited belief that the great treasure has at last been located.

The vessel which carried this expedition to the island is the British auxiliary schooner yacht Ros Marine. Perhaps you read in the newspapers more than a year ago that when the rich Scotch Earl, Lord Fitzwilliam, landed his party of treasure-seekers on the island, his men were so fiercely attacked by those of the Ros Marine, owned and commanded by Harold W. b. Gray, that they were forced to sail away with one dead and several wounded.

Found by the Ros Marine Party!

Well, in the months that have passed since then nothing was heard of the Ros Marine party until ten days ago, when the yacht put into Valparaiso for coal. It was the mysterious conduct of the crew and the extreme reticence of the captain that have caused the report—perhaps true—that the treasure has been found, and that the Ros Marine had to refill her coal bunkers for the long journey back to England with her $100,000,000 find. But whether this is true we cannot know with certainty until the master of the Ros Marine chooses to tell his story.

The last of the great pirates, who flourished between 1816 and 1820, was a discredited Spanish gentleman known as Benito Bonito. This pirate, following the example of Morgan in the Caribbean, had amassed much treasure, which he had concealed somewhere in the West Indies, when he sailed around Cape Horn, captured the English slaver, the Lightning, compelled all on board to walk the plank except a Frenchman named Chapelle and Thompson, an Englishman, then renamed the ship the Relampago, and, with a prize crew of cutthroats, commenced playing havoc along the Pacific shore of America as far north as Acapulco, Mexico.

It was not long before the Relampago was so loaded with treasure that a secure hiding place for this booty became a necessity. It was said to amount to not less than $11,000,000 in our money. Bonito had already fixed his eyes on Cocos Island, a wild, rocky, uninhabited point of land rising out of the Pacific about five hundred miles off Panama.

To be exact, Cocos lies in latitude 5 degrees 53 minutes north and longitude 86 degrees 59 minutes west. It is not more than five miles at its greatest width, and was difficult of access to sailing vessels because of the prevailing calms of that part of the Pacific.

On Cocos Island the Relampago treasure was buried in three [illegible], but not till there had been a quarrel over the division which strewed the beach with fifteen dead bodies. The remainder of the crew went ashore at Valparaiso for a carouse. They were recognized as pirates, condemned and executed—all but Chapelle and Thompson, who were handed over to the British Government, and Bonito himself, who escaped only to be hanged before he ever saw Cocos Island and his treasure again.

So only two men still lived who knew the exact location of the pirate treasure. Chapelle, the Frenchman, went to Samoa, where he is supposed to have died; with Thompson it was a case of "Twenty Years After," for the year 1839 found him captain of the British brig Mary Dear, floating at anchor in the harbor of Lima, Peru.

Now, when the custodians of this immense treasure saw the British flag fluttering at the peak of the Mary Dear they decided that one of England's ships was a safer place for all this wealth than a fortress which the revolutionists might capture any day. Captain Thompson agreed with them, and as speedily as possible the transfer was made.

Then, as soon as it was dark, Thompson and his crew cut the throats of the guardians of the treasure, slipped their cable and put out to sea. The Mary Dear was a pirate flying the British ensign instead of the "Jolly Roger."

There were pursuers, but the Mary Dear showed them a clean pair of heels, sailing straight for Cocos Island. During the twenty years that had elapsed no detail of that little island coast had escaped Thompson's memory. Here he found himself again with a richer pirate cargo than Bonito had ever collected, and which must be similarly secreted, for otherwise he knew that the war vessels of half a dozen countries would probably be buzzing about the Mary Dear.

On this page you will see a chart of Cocos Island, with two bays indenting the northern coast. Wafer Bay, the more westerly, offers good, deep anchorage, while Chatham is shallow. In the former the Mary Dear was anchored. Part of the spoil in the hold was distributed among the crew. All the remainder was loaded into eleven of the ship's boats and rowed around the headland into Chatham Bay and landed upon the beach.

"Dead Men Tell no Tales."

Thompson's last act on the island was to shoot dead the two beside himself who were the only witnesses of the burial of the treasure. Returning alone to the Mary Dear, he immediately raised anchor and set sail, but not soon enough to escape the Peruvian gunboat that had followed the Mary Dear from Callao. Thompson cunningly surrendered, doubtless feeling certain that no injury would come to the only person alive who knew the secret storage place of the Peruvian treasure.

For this reason both he and his mate were spared, everyone else aboard the Mary Dear being mercilessly shot or hanged. The Peruvian warship immediately put into Wafer Bay, where Thompson and his mate were landed under an armed escort and ordered to recover the treasure.

But Thompson was a man of resource. He and the mate managed to elude the guard and hide themselves in the undergrowth. Later they escaped into different caves, when squads of sailors landed and poured volleys from their muskets into every thicket on the island. This proceeding lasted for four days. Then the warship drew away, leaving Thompson and the mate marooned.

They escaped starvation by eating berries and the eggs of birds until rescued by a vessel that called at Cocos Island for water. They were supposed to be shipwrecked sailors and were carried to the mainland. The mate was soon to die in Costa Rica of yellow fever; but Thompson, sole possessor of the secret hiding place of the great treasure, was to live many years yet, and his directions for finding the Cocos Island treasure, transmitted at his death, to be the cause of hundreds of thousands of dollars thrown away in vain searching.

In the year 1844 a brig sailing from England home to St. John's, Newfoundland, carried a single passenger, a handsome, middleaged man with an air of deep mystery about him. During the voyage the stranger sought the companionship of a young sailor named Keating, who, finding that the other wished to avoid public places, took him to his own home in St. John's upon their arrival. The stranger paid well for his accommodations, and never went out except after dark. One day he called Keating into his room and said to him:

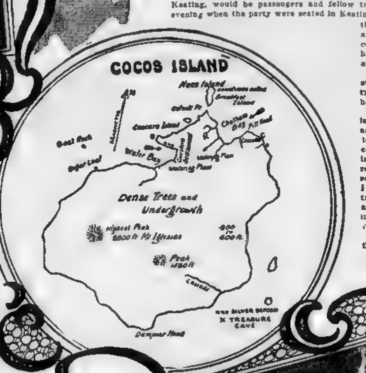

Chart of Cocos Island Showing Location of Pirates' Treasure.

"Keating, I have something to tell you which will astonish you, though it is quite true. If you can get one of the St. John's merchants to fit out a vessel for us, I know where you and I can find more gold and silver treasure than would buy Newfoundland."

Keating found a merchant who agreed to send a vessel commanded by a captain named Bogue, who would be his representative, according to the directions of the stranger, who, with Keating, would be passengers and fellow treasure-seekers. One evening when the party were seated in Keating's cottage planning the details of the voyage, the stranger received warning that he was about to be arrested.

He was terror-stricken. Turning to the wondering sailor he said:

"Keating, my life is nearly over; and as you have been true to me you shall become the richest man in the world. My real name is Thompson. Many years ago I hid gold and silver treasure on Cocos Island in the Pacific, and with this clue you can find it."

He then drew from the lining of his coat an old map on parchment—a chart of Cocos Island, in fact—laid it on the table in front of the sailor, and, using a splinter of wood as a pointer, illustrated instructions as follows.

"You must go to the northeast part of the island, and follow the course line of this bay (Chatham) until you find a creek—this creek where I am pointing. From the high water mark of this creek you must climb along the bed of the stream which flows from the inland, measuring seventy paces in a direction west by south.

Death of the Old Pirate.

"You cannot mistake the spot, for, from there, you can see, standing clear against the skyline and quite close, a gap in the hills; from anywhere else the gap is invisible. Turn to the north and walk until you cross a stream. You will then see a rock with a smooth face, like a wall; examine it carefully—it rises up like a cliff. But, at the height of a man's shoulder from the ground, you will see a crevice or hole, in which a man might insert his thumb. Thrust an iron bar in this hole, and lever outward; you will then open a cave in which are bars of gold and silver, coins, church images and golden crucifixes."

Then, trembling and pale, the old pirate rushed out of the cottage and away. A few days later his corpse was found frozen stiff in a snowdrift.

The merchant's vessel sailed as planned, and eventually anchored in Wafer Bay. Captain Bogue and Keating, alone in one of the ship's boats, landed, followed the dead pirate's directions and found the treasure exactly as he had indicated. Tying up a few coins in their handkerchiefs they went back to the ship to arrange for taking aboard the whole treasure.

The sight of the old coins made the crew mad with greed. They mutinied and went ashore without Bogue or Keating, who refused to act as guides. Returning disappointed they drank themselves into a stupor, which gave Bogue and Keating a chance to provision one of the boats and go ashore. Although it was night, they found the treasure cave again, hastily loaded themselves with as much gold coin as they could carry, and hurried back to their boat.

Now fate again interposed to make one man the sole possessor of the secret of the treasure cave. Keating got into the boat without mishap, but Bogue, in pushing the craft through the line of surf, lost his hold and was dragged down and drowned by the weight of gold he carried.

Keating was rescued by a Spanish vessel, returned to St. John's, fitted out another vessel, made another trip to Cocos Island, and under conditions of mutiny and disaster almost identical with his first effort, at last left the island again with only what treasure he could carry on his person, but still the sole possessor of the great secret.

For twenty years nothing more was heard of Keating. Then an old man nearly dead from want and exposure in a shed on the Newfoundland coast, whither he had crawled from a wrecked ship, was found and cared for by Nicholas [redacted], the youthful owner of a fishing smack. Through gratitude he revealed himself as Keating and made a contract sharing his secret with his young preserver.

But Fitzgerald, suspecting that Captain Bogue had been murdered by Keating instead of accidentally drowned, postponed making any use of this information. Keating died in [illegible] and still Fitzgerald either neglected, or was unable to profit by his secret.

In [illegible] Captain Shrapnel, of the Royal English Navy, commanding H. M. S. [illegible] in Pacific waters, landed three hundred sailors [illegible] on Cocos Island. For two days this force tunneled [illegible] the cliffs where they supposed the treasure was hidden, but with no further result than to destroy every landmark thereabout.

Yes, there was one other result—the wide publicity given to this expedition brought [illegible] Captain Shrapnel from Nicholas Fitzgerald the foregoing account of the transmission to him of the Cocos Island secret from Pirate Thompson through Keating, and the efforts made to profit by it. Captain Shrapnel was unable to complete preparations for another [illegible], but some of his friends to whom he confided all his information formed a syndicate whose members, three years ago, sailed to Cocos Island—and sailed away again, empty handed.

The experiences of this expedition are set forth in a book by one of its members, Hervey de Montmorency—entitled, "On the Track of a Treasure," published by Hurst and Blackett, Limited, London, England. They found the creek described by Thompson to Keating, and carried out the instructions beginning:

"With a pocket compass in hand, measure seventy paces west by south."

But the ravages of time and the dynamite methods of other searchers had robbed Thompson's directions of all their value. They spent some hours in vain digging. Among some debris in the creek they found part of an old silver cross—that is all.

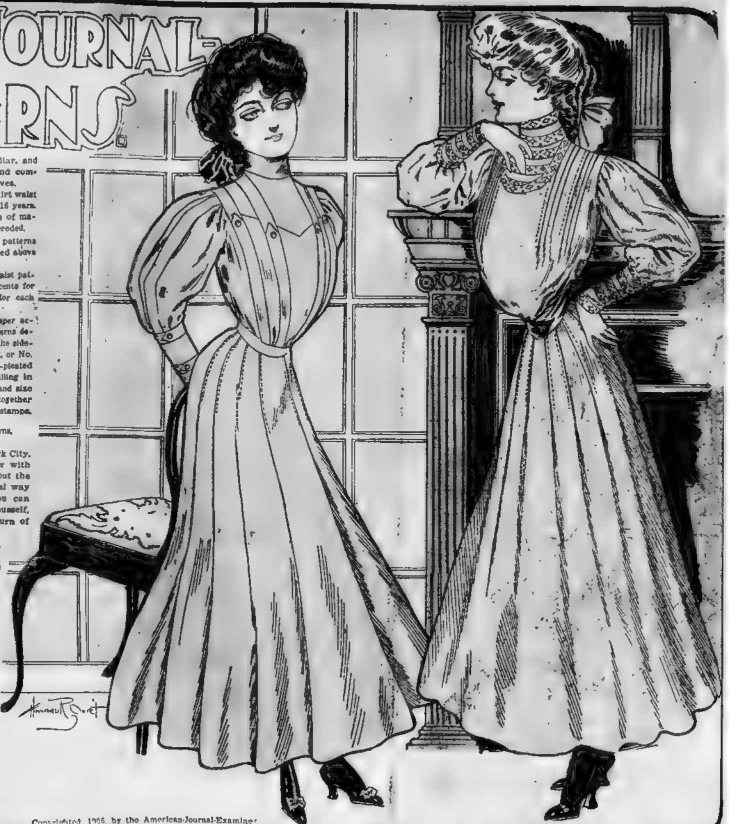
SUNDAY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER PATTERNS.



PRETTY waists and graceful, modish skirts, like the models illustrated to-day on this page, are eagerly admired by every young miss, and such costumes have really more to do with a girl looking dressy than anything else. What to wear is a very important question to every girl, and equally so to her mamma, who wants to see her daughter looking her very best when she is at school or with her young friends.

Four patterns, two for waists and two for skirts, modeled after the most stylish designs, for the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner series, are offered to-day. The accompanying illustration shows what fetching garments can be made with these patterns, and how striking the costumes really are.

The side-pleated skirt and pleated waist, pattern No. 223—1256—1257, shown by the figure to the left, make a dainty and chic street or school costume. The skirt, consisting of five gores and side pleated with a box pleat arranged at the centre of the front, is a very modish garment. A dahlia red development with a severe tailor finish would be very attractive. For every-day wear checked mohair in solid blue would be excellent, or Egyptian red might replace it.

The side-pleated skirt pattern is cut in three sizes, 12, 14 and 16 years. For the 14-year size 4¾ yards of material 36 inches wide will be needed.

The pleated waist with the nobby suspender conceit, in colors which will harmonize with those of the side-pleated skirt, will complete an unusually attractive costume. The waist, which is adjusted over a fitted lining stiffened with featherbone, closes at the back, and a yoke in pointed outline is the main characteristic. Double box pleats are introduced in front and also at the back, continuing over the shoulders in straps. The sleeves are box pleated. The stock corresponds with the yoke. Appropriate materials for the pleated waist are liberty satin, peau de crepe, pompadour silk, silk poplin and other weaves.

The waist pattern is cut in three sizes, 12, 14 and 16 years. For the 14-year size 2⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide will be required, with one yard of lace.

Another equally fetching costume is illustrated to the right. It is a box-pleated skirt and a tucked waist, pattern No. 224—1266—1267. The skirt consists of seven gores, and the fulness is arranged in box pleats all around. An inverted box pleat is used at the back.

The box-pleated skirt is cut in three sizes, 12, 14 and 16 years. For the 14-year size 3¾ yards of material 36 inches wide are required.

The tucked shirt waist, made over a fitted body, displays a back closing, and tucks are employed to vary its plainness, the front being tucked and stitched to yoke depth. The neck is rounded out to accommodate a removable chemisette topped with standing collar, and deep mitaine cuffs to correspond complete the fashionably full sleeves.

The pattern for the tucked shirt waist is cut in three sizes, 12, 14 and 16 years. For the 14-year size 2½ yards of material 36 inches wide will be needed.

Please note that orders for patterns in sizes other than those specified above cannot be filled.

The price of each skirt or waist pattern is ten cents, or twenty cents for the two patterns necessary for each costume.

In ordering cut out the proper accompanying blank for the patterns desired, No. 223—1256—1257 for the side-pleated skirt and pleated waist, or No. 224—1266—1267 for the box-pleated skirt and tucked shirt waist, filling in your name, post office address and size of patterns desired, and mail, together with twenty cents in money or stamps, to

Misses' Costume Patterns,
P. O. Box 260,
New York City.

The patterns ordered, together with complete directions for cutting out the garments in the most economical way and showing you just how you can make them easily at home yourself, will be forwarded to you by return of mail.

If only one pattern is desired, then write "skirt only" or "waist only," across the proper filled-in blank and mail with ten cents.

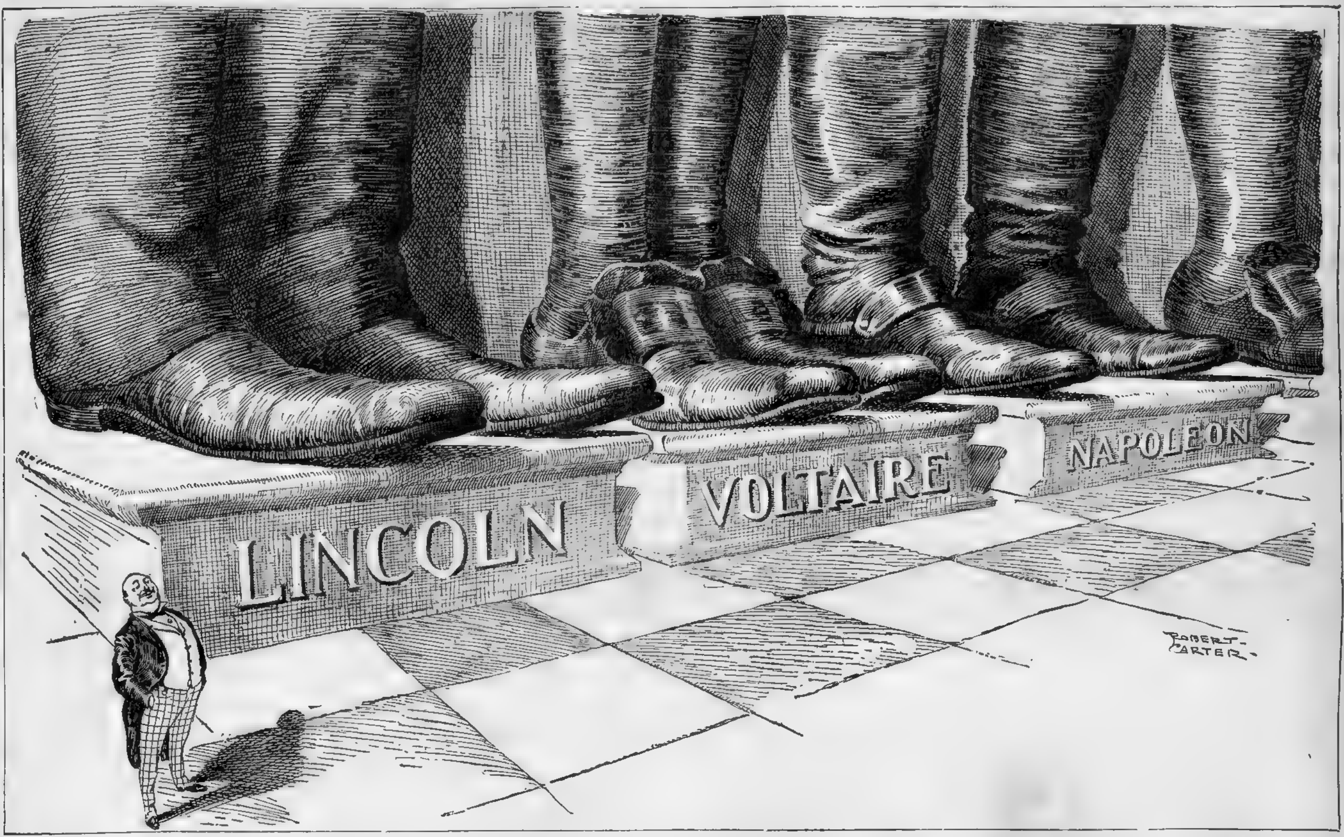
POLITICS & ART

EDITORIAL SECTION

SCIENCE · LITERATURE

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1906.

What Meaning Do You See in This Picture?



We leave it to our readers to write the editorial for this cartoon to-day. What thoughts occur to you as you look at this contrast of big and little manhood?

USUALLY on Sundays we publish a big picture supposed to contain or suggest an idea—and then we write about it.

To-day we are going to DIVIDE the work. This newspaper supplies the pictures, AND YOU, THE READERS, MUST SUPPLY THE IDEA.

It is a good thing for every man to get in the habit of expressing thought in writing. We invite the young men and old men and the women of all ages who read this newspaper to sit down NOW and write about this cartoon.

Send a letter to the editor, if you choose. Some of the letters will be published—although of course we couldn't publish all, since this newspaper actually goes into two millions of American homes—and it wouldn't be easy to print two million letters.

We shall be interested to know how much better our readers can write than we do. We shall be glad to see, and you will be glad to see, how many different ideas a cartoon of this kind can stir up in the human mind.

What is the leading thought suggested by the picture? Is it the greatness of those that are gone—the modern man scarcely able to reach their feet?

Or is it the self-efficiency, the vanity and egotism of the little man who swells himself up proudly in the presence of the greatest?

What is the lesson, the idea, in this picture? Write it for you own satisfaction, mail it to us, if you please, but ESPECIALLY TALK IT OVER AT THE TABLE. ASK YOUR CHILDREN, SEE HOW THEIR MINDS WORK AND WHAT DIRECTION THEY NATURALLY TAKE.

A Lesson for American Workingmen

Isn't It About Time for Them to Be Their Own Masters, TO TAKE THEMSELVES SERIOUSLY? Must They FOREVER Be the Underlings?

We are going to talk very often to the million of workingmen whom we reach every day ABOUT THE WORKINGMAN IN POLITICS.

Isn't it a disgrace to the workingman of America that this should be the only one of the great leading countries IN WHICH THE WORKINGMAN'S VOICE IS UNHEARD IN THE MAKING OF LAWS?

Isn't it a shame upon the American workingman that he sits back and lets the FOXES of politics and finance COUNT his votes and USE them and exercise HIS powers?

How LONG are you workingmen going to be the chip with which those THAT DON'T WORK play the game of finance and of politics?

How LONG are you going to be made fools of by parties that throw you a few scraps as scraps are thrown to a dog—OR THAT IGNORE YOU ALTOGETHER?

How LONG are you going to allow leaders TO TELL YOU TO KEEP OUT OF POLITICS BECAUSE THEY WANT TO USE YOU THEMSELVES in politics?

When are you going to take seriously popular government and the power of the ballot? When are you going to have yourselves, and your needs, and your wages, and your wives and your children represented in Congress, in the Senate, in the House of Representatives, in the Legislatures, in the Board of Aldermen—as Capital has its needs and its families represented everywhere from the Supreme Court of the United States down to the dog catcher's office?

We'll tell you a story to-day that ought to interest the worker and make him regard the theory of the corporation lawyers and political bosses that consider him a mere voting atom to be USED and placated with promises and lies.

Read this extract of the career of the youngest labor man elected to the British Parliament in this recent great and magnificent revolt of the working people in Great Britain:

> "The youngest Labor member of Parliament is in one respect the most interesting of them all.
> "He represents the type of the future—the working man with a university training.
> "Mr. J. T. MacPherson, who in his thirty-fourth year becomes M. P. for Preston, was sent by the Steel Smelters' Society to the Ruskin College, Oxford, to prepare for his career as Labor leader. Before that he had served as a boy at sea and had learned to smelt steel in the furnaces of Middlesborough.
> "He is now organizing secretary of the British Steel Smelters, Mill Iron and Tin organizers of the North of England. He is a fluent speaker and one of the most popular of the Labor leaders."

Isn't that calculated to make a wor[illegible] proud of his CLASS and proud of the INTELLIGENCE of the unions? Isn't it a [illegible] thing for workingmen, unselfishly, loyally and generously, TO PICK OUT A YOUNG MAN OF THEIR OWN KIND and give him a chance?

The youngest man elected by the laborers to Parliament IS A MAN EDUCATED BY THE GREAT LABOR UNION MOVEMENT OF GREAT BRITAIN. What a splendid thought that is, how encouraging and inspiring to workers everywhere!

In England, ever since the House of Commons has existed, they have seen it filled WITH YOUNG MEN EDUCATED BY LORDS, BY THE VERY RICH. The lucky sons of lucky men have gone to the House of Commons very early, CLIMBING UP ON THE BACKS OF WORKMEN WHOSE EARNINGS THEY GOT

It was about time that some YOUNG WORKINGMAN should go to that House of Commons and have his say.

In this case the men have united, they have picked out a young man worthy of their confidence; they have educated him, and he has gone into the House to speak FOR them and represent them WITH FORTY-NINE OTHER REGULAR EVERY-DAY WORKINGMEN.

What kind of men do the laborers elect, the union men and the others in the United States? It is THIS smart lawyer who knows how to tell them interesting lies. It is that clever employer who thinks he had better go down to Washington to look after his COMMERCIAL interests.

WORKINGMEN OF AMERICA, WHY DON'T YOU GO TO WASHINGTON TO LOOK AFTER YOUR LABOR INTERESTS?

You send down the agent of the Trusts, the agent of the Railroads, you send anybody—EXCEPT THE LABORING MAN.

WHY? BECAUSE YOU ARE JEALOUS OF EACH OTHER, FOR ONE REASON.

And because your leaders don't care to come out as politicians and compete openly with the ablest men (AND WHO WON'T LET YOU DO IT), and tell you to keep out of politics.

Keep your union out of politics? Yes.

But as workingmen go INTO politics and vote together as the Trusts vote together.

Do you think that unions which only talk about wages, and union labels, and fair hours—important as these are—can really change conditions in a country?

Don't you think it ridiculous for you workmen to sit, and talk, and plan, AND THEN HAVE THE JUDGES MADE BY THOSE OPPOSED TO YOU TO TELL YOU THAT WHAT YOU WANT IS ALWAYS UNCONSTITUTIONAL?

Don't you think it idiotic in a land where you MUST OBEY THE LAWS never to have any hand in MAKING those laws?

Don't you know that it is merely child's nonsense they talk to you when they tell you that you ought not to have any CLASS feeling in politics?

HAVEN'T THE TRUSTS GOT CLASS FEELING IN POLITICS? HAVEN'T THEY GOT THOMAS F. RYAN'S CORPORATION LAWYER, ROOT, AS SECRETARY OF STATE?

Haven't they got their man Knox in the Senate, representing the Steel Trust, after using him as Attorney-General?

Haven't they got their man Aldrich, father-in-law of Rockefeller's son, in the Senate, representing the Standard Oil—and every other form of rascality?

Did you ever know a law to get through the House of Congress if the railroads and the Trusts really didn't WANT it?

Workingmen, GO INTO POLITICS. Educate yourselves, DON'T BE ASHAMED OR AFRAID TO VOTE FOR EACH OTHER.

If you have a young man of talent, don't make it necessary for him to deny you and LEAVE you and go into some wretched lawyer's office or make himself the slave of some political boss thief in order to get recognition.

Follow the example of this English labor union. Pick out your best young man. Give him an education, give him encouragement. He will not disappoint you. The statement of the men in the Trusts that the American workman isn't fit for anything but a plane, or a saw, or a shovel, is a false statement. The class that gave the nation Lincoln MIGHT WELL GIVE THE NATION A FEW CONGRESSMEN.

GO INTO POLITICS. The man, labor leader or other who tells you to keep out will have, in most cases, a thick neck and a narrow forehead. If he has a thin neck and a large forehead—you can be sure that he has also got a pretty good bank account—[illegible] that he didn't get it from labor [illegible]

The Red-Toothed Pottiwumpus

By Little Johnny

MY father he sed Johnny your uncle Edard and that Mister Gipple have ben tellin you sum offle woppers lately. I haven't a word for to sa again it, cos if thay dident talk they wud be sick but I shud like to point out that a man, wich hasent ben in Injianny and every whare, and hasent never ben a mishonary preecher to the natif niggers of New Jersy may be able for to tel storys his self, and that's me.

I climb a tre and toled him to go away.

Then I ast him wud he tel me one about a tagger of the jungle, or a king wich wore a britch clowt and et babys, and he sed, my father did Johnny, sech lo theems as them is unwurthy of my tallents but one evening in a lonly spot in Conetlcut I met a red tooth pottiwumpus. I was a long way from home and too tierd for to rim, so I climed a tre and toled him to go away. The potty he jest set up on his tail and [illegible] mournfle sound much as to say I [illegible] playin fair, but I was pitty [illegible] the tre. Sein he cudent [illegible] gile, the potty he clined [illegible] I cum down and lookt up at [illegible] a moarnfle sound my own sef. The potty he stood it for a litle wile but his [illegible] overcamed him and he started for [illegible] and meet me on equel turms [illegible] agist man, so I went up my tre agin wile he was a cummin down out of hisen. Wen he had revisited this erth he was mity disapointed and shode his red teeths, wich in number was like stars on the se wen the blue waaves role nitery on deep Gallilee.

Feelin that ol was [illegible] me I breathed a prair and sed Ide be with him in a minnit if he cude entire the pangs of hungry that long, and begun for to slide down, but fore I cude ofer my self a wilin sackfice to his lust [illegible] was once more among the top [illegible] of his towery pine.

Johnny this memorable combat lasted ol nite, jest that way, and eer the bugle sang truce me and the potty was that fateegd that yure uncle Edard culd have roled up his sleeves and spit on his hands and licked us both, and Mister Gipple culd have flang our unresistfle boddys in to the grate gulphf whare he berrys his slotterd fomen.

I ast my father how it ended, and he sed it dident end at all, the march of improofment cum along and leveld that forist primevil, and whare once was herd the rore of batle, the crys of the combaters and the thunder of the captins is now the peeceful murmur of a facktery for makin bras diner plates out of old tin cans.

Wen my father had tole his story and had went away I rwote it ol down for the paper and jist then Uncle Ned he comed in and sed, Johnny, have you se a peece of rwitin wich I have lost?

I sed no, I hadent, wot was it about.

Uncle Ned he sed, O it is jest a litle account wich I rwote for you of a teribie encounter wich I had one time in Conetlcut with a red tooth pottiwumpus.

Then I spoke up and sed, I dont want it, cos father he had a fite with one his own self, and has jest now tole me ol about it.

Uncle Ned he thot a wile and bime by he sed, Did the potty clime a tre?

I sed, Yes, he did [illegible] save him for father he [illegible] a nuther one [illegible] brave.

I sed, Thare is a bras facktery ther now but it was one time a forist primevil.

Then Uncle Ned he shoke his hed [illegible] solem and sed Johnny far be it from me to denounch a parrent to his own child. Yure father is a good man, and [illegible] bald. He arises with the lark and [illegible] fourth rejoicin in his [illegible] gratefulness to Providence wich has [illegible] noble [illegible] whare [illegible] perticklar and [illegible]. His [illegible] the cownsels of the grate, and he [illegible] shed his [illegible] goat than for to refuze to be a post master for his country. His dwelling is the home of vertchu and the house of peace and a pitty nice place for me to board wen stocks is lo and meet [illegible]. Yes, my boy, yure father is a shiny lite of pollyticks, a pillow of the church, the hope and the pride of al the fellers wich think thay are like him. But he is too gam dasted litterary.

Johnny I used to be that way myself litterary from the crown of my feet to the sole of my hed—til one time my unbridled pashon for fame in letters led me to steel the multiplicashon table an pollish it as my own compisishon, with my name to it. Thats whare I broke my laig. Thats whare my litrary career snapt off and I becamed a out cast in the land of my burth. And thats wot wil hapen to yure tallented father if his love of the literchure temps him to swipe it, instead of whackin it up hisself. And he wil get a lickin too. I go, my boy, I go to pray for him.

So Uncle Ned he went away for to pray but Mister Gipple he ses, Pray for yure enimys, cos yure frends can take care of thair selfs if you have choosed the rite kind.

Mister Pitchel, thats the preecher, he was to our house and he sed, One time my congashon held a pray meetin, and thare was a carpenter wich had been snacht from the burnin quite resent, and his name was Smith. Wen it cum his tern for to pray I sed, Wil bruther Smith put up a petishon to the throan of grace. Bruther Smith he arose up real mad and spoke up an sed, This congashion is all swels, and I aint nuthin only but jest a commen carpenter, but you needent thro it up to me, and heres whare I back slide. If I was to put up a purtishon to the throan of grace it wuld be jest for to keep you fellers from brakin in and steelin the gold off of the throan.

But the Bible it comands us for to keep silents in the churtches, and thats wy I say trubble, shal be casted in to the lake of fier trubble shal be casted in to the lake of fier [illegible]

Mirandy on the Ethics of Clothes

By Dorothy Dix

"WHAT was de name of dat man what Brer Jenkins is always a-talkin' 'bout what said dat clothes don't make de man?" inquired Mirandy.

"I disremembers what Brer Jenkins called him, but maybe he knowed what he was talkin' 'bout. Maybe clothes don't make de man, caze dere sho'ly ain't much for anybody to set deir heart on in a pair of britches dat looks lak two jints o' stovepipes hinged together, an' a collar dat looks lak a busted chiny pitcher around de neck [illegible] looks lak de soup pot off of de stove.

Dem fat ladies what de dressmakers laces down into a real slim, straight-front figger.

"Yassum, dere's a mighty good reason why men ain't carried away by what Brer Jenkins calls de vanity of dress. Dey ain't got nothin' to carry 'em away, but wid women hit's different, an' hit am a mighty lucky thing for dat man dat he didn't prognosticate 'bout clothes not makin' de woman, for ef he had, right den an' dar he would a-loss his reputation as a prophet.

"I ain't sayin' nothin' 'bout dem fat ladies what de dressmaker laces down into a real slim, straight-front figger. Nuther is I a-talkin' 'bout dem bony females dat de dressmaker applies cotton batting to whar it will do de mos' good.

"Nawm, dem kind of things is a secret twixt a woman an' her maker, an' how she does hit an' what she suffers ain't nobody else's business but her own.

"What I'm a-expostulatin' 'bout is de effec' dat clothes has on a woman, for hit suttinly am curis dat a woman changes her mind ev'y time she changes her dress. Yassum, dat's a fact, an' de minute I cut my eye at a woman, an' see whedder she has got on her best Sunday go-to-meetin' bonnet, wid a fedder in de back an' a red rose standin' up in de front, or her ev'y day hat de chillen done played football wid, an' dat is bus' out on de side, an' hilt together wid a safety pin in de top, I knows how to tackle her 'bout her chickens [illegible] my back yard an' scratchin' up de sweet peas dat I'se been tryin to sprout in a box.

"Yassum, dem hats sho'ly is de straw dat shows which way de wind blows for ef de woman [illegible] dignified; but ef she's got on dat ole slab-sided bonnet of her hit don't call for nothin', [illegible] she kin des sail in an' [illegible] herself lak she feels [illegible] folks dar is dat trechous [illegible] neighborly dat dey aint [illegible] for what she does to stray over de fence into deir measly little bit of a yard.

"Yassum, when youse gwine to argufy wid a woman an' wants to git de best of her wait till you ketches her in her bes' clothes, caze you sho'ly is got her sewed up a sack den.

"Yassum, clothes suttinly do effec' a woman's mind, an' she can't help hit, po' thing, an' what makes me say what I do is dat I'se des been de witness to a sad case.

"Dis mawnin' Sis Hannah Jane Simpkins come to my house a-wailin' an' a-weepin' dat de hand of de Lawd was laid heavy on her.

"'What's de matter?' I axed her when she choke back her sobs long enough to drink half de pitcher o' beer dat I sent Thomas Jefferson when I see her sorrer, for I done took notice dat dere ain't nothin' dat you can say to a pusson dat's in trouble dat is as comfortin' as passin' de beer can, an' insistin' on dem havin' a little drap mo'.

"In de mawnin' when I is got on a Mother Hubbard, an' my sleeves rolled up, I can lay down de law to a husband as well as de next; but on dem evenings when I is dressed up in my silk frock, wid a brooch as big as a sawcer dat is a picture of Ike an' a gold chain around my neck, I is so meek an' gentle dat butter wouldn't melt in my mouf."

"'Hit's my gals,' 'spons Sis Hannah Jane.

"'What's de matter wid dem?' I inquired, for hit always look lak to [illegible] of dere was five likely, sensible, industrious gals in de town hit was yours. Dey am [illegible] full of foolishness lak my Ma'y Jane what's done been off an' got de higher education an' dat turns up her nose at de wash tub an' balks at de cook stove, an' shies away from de sewin' machine.'

"'Dat's de true word, Sis Mirandy,' says Sis Hannah Jane, as she dreens de dregs out of de beer can wid an air dat says dat she's so 'flicted dat she don't know what she's doin', 'dat's de true word. Dere warn't nobody dat could turn off a heftier day's washin' dan my Almiry, or dat could flute curtains nicer dan my Sally, or was a better housemaid dan my Lizzie, or dat could sweep a room cleaner dan my Sophy, whilst Anna Sue was dat good a cook dat she des had to pass her hand over de pot to make things tasty.

"'But hit's all over now, Sis Mirandy. Dey's all done knock off work an' is settin' around home holdin' books in deir hands, or rollin' deir eyes at de ceilin', or a-meandrin' an' a-perusin' around de street a-winkin' an' a-blinkin' at ev'y man dey sees.'

"'De lan' sakes!' 'sclaims I, dey sho'ly is los'd deir minds. When did you fus' take notice dat dey done gone crazy? An' what makes 'em?'

"'Don't ax me,' 'spons Sis Hannah Jane. 'Hit come on sudden. You know my Lizzie's been a-wukkin for a actor lady what plays on de stage, an' she's gwine away an' she give Lizzie a whole trunkful o' clothes, an' Lizzie fotch 'em home.

"'Well, no soon is Almiry put on a long wrapper made of lace an' pink ribbons, an' frills, dat has got a trail 'bout a mile [illegible] is cut down dat low [illegible] de neck dat hit's enough to give you de rheumatism just to look at hit, dan she says dat she feels dat she's born to be a lady, an' takes to wonderin' ef she aint some rich pusson's child, an' axes me ef I reckon' she could a-got changed in de cradle. Fuddermo', she says she can't eat pork chops an' b'iled cabbage, an' she keeps on axin' for tea lak a sick passon an' says dat she's too languid to do any mo' washin'.

"'Den Sally gits on one o' dese heah tailor-made skirts an' shut waists, an' she goes out an' jine de golf club, an' Lizzie dikes herself out in a low-naked ball dress, an' slip out de back do' an' go to de Saturday night hop, instid of gittin' her Sunday school lesson lak she used to, an' Sophy gits on one of dese mussy, neglected robes, an' she gin to roll her eyes an' screech at the melojum, an' say dat she got a call to be a opry singer, an' Anna Sue gits a red frock dat is kivered wid spangles, an' a hat dat looks lak a flower garden done bus' loose on hit, an' de fus' news I know she is a-prancin' up de street, an' de dinner is a-burnin' on de stove.

"'Yas, Sis Mirandy,' goes on Sis Hannah Jane, 'my gals is plum crazy an' dey is des a-footin' hit to de asylum as fas' as dey can go.'

"'Shoo, Sis Hannah Jane,' 'spons I, 'don't you worry. Hit's des dem actor ladies' clothes dat is hoodooed dem gals. You go an' take dem frocks to de second-hand store an' sell 'em, an' them gals will be a-sweepin' an' a-cookin', an' a-washin' agin des as soon as dey gits back into deir ole calico frocks.'

"Yassum, an' dat's de way hit turned out. Yassum, I know all 'bout de effec' dat clothes has on a woman. Ef you'll notice, de time when a woman gives her husband back talk an' spanks de baby is when she ain't dressed up.

"Now me—take me early in de mawnin' when I ain't tied up in no straight front, an' is got on a Mother Hubbard, an' my sleeves rolled up, an' I is a servigorous woman what can lay down de law to a husband as well as de next; but on dem evenings when I is dressed up in my silk frock, wid a brooch as big as a saucer dat is a picture of Ike, an' a gold chain around my neck, I is so meek an' gentle dat butter wouldn't melt in my mouf, an' I lets Ike go out to de crap game an' pertends dat I thinks dat he has des stepped around to de pra'r meetin'.

"An' I ain't took no notice dat I am a bit different from odder women."

MR. PIPP IS NOT HENPECKED

He Is Only Submissive That He May Gain PEACE and REST says DIGBY BELL

Digby Bell and His "Mr. Pipp."

By Eleanor Ames

I asked Digby Bell, who, in "The Education of Mr. Pipp," is making the hit of his life at the Park Theatre.

"Do you think the average American husband and, father is henpecked?" Mr. Bell answered my question by asking another. That is a Yankee trick pure and simple. I suppose he has learned it unconsciously during the many glorious, care free, restful Summers he has spent at his Summer home at Nantucket.

"Some American husbands are shamefully henpecked," I replied, "and more who deserve to be are not."

"I'm afraid I haven't a great deal of patience or sympathy with the man who submits or who even courts henpecking," observed Mr. Bell, and there was a steely glitter in his blue eyes which did not arise from his love of comedy. "I know a few such men, and I always have a longing—an almost uncontrollable longing—to give them a blow which will make them up and bring them to their senses

"For example, I could never imagine allowing myself to be henpecked. If I found that I had married one of those masterful women who considered me only as an object fit to pay her bills and handy to have around to vent her spite on, just that moment we would have reached the parting of the ways."

Mr. Pipp Has Spirit

Mr. Bell snapped his thin lips together so firmly that there was no opening for an argument

I could just see him looking that same way after he had told Mrs. Nagg to pack her trunks and go—to her mother's or any other old place, so she was out of his sight and hearing

"And yet you like—you admire Mr. J. Wesley Pipp," I ventured.

Mr. Bell's expression was a mixture, two-thirds annoyance, one-third amused tolerance.

"I can see that you don't really understand Mr. Pipp," he said in a tone of disappointment, in which there was a minor note of sadness. "I am sure you don't understand him," he repeated.

"Mr. Pipp is not lacking in spirit If he were, could he have fought his way over the road of money-getting, until out of nothing but his own head and his massive will he amassed one hundred millions of dollars?

"Mr. Pipp asserted himself when he had to—when the absolute necessity arose, and in the end everything came out his way. At the end he is triumphant

"He seems submissive, simply because he longs for peace. To have peace and quiet and not be worried, he is content to give Mrs. Pipp what seems like the whip hand.

"Do you think the average American husband and father is henpecked?" asked Eleanor Ames. And Digby Bell answered: "If I found that I had married one of those masterful women—just that moment we would have reached the parting of the ways."

He Loves Mr. Pipp

"Mr. Pipp, carefully analyzed, is one of the quaintest, most delightful characters I have ever met. I do admire him, and I love him. I do not believe I shall ever tire of him—and I hope the public will open its heart to him so that he will be welcome for years to come.

"He adores his wife and daughters. His dearest hope on earth is to make those two girls happy. He would give every cent of money he possesses and go back to struggle up the hill again if it would save them suffering of heart, body or mind.

"Therein, I say emphatically Mr. Pipp is the typical American husband and father. Mr. Pipp has splendid common sense. Money has left him unspoiled. Success has not robbed him of his sincerity

"He has a delicious sense of humor Not a thing in that line escapes him. In his quiet, unostentatious way he gets infinitely more enjoyment out of life than all the rest of his family put together.

"Pipp is both lovable and noble; he is tender and at the same time strong, yet so pathetic is his apparent absolute surrender to Mrs. Pipp that it is hard on first acquaintance to make a hero out of him."

Mr Bell spoke in the voice of a man who is "boosting" his dearest friend—a friend whom he loves as himself.

"I have known many Pipps in this world," he added, "and I like and respect them. They are not mere easy marks. They are sweet, sensible natures seeking peace and rest."

Play May Effect Cures

Every now and then the fact of the multitude of Pipps in this world is borne in upon Mr. Bell. In Philadelphia, where he has just closed an S. R. O. engagement, he received a call from a patient and pleasant man of some fifty years.

The moment his visitor saw Mr. Bell, he caught his hand and shook it fervently. "Oh, I did enjoy the play so much," he said. "It did appeal to me. You know I'm a 'Pipp,' and I'm going to take my wife to see the play. I know it will do her good. Why, my dear sir, there is a liberal education for wives in that play."

And, indeed, the play is eloquent with sermons. If at first one's sympathy goes out to the patient, long-suffering, devoted Pipp, victim of his wife's boundless ambitions, at the end it turns to that poor deluded woman herself, whose ambition has brought her into a false enjoyment of pretence, and whose eyes are finally opened to the emptiness of trying to be anything than what she really is, a truly good, plain, American woman.

There is a moment when in the ecstasy of hobnobbing with "titles" in Paris, she declares with nasal emphasis, "I don't care if I never see America again."

Sympathy for Deluded Woman

It is then that your heart hardens toward her and pity becomes akin to contempt. "Old idiot!" you say. "If she never did, 'America' would be nothing out!"

But at the end a great wave of sympathy rushes over her. She sees her own foolishness. She opens her eyes to see how blind she has been. And she turns dependently and with a child-like contentment and faith toward the husband whom she has tried so hard to dominate.

"I want to go home! I want to go home!" she wails, and in the abject misery of her mind she chooses the real home in Pittsburg instead of the acquired mansion in New York.

And as Pipp, his face wreathed in a beatific smile, stands by her side and strokes her cheek and comforts her, you see him a hero crowned in triumph.

For my own part, I wanted to jump over the footlights, tell Pipp he was a thoroughbred, and, patting the old lady's check, say: "There! there! It's all right. Everyone has to find her doll is stuffed with sawdust sooner or later. Pipp told us away back in the second act that you had a heart of gold, and now we know it."

To have been chosen for the part of J. Wesley Pipp has meant to Digby Bell the achievement of his ambition. It has given him a chance for which he confesses, "I have struggled a long time.

People Demand Tears

"When a man gets into comic opera its hard for the public to accept him out of it. It's a case of once a policeman, always a policeman. Of course, I had 'The Hoosier Doctor,' and that was a splendidly artistic chance, but there were too many tears."

"And people don't want tears?"

"Yes, they do. That is, they do up to a certain point. They like to have you make them feel that they have hearts. They like you to bring the heart to the throat, the tear to the eye, and then chase the heart and tear back with a good, honest laugh. Humor is more thoroughly photographed on the mind when there is the touch of sympathy in the heart.

"And, as Pipp, his face wreathed in a beatific smile, stands by her side and strokes her cheek and comforts her, you see him a hero crowned in triumph."

"That is what makes 'The Education of Mr. Pipp' the tremendous success it is."

The Digby Bell whom one might meet on Tremont street or in the foyer of the Adams House would never be recognized as Mr. Pipp. It takes Digby Bell exactly one hour to "make up." He completely sinks his identity and brings forth—Mr. Pipp

Charles Dana Gibson, who created Mr. Pipp and made it possible for Mr. Thomas to put him on the stage, looked at Mr Bell with his make up and said:

"It's a photograph"

One might imagine that being bossed around night after night, to say nothing of two matinees each week, by Mrs. Pipp would make him rather "sour on the ladies."

But listen to what he says:

"I'm for the Ladies"

"I'm for the ladies. They're all right. We accuse them of lacking reason, but they have something better than reason, and that is sentiment. Voltaire is my authority for this statement; he was the Christopher Columbus who discovered it. When expressing their sentiments the dear girls may use a few unnecessary adjectives, but they are only making known their natural opinions.

"I believe that every man, like Mr. Pipp, should hand over the management of the home and the family affairs to his Mrs. Pipp. That's her particular beat, and she is the policeman. A mere husband should realize that he is of no great or particular consequence except as a distributor of checks and trouble.

Wives Have Rights

"I am not in favor of the man who thinks he can have a good home, choice things to eat, a sofa pillow for his aching head, somebody to darn his hosiery, and all the comforts of a family hotel without giving the dispenser of blessings the right to speak her mind occasionally—and that's about all some women get when they've tied themselves to a stingy, miserly, unfeeling wretch who has the notion that because he happens to have been born a man he can make himself a czar

"You will notice that Mr. Pipp in the play makes a remark to the effect that although Mrs. Pipp can talk some, she has a heart of gold. If husbands would get in the habit of thinking of the heart of gold they won't mind the henpecking so much.

Women Must Talk

"A man has plenty of ways of putting in his time. He can play billiards or go out with the fellows, or tell fish yarns or otherwise conduct himself with masculine foolishness, but unless a woman is interested in some line of work, all she has to do is to inaugurate a peace conference with her cook, or to enjoy consolation with her dressmaker

"When papa comes home she is filled up with various items of domestic news that have to be got out of her system. Usually she is afraid of the cook, stands in awe of her dressmaker, and is forced by civilized laws to keep on fairly peaceful terms with her neighbors. What is the result? There is only one individual to whom she can speak freely and ease her mind. This victim is Mr. Husband. He is the only receiving teller for complaints, grievances, disappointments, blasted hopes and unpaid bills."

Which should make a matinee idol of Mr. Digby Bell beyond question and for all time.

Our Jingling Contributor

By James J. Montague

HE came in, smiling.

"Please run through this," he said.

We ran:

If I Were Henry James.

If I were Mr. Henry James
I never more should say
To such as I was bothered by:
"Skidoo!" or "Fade away!"
But: "If a migratory mood
Obsesses your vibrations.
Just seek innocuous desuetude
By prompt perambulations.

I never should, though fortune frowned,
Commit the sordid sin
Of saying, "Gee! It's twenty-three—
I'm just about all in!"
I'd simply murmur: "Circumstance,
With venomous virility,
Has doomed—ah! dread significance—
My physical tranquillity."

If I should lose my little all
In Wall Street, on my tongue
Should not be heard the vulgar word
One hears so often, "Stung!"
But: "Thus misfortune sets awry
One's hopes and tends to scatter all
His hoarded heaps. To-day have I
Lost touch with my collateral."

If I were Mr. Henry James,
I'd so invoice in doubt
The things I'd write that no one might Dig any meaning out.
I'd put the truth in such a shape,
When I should chance to tell it,
It couldn't possibly escape,
And—wonderful! I'd sell it.

"Sorry!" we said.

"Too bad!" said he. "Will you glance at this?"

We glanced:

Wicked Willie Loeb.

A circumstance which maybe France,
And Germany will view askance
And start a war with us, perchance,
By way of repartee?
It wasn't R-sev-lt! No! Aha! 'Twas wicked Willie Loeb!

Who was it had his manly form superbly photographed,
And had it sent to Mann, who meant
To label it "The President"
In "Fads and Fancies?" Was the gent
Who did that Mr. Taft?
Ah! No! We find on plying the investigator's probe

Who is it gets the credit for whatever comes off wrong?
Who sits and shakes with shuddery quakes
Whenever Mr. R-sev-lt makes
What other people term mistakes,
And breathe this sad, sweet song?
"Compared to me I cannot see so very much in Job!"
It isn't Roosevelt. No! Aha! It's wicked Willie Loeb."

"It would be lese majeste to print it," we said "Give us another."

"With pleasure. Behold this":

We beheld:

A Gentleman.

Oh! Garfield is a gentleman! He never would betray
A sacred, solemn confidence, or give a trust away!
At all the little jokers that are scattered through their books.
"I'll never tell a word of it," he whispers, "honor bright!"
Considered as a gentleman, young Garfield is all right!
Oh! Garfield is a gentleman! Though lots of crookedness
The packers in his private ear most willingly confess;
He gives his sacred promise to the kindly pirate that
And thus Chicago trusts are saved from ignominious flight—
Considered as a gentleman, young Garfield is all right!

"Will read that again," we said.

"Do," he urged. "In the meantime read this"

We read:

The Robins.

The robins have come home again,
An' from the same ole bough
Their song is ringin' now.

It sort o' hurts to think that they Should be a singin' on
The same ole happy, care free way,
Since little Dave has gone.

"No," we said,

"No? Then consider this":

We considered:

John D.'s Disappearance.

"What's Rogers got so glum about?"
The gentle Archbold cried;
"John D. has went! John D. has went!"
Young William G. replied
He's beat it out for Florida, and thinks it is to laugh
To read in press dispatches how his true and loyal staff
Has got to stay in old New York and get the cruel gaff
When Hadley starts the next investigation

Asked Chauncey M. Depew;
"He's got enough," said Beveridge,
"To turn a planet blue."
And no one has a half a guess at where he's travelled to,
In consequence the Senate don't know what it ought to do
About suppressing that investigation

"Is that all?" we inquired.

"It is."

"Good morning."

"Good morning."

He departed.

What Governor Said to Governor at Governor Fete

Governor and Mrs Guild were assisted at their reception to State officers and members of the Legislature and their wives by Governor Charles J. Bell and Mrs Bell. The function was very brilliant. Governors Cobb, McLane and [illegible] of Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, who had been invited, were unable to be present.—News item from daily paper.

BY THE OFFICE BOY

When the city editor called for the society military political expert to go to the reception tendered by the Governor to the Governors of the other New England States that efficient member of the staff [illegible] respond. It was important that the assignment be reported. Up spoke the office boy. "Give me a chanst," he said. "I've been studyin' t' be a reporter." In his dire hour of need the city editor agreed.

It is possible that the following presentation of the happenings at the reception may be somewhat in error. In fact, it has appeared in the daily papers that several persons were [illegible] present whom the office boy includes in his story. Perhaps he was imposed upon by malicious persons.

Also it would appear from his pen style that "Nick Carter" or "Deadwood Dick," rather than Addison or Thackeray, is his mentor and guide. However, this is the report he turned in:

"S'death, I am foiled."

It was afternoon.

Great and Good Men

A party of men were gathered about the loaded tables partaking of our hero's hospitality. They were great and good men. Governors of five States, and they had assembled to do honor to him whose vehement words open this chapter.

They were also determined to learn thoroughly the words of wisdom spoken by those other famous executives, the Governors of North Carolina and South Carolina.

Covers had been laid for the chiefs of every New England Commonwealth and then taken off again. Our hero had seen, through a nearby door, the studious figure of Stenographer Wright of the District Attorney's office, and it was in his mind that nothing could be done under cover. That was when he exclaimed the portentous words with which this chapter begins, following them with these other words:

"Hist. Let us have silence, and mighty little of that."

Soft-footed waiters came and went, and only a popping, popping, like the distant salvos of courtship, disturbed the stillness.

It was our hero's first reception to Their Excellencies, and every fibre of his body [illegible] with the desire that the function should pass off with eclat and embonpoint. This latter wish bore the greater [illegible] of fruit [illegible] as a ready three [illegible] and large numbers of [illegible] had [illegible] the casings of their [illegible].

But that a guest had [illegible] Burgundy, the business of the Commonwealth had thus far that afternoon proceeded most smoothly. Our hero was in high spirits.

Glad Hands Were Busy

A wealth of silver decorated the tables and to the light of the sun was added the glare of [illegible] candelabra. A gold-laced colonel [illegible] informed the Governor that [illegible] Representatives had done nothing of [illegible].

Why should not he be [illegible]?

Each Executive [illegible] his buddies' [illegible] handshake on each of the others, and the waiters had just passed the Great Western again, when a pause ensued.

"Let them be happy a few moments longer," said Governor Guild, whose gloves [illegible] heart.

Another [illegible] opened and then began the speechmaking. Governor [illegible]. Three aides-de-camp pounded on the [illegible] their swords [illegible] and he said:

"Gentlemen (Applause and laughter) Amid so [illegible] than [illegible] "Hear! Hear!" from the other Governors) [illegible] nigh impossible for me to speak. I am overcome with emotion at the sight of so many serious, sober men about my [illegible] board, another evidence of the strength of character [illegible] that invariably follows the simple life in the lesser States. (Evidences of indignation.) You observe my embarrassment (Applause) [illegible] because I am speaking without notes. I have used none since [illegible] Moran, whose [illegible] personnel of the Police [illegible] [illegible] the banking officials and [illegible].

"The financial [illegible] land (great applause) [illegible] safeguarded, but the great commercial enterprises and commerce [illegible] newspapers would languish and die [illegible] (Great emotion.) Need I say more [illegible] No! No!" Then I [illegible] the first speaker, Governor Cobb, to respond to the toast: "Maine, the State of great men and great muckers, of pine trees and prohibition."

Adjusts His Smile

Taking his county fair smile from its receptacle and adjusting it to his face, Governor Cobb spoke as follows:

"It is a cause of pleasure to be here this [illegible] (laughter). I am glad to be in your party and to behold such a feast of reason and flow of wine. For [illegible] (applause) for the [illegible] [illegible] the Peruna which I regret [illegible] [illegible] good [illegible] (Cheers and applause.)

[illegible] of Rhode Island was [illegible]

[illegible] a small State (applause), [illegible] State (laughter), a State where that liberty of conscience made famous by the late lamented Roger Williams is cherished and [illegible] as a thing forever [illegible]. I have heard [illegible] men who got away [illegible] $18,000 of the savings of the [illegible] had nothing [illegible] (Applause) [illegible] they would by [illegible] high officials of the [illegible] if not elected [illegible] (Wild cheering.)

When Governor McLane of New Hampshire was introduced he said:

Of Course They Laughed

"As my great and good friend Baron Komura said to me on the occasion of the late Peace Conference, [illegible] pleasure to [illegible] [illegible] these (prolonged [illegible]) under such circumstances. I am in favor [illegible] and shall endeavor to entertain you at a [illegible] time. (Great applause.) It is a duty we owe the great people to allow the members an occasional opportunity to see us at our best. [illegible] I have an appointment [illegible] another denial of the Frank [illegible] connection with the Pe[illegible] [illegible] (applause) [illegible] 986.

Storms of cheering broke forth as Governor Bell arose and bowed, saying:

"My Dear Brethren (Great laughter) The pressure of [illegible] and business [illegible] State enables me to be present with you in [illegible] on this auspicious occasion. My [illegible] is one of [illegible] and has been [illegible] since that proud day when I secured [illegible] my first railroad pass (applause) and began the organization of that grange following which [illegible] the [illegible] as the most complete and [illegible] subservient political machine in New England (wild applause), not even excepting, bowing to Governor [illegible], the thousands led by my able colleague, General Brayton of Rhode Island.

The Horrible Truth

"It has been my privilege to travel in many States of the Union, and in Canada, and my journeys, taken at times when mercy and justice demanded my presence at home, have taught me many things. (Laughter.) Principal among these is this, that 'Sharper than a serpent's tooth is an ungrateful press agent.' (Great applause.) Let us drink a toast in maple syrup. [illegible] Colonel [illegible] Governor [illegible] a gentleman [illegible] never cease to smile nor have [illegible] work."

There was an interruption, even as [illegible].

By Morton Burdett.

The Caledonian Club's celebration of Robert Burns's anniversary was used literally by Mayor Fitzgerald to administer a "Scotch blessing" to his own Celtic [illegible].

And the canny members of the Caledonians [illegible] hugely tickled at [illegible]. The Mayor made the Caledonians the meat of a sort of [illegible] sandwich, which he compounded as the [illegible] of the Burns festivities.

You see, the Mayor had three dates that night. He first went to the gathering of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union in Paul Revere Hall in Mechanics Building. Then he went to the Caledonians, where he was enthusiastically escorted to the platform by William Martin and was received by [illegible] dazzling array of kilts and cock-feathers.

Then he journeyed to the Quincy House, where the Holy Name Society of St. Vincent's Church of South Boston was at its annual banquet.

Now the Mayor had been to one Celtic gathering, then to a Gaelic one and then to a second Celtic one—making up this international sandwich of thistles between shamrock blankets. And did he tell the shamrocks how much finer they were than the thistles? Nay laddie [illegible] he did say:

Nobody Said "Hoot, Mon."

"I have just come from the Caledonian Club, where I was much impressed, for I met [illegible] of the most prominent business men of the city, men who are well known in business circles and whose names hang over many of the largest business houses of the city. It seems strange that so many of those people, who constitute but a small percentage of the population, should be so prominently identified with the city's business, while the Irish people, who constitute about 60 per cent, are [illegible] represented."

[illegible] It seems [illegible] [illegible] the shamrock. If [illegible] [illegible]

The Caledonians honored Burns in [illegible] way that would have warmed [illegible] of his big heart. And they did it without anyone saying "Hoot mon" [illegible] through the program of [illegible], dancing and music. [illegible] those two words [illegible] show. I listened to make sure. [illegible] one [illegible] and [illegible] "Hoot [illegible]" [illegible] Scotch [illegible]

[illegible] enthusiasm rose to the pitch of [illegible] of applause, a sort of "Yeow, yeow" that may have descended from Bannockburn and Flodden Field. But not one "Hoot."

Kilts Were Imposing.

The big-framed men in kilts and [illegible] especially [illegible] Chief William B. [illegible] and Hugh T. Kennedy and others [illegible] man, especially if he's knobby about the knees.

There was a notable array of Caledonian officers, including Chief George Scot, First Chieftain William Martin, Second Chieftain John F. Grant, Third Chieftain Walter H. Hughes, Fourth Chieftain Thomas Gibson, Fifth Chieftain [illegible], Sixth Chieftain Robert Bowie [illegible], Major John Madison and lots of [illegible].

And then [illegible] Kirstie, Maggie and [illegible] other pretty Scotch lassies were smiling at the lads and waiting impatiently for the dancing to begin. And when Mme. Barutse [illegible] sang "Comin' Thro' the Rye" for an encore, Jennie, Kirstie and Maggie looked as demure as [illegible].

Jane Newcombe Finds That Every Dog Has Its Day, and Writes of Her Kennel Show Plans

MRS. E. V. R. THAYER. MRS. E. N. SEAGRAVE. MRS. FRANK DOLE. NORA I/ SIGI MRS. E. W. CLARKE. MRS. J. G. PAINE.

By Jane Newcombe

My Dear Grace

It's a true saying that every dog will have his day. Mine are having theirs now. I have entered them in the coming show of the New England Kennel Club, which is to be held at Mechanics Building on February 20 [illegible].

The dear little dogs are so devoted to me and so sensitive and nervous regarding strangers that I [illegible] [illegible] let me assure you that it's no such [illegible].

[illegible] at least an hour or more each day of careful grooming. [illegible] I am most anxious to [illegible] my Yokohama. He is [illegible] Japanese [illegible] class, and to [illegible] my beautiful pom, [illegible] but a special.

The [illegible] most fashionable breeds [illegible] of entering my schipperke [illegible] Raffles, that you wanted [illegible] for some reason which I [illegible] understand, for [illegible] are smart [illegible], these dogs have never [illegible] popular at American shows.

[illegible] and away the biggest show [illegible] in Boston. Mr. "Jack" Taylor, secretary of the show, a most genial man, too, told me there were 1,200 entries, which means over nine hundred [illegible] dogs, and the largest previous show that of a year ago was [illegible].

By the way, I was in the office of the [illegible] the other day when [illegible] came in and said she would [illegible] enter a dog she owned for [illegible] purposes. She was [illegible] but she insisted on explaining about the dog.

"[illegible] dog you ever saw," she said. "Why, he isn't any longer than that penholder, and his head is about the size of an English walnut, and his legs are not as big as a lead pencil. [illegible] he's a regular curiosity. People [illegible] far and wide to see him."

No Room for Mongrels

"What breed is he?" asked the man in charge.

"Oh, I don't know his breed," replied the old lady, "but he's the cutest thing you ever saw."

It was explained that all dogs entered had to be of some recognized breed.

"Well," she said, "perhaps I could find out what breed he is. You see my son gave him to me eighteen years ago and——"

"Eighteen years!" said Mr. Taylor, "why that dog is too old to put in a show. He'd never stand it. It would kill him."

"I guess not," retorted the old lady, "for he's been dead these ten years. I've got him stuffed and in a glass case, but I guess he's about as interesting as some of the live ones you'll have there."

Later in the day a man came in to see about entering his dog. Really I loved the dog just to hear him tell of [illegible] and cleverness.

[illegible] the dog goes to the car every night to meet his master, runs ahead of [illegible] to the house, gets his slippers for him, and then sits up before him, laughing with joy. Dear fellow! Can you see him?

Of course, he was asked about the dog's breed.

"Well, I'll tell you," he said. "His mother was a Scotch collie and his father was a bull dog." He was told no cross breeds were admissible.

He looked disappointed for a minute, then said:

"Well, I'll tell you, he favors his mother so much, that unless you knew it you'd never suspect there was a drop of bull blood in him. And the children love him so they want to see him in the show."

Poor kids! They are doomed to be disappointed. Why not get up a show of worthy and self-respecting mongrels? It would bring forth lots of canine nobility of character if not of blood. All this, dear girl, is a digression.

I want to tell you what an unusual and tremendous interest women, especially Boston women, are taking in the show.

Previously only now and then one who was not a dog fancier in business earnest showed a pet.

This year some of the smartest women in town are striving for honors with splendidly bred animals.

They are going to show their own bowwows in the ring [illegible] which will add immensely to the interest.

Several of them are going in for Airedale terriers. Well, they [illegible] sporty little dogs, sturdy and good style.

Dorothy Jordan, quite the prettiest girl in town, the daughter of Eben D. Jordan, the Marshall Field of Boston, will show a couple of splendid Airedales, that should take blues. [illegible] is the first time Miss Jordan has shown any interest in dogs, though she has, in some degree, shared her father's enthusiasm for blooded horses.

Her cousin, Colette Dumaresq, a stunning girl, as richly brunette in coloring as Dorothy is blonde, will also show Airedales and some English setters that are beauties.

Airedales also have been chosen [illegible] competition by Mrs. Benjamin F[illegible] of Brookline and Miss Delprade. Lovers [illegible] Mrs. E. V. R. Thayer Jr., whom you will remember better as [illegible] of New York, will show some imported French bulls. Mrs. Thayer is prettier even since her marriage than she was before.

[illegible] which the gorgeous Thayer estates at Lancaster make so gloriously possible [illegible] they have an ideal place in which to raise their dogs, for [illegible] what you please, even the [illegible] actually [illegible] the freedom of [illegible] space [illegible] no place for dogs [illegible].

Miss Winthrop to Show Collies

Miss Margaret Winthrop of [illegible], one of the most conservative [illegible] blue-blooded girls [illegible] show some collies, which should make [illegible] [illegible] and take [illegible] and you know that Mr. [illegible] New York has famous [illegible] who [illegible] the [illegible] of blues and [illegible]. Miss Winthrop has just [illegible] one of her [illegible] from [illegible] and it is said [illegible] to be a marvel.

Mrs. George H. Whitney has remained true to Boston terriers, as has also Mrs. Florence Robinson, who has [illegible].

Miss Margaret [illegible], the Bakers [illegible] and Miss [illegible] of Andover will compete with Mrs. Thayer in showing French bulls.

There are several women here in Boston, and its vicinity who go in for dogs in all seriousness, and make a very handsome living out of the business.

One of the best known is Mrs. Fred Speed, the secretary of the Ladies' Kennel Club of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Speed is true and genuine and delightful as a woman, and what she doesn't know about dogs and dog shows isn't worth talking about.

Mrs. Speed will not show any dogs, but you can depend upon her being present each day to give help and hints and invaluable counsel to all women exhibitors.

From Egypt's Famous Kennels

Mrs. E. N. Seagrave is another dog enthusiast and owns the Lakeview Kennels at Wakefield. She makes a specialty of cocker spaniels.

Mrs. E. W. Clark, whose kennels are at Egypt, [illegible] valuable toy spaniels [illegible] King Charles.

Speaking of spaniels [illegible] the most marvelous little Jap [illegible] is to be shown by the most interesting young matron in society, Mrs. Eben Stanwood, who was formerly Gladys Lawson, "Tom" Lawson's handsome daughter. Mrs. Stanwood will also show some superb [illegible] hounds, the pride of the famous Dreamwold Kennels.

To go back to the women in the business, there is a most attractive and successful woman, Mrs. George Steadman Thomas of Hamilton, who will show bulldogs and Poms. Mrs. Thomas recently sold her old English sheep dog, Enderlie Blue Patrol, to George Porter of Ardsley for $1,500.

I am looking forward with the greatest pleasure to welcoming Mrs. Frank Fessenden Dole of New Haven, who has [illegible] bull terriers and bulldogs. Of course you know that the bull terriers that have made Frank Dole's Edgewood Kennels famous are the best in the world. Mr. Dole is going in for Boston terriers now.

Mrs. Dole is as fond of dogs as her [illegible] good [illegible] looking [illegible] fairly groomed, and [illegible] carriage [illegible].

[illegible] who has never [illegible] hoping she [illegible].

But One Woman as Judge

[illegible] judge among [illegible] Miss Whitney of [illegible] will judge St. Bernards.

The [illegible] few of the many [illegible] There [illegible] of Buffalo, [illegible] who [illegible] Jaggar [illegible] Sargent of Bay [illegible] has some good St. Bernards, Mrs. [illegible] of New York with her [illegible] spaniels, and dozens [illegible].

Some "Ponies" Not In

I'm surprised that Mrs. Francis Watson and Cornelia Thayer are not [illegible] walk away [illegible] but perhaps they [illegible] too fond of the [illegible] the show.

Mrs. Watson [illegible] be very keen for shows, [illegible] sister [illegible] Mrs. Charles M. Wa[illegible] who, with Mrs. Speed, is one [illegible] support [illegible] Association, [illegible] toys.

Mrs. Richard [illegible] Davis will [illegible] this year so I am [illegible] for you know what [illegible] good sportsman [illegible] days when she was [illegible] of Chicago, and before [illegible] her the engagement ring [illegible] the Atlantic by a messenger [illegible] a good Airedale [illegible] figure, do [illegible] they are coming [illegible] and believe me [illegible].

"It was th' riot business that moved th' committee t' tears. William mad' it so plain that th' only rayson th' Ancients had not attended all th' riots an' wars iv th' past three cinturies was because they hadn't been invited that even th' Ancients themselves who wer present almost believed it.

"I can see in me mind's eye, Hanrahan, th' Ancients rayspondin' t' a riot call.

Loveliest Bride of the Season is the Dorothy Q. of To-Day

ROMANCE OF PURITAN MAID TO LEAD PETITE "DOROTHY Q." TO ALTAR

Descendant of Famous Adamses of Massachusetts Won by Frederic Russell Nourse.

SINCE those early days when Massachusetts and her sister colonies were preparing to revolt at being subjects of English despotism and declare boldly their independence, history has been regularly lightened by the romance and charm of the love story of a sweet Puritan maid, renowned for her noble ancestry, her beauty, her wit, the daughter of the historic family of Quincy, lovely "Dorothy Q."

Even the extreme modernity of to-day, with its defiance of traditions, has held this one in affectionate regard.

Therefore when, next Wednesday [illegible], at Emmanuel Church, lovely Dorothy Quincy becomes the bride of Frederic Russell Nourse, the event will have a significance and importance far and away beyond that of the average society wedding.

The "Dorothy Q." of this generation is the elder daughter of Mrs. Henry Parker Quincy of Beacon street. Her father was the late Dr. Quincy.

On her paternal side she traces her ancestry back through a long and honorable line of Josiah and Edmund Quincys, men who, as Mayors of Boston, as jurists and judges and writers, have been renowned in colonial and municipal history for two centuries.

Ancestral Heritage.

From her mother "Dorothy Q." has an equally rich ancestral heritage.

Mrs. Quincy was before her marriage Mary Adams, and her family has been equally prominent in Massachusetts history.

Two years ago "Dorothy Q.," dainty, petite, charmingly unaffected, made her social bow at a series of teas and a cotillon at the Somerset.

At that ball, the first large and formal affair she had ever graced, many admiring members of the older set spoke of what a beautiful bride she would make, and it was predicted that she would not long remain unclaimed by some ardent wooer.

The "Dorothy Q." of to-day is independent financially. She is a girl of great depth of character and is utterly lacking in that frivolity which mars the perfection of so many girls.

Suitor after suitor, rich, handsome, clever, paid her court, but none appealed to her heart.

Apparently she had no more liking for one than for another, which shows that she guarded her secret well.

Since 1890, when he was graduated from Harvard, Mr. Nourse has been a friend of the Quincy family.

But outsiders did not suspect that the only Dorothy was the prize he would one day win.

Mr. Nourse comes of a family well known in New England history.

One of his remote ancestors, said to have been the most lovable woman of her day, was Rebecca Nourse, hanged as a witch at Salem.

1,000 Wedding Cards.

Elaborate plans have been made for the wedding. One thousand guests have been asked to the church, and for the home reception to follow two hundred of the most intimate friends and relatives have been bidden.

The bride's uncle, Henry Adams, will come on from Washington to give his niece in marriage.

The young and only sister of the bride, Elinor, who is to be presented next year, will be the maid of honor. The bridesmaids include Miss Mercer Atterbury of New York, Miss Abigail Adams, the bride's cousin, and Misses Mary Bigelow and Alice West, sister debutantes.

To-morrow evening at the Somerset Club Miss Quincy will give a dinner to the bridesmaids and ushers.

Dorothy Quincy, bride-elect, is said to closely resemble the original "Dorothy Q.," the grandmother of Oliver Wendell Holmes, heroine of his famous poem, "Dorothy Q.," and whose portrait was carefully cherished by him.

She was an "ideal flower of Puritan maidenhood," and when captured by the wealthy and ardent wooer, Edward Jackson, gave up the single and idyllic life at Quincy in the house which still bears her name, came to Boston, and over his splendid colonial mansion presided with a gentleness and grace which made her famous as a hostess.

It is said of her that one day a wandering gypsy read in her pretty palm that she had a deep and loyal love-nature, and that it was a gift that would descend upon and bless all who in future generations should bear her magic name.

The next generation brought into prominence her beautiful, high-spirited niece, Dorothy Quincy, whose romance with John Hancock during the Revolution has been written as one of the most marvellous [illegible] story.

John Hancock was poor, but persuasive. He cleverly kept other suitors at bay until his means allowed him to ask the lovely girl to leave her ancestral home in Quincy to become his bride.

SOCIETY STIRRED BY LOVERS' TILTS

BY A SOCIETY WOMAN

Little sparrows are telling pretty tales of lovers' tilts, causing delayed engagements for the announcement of which society is waiting, if not with bated breath,, at least with its wonted impatience.

Two prominent Back Bay society girls are pouting. Two prominent Boston clubmen are perplexed. Polite but curious society is being held skilfully at bay and can only guess and wait for the outcome, which the gossipy and optimistic little birds prophesy will be soon, and will be happy to the extent of "forever after."

But society has other things to look forward to, and an aftermath of functions springing up promises pleasant pastime for those remaining in town during the three weeks preceding Lent.

Faith in our fickle New England climate is weak and wavering, and many are planning to join those who are already off in search of pastures new, in sunnier lands.

Letters from Palm Beach and other points of the Florida east coast all agree in one happy tale of merry days and Summer content in a paradise of matchless pleasures.

Seeking Summer Climes

Among those seeking Summer climes are Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, who have leased a house in Washington, where they will be well established in time for the White House wedding. Their new abode will be near that of Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Brandegee's favorite cousin, who is also in the capital city for the Winter, but who intends leaving early in March for a few weeks' travel abroad.

Colonel and Mrs. Bunting, who with their son are now at the Somerset, leave for Florida the middle of the month, as will also Mr. Currier of the Somerset. Mr. Currier owns a large plantation and orange groves in Southern Florida, and it is there that most of his time will be spent.

Captain and Mrs. William L. Humphrey of Brookline sailed yesterday for the Mediterranean. They will be absent for six months and possibly longer. Mr. Frederick J. Stark and Miss Marguerite S. Stark were others to sail yesterday for the Mediterranean. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lithgow Devens, whose daughter's engagement to Gerald D. Boardman was announced last week, intend sailing in the near future for a few months abroad.

The Robert M. Morses, who are shortly sailing for the Mediterranean, will remain abroad until April, when they will return and open their country home at Falmouth.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Rice and family of Commonwealth avenue are about to leave for the Pacific Coast and will make their headquarters at Santa Barbara.

Miss Edith Andrew, who is now the guest of her niece, Mrs. Charles E. Mason (Elizabeth Andrew), in Maine, will sail for Southern Europe, probably next week.

To Give Boston Play Abroad

Liverpool, England, is to see the first production of a play written by Mrs. Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland of Beacon street and Miss Dorothy Dix, a Radcliffe girl. A well-known English star is to appear in the leading role, and Mrs. Sutherland and Miss Dix will sail for England about the third of April to witness the first performance. They have recently completed a play entitled "Midsummer Eve," a comedy of odd setting, which Schubert Brothers will produce some time before April.

The debutante dinner to be given by Mrs. H. H. Fay of Beacon street, for Alice Bolt, next Tuesday evening, promises to be one of the prettiest on record. Miss Bolt is immensely popular with all her sister buds.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and her daughters, the Misses Cornelia and Sallie Thayer, are among the Bostonians making extensive preparations to attend the wedding of Miss Roosevelt.

Other Boston friends who have received the highly prized invitations are Mrs. Stephen Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. George Mumford and Miss Alice West.

Planning Spring Fete

Faint music of May festivals is already in the air and "Ancestors' Day Festival" will likely be the name under which the costume bazaar to be given in Copley Hall, May 15, for the benefit of the Boston University School of Medicine, will be known.

Prominent young society maids and matrons are to take part and the event will be the fete par excellence of the Spring. Among those already interested are Mrs. Maurice Turner of Brookline, Mrs. John Arnold Rockwell of Cambridge, Mrs. Howard P. Bellows, Dr. Clara Garey, Dr. Helen Childs and Dr. Elizabeth K. Hall. Mrs. George B. Rice will have charge of the music.

The pretty young girls who will preside over the booths and also those to take part in the entertainment will be in costumes representing those of our American ancestors, such as the Cavalier English of the South, the French of Louisiana and the American Indian.

The affair will be under the direct auspices of the New England Hahnemannian Association, of which Mr. Edmund A. Whitman is president.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Morse with their young son left Monday for Virginia Hot Springs, where they will pass the coming two months. Mrs. Morse has been suffering for some time with a slight throat trouble and her friends are hoping that the change will be a beneficial one.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis O. Winslow, [illegible] of the Somerset Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert [illegible] Beaton are among the Bostonians [illegible] Palm Beach. They will be joined shortly by Mrs. James B. Forsyth of the Victoria.

Miss Blanche [illegible], who has been so seriously ill for several weeks, is rapidly improving and as soon as her condition permits she intends starting for the South, where she will spend several weeks before opening her home in Longwood.

Dr. William Harmon van Allen, rector of the fashionable Church of the Advent, will spend this month in touring the South, visiting Florida, Washington, Philadelphia and other points. Father Stoskopf and the other curates have full charge of the parish during his absence.

Newport's Summer colony is rejoicing at the decision of Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney to spend the coming Summer in their midst. The Whitneys have rented Beverton, the same villa they occupied in 1903, and which is owned by the Hon. Henry White. Mrs. Whitney, who before her marriage was Miss Helen Hay, a daughter of Hon. John Hay, is one of the most popular society matrons, and her hospitalities, which are many, are always most elaborate.

Grafton Cushing, one of Boston's handsomest and most popular society bachelors, numbered among the fortunates receiving an invitation to the Longworth-Roosevelt nuptials, was in Washington early in the week, when he was a guest at a musicale and dinner given at the White House. George Cabot Lodge of the Somerset Club and Mrs. Lodge were also guests.

Mrs. James Mason Rothwell, whose recent illness and operation for appendicitis was the cause of so much anxiety to her friends, is rapidly convalescing, and is now the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rothwell at their Commonwealth avenue home.

Mrs. David P. Kimball, one of society's most philanthropic matrons; Mr. John R. Thayer and Senator Murray Crane are recent contributors to the fund for the People's Palace, which the Salvation Army is about to erect.

That Guy Lowell has been selected as architect of the new Museum of Fine Arts is the source of much gratification to his numerous friends, who have watched with interest his rapid rise in his profession. Mr. Lowell is a graduate of Harvard in the class of '92, a graduate of M. I. T. in '94 and of the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris in 1899. He married Henrietta Sargent, daughter of Charles S. Sargent, and now resides in Brookline. Mr. Lowell is also a popular clubman, being a member of the Tavern, Tennis and Racquet and Country clubs.

Among the guests entertained by President Roosevelt last night at the White House, [illegible] of whom were his college mates at Harvard during the years of 1876-1880, were Robert Bacon, who in his day was captain of the football team at Harvard, Robert Winsor of the firm of Kidder Peabody & Co., Richard Saltonstall, of the law firm of [illegible] Snow & Saltonstall, William [illegible] treasurer of the Boston Elevated, [illegible] Wells, all well known [illegible].

Future Events

Among the gayer affairs left for society to enjoy before Lent is the "Hunt Dance," which Mrs. Jane Hamlin, mother of Mr. B. Nason Hamlin, is giving Friday night in honor of Miss J. Gwendelen Morse at "Stonebridge," the Hamlin mansion in Dedham.

Miss Morse is one of the Winter's debutantes and is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Lee Morse. Her father was one of the first Norfolk Hunt members with Mr. Hamlin. Happy, indeed, are those included in the two hundred invited guests as the affair will be quite as unique and smart as any of the Winter.

The men will be in pink coats, and there will be other features to make it as interesting as are all the Hamlin hospitalities.

Another affair to interest the younger members of the smart set is the dance that Charles S. Bird is giving at the Somerset for his daughter Edith and five of her sister buds.

The dinner dances to be given for Miss Elizabeth Clark at the Tuileries later in the month will be numbered among the largest of the debutante affairs of February. Miss Clark was presented [illegible] daughter of Mr. Eliot Clark. The dances are to be managed by Colonel W. D. Sohier.

Friday evening Mrs. Albert Nickerson is to give the second of her dances for this season at her home in Dedham. With the dinner dance that Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nash are giving at the Tuileries on St. Valentine's night and which is causing many a pleasant thrill of joyous anticipation, the month will not be lacking in events of the livelier sort.

With the coming of the Boston Horse Show in April, which it is predicted will be the most brilliant in Boston's horse show history, the annual bench show of the New England Kennel Club, the 20th, 21st, 22d and 23d of this month in Mechanics Building, in which society women are taking a more active interest than ever before, and for which Miss Nora Iasigi has the honor of being the first of the young society girls to make an entry, and the Country Club races, to take place June 14, 16 and 18, the coming months will not be void of interest for the sport-loving element of society, which is ever increasing.

The committee in charge of the vaudeville entertainment, to be given at Jordan Hall February 26, for the benefit of the industrial classes and kindergarten maintained by St. Stephen's Church, is composed of Mrs. R. C. Sturgis, chairman; Mr. Richard Arnold Fisher, treasurer; the Rev. and Mrs. Thatcher Kimball, Mrs. Arthur T. Cabot, Mrs. F. L. Dabney, Mrs. Charles H. Fiske, Jr., Miss Alice Sargent, Miss Helen Prince and Miss Elizabeth Porter.

The patronesses are Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. S. J. Mixter, Mrs. C. H. Joy, Miss A. A. Bigelow, Mrs. Frederic Cunningham, Miss G. G. Eaton, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. Robert Shaw Sturgis, Mrs. Robert Amory, Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, Mrs. Morton Prince, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Mrs. William C. Endicott, Jr., Miss Ellen Mason, Mrs. Charles Sargent, Mrs. H. H. Fay, Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Mrs. C. H. W. Foster, Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. J. J. Storrow, Miss Burnett, Mrs. James Jackson, Mrs. Arthur Blake, Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. Edward Brandegee, Mrs. H. L. Higginson, Mrs. Theodore Lyman and Mrs. Eben D. Jordan.

"The Pillars of Society," the play by Ibsen which is to be presented by the fashionable Jefferson Dramatic Club of Brookline in Whitney Hall, next Thursday evening, is attracting much interest among the smart folk, who are always concerned in the performances of this club. Miss Anita Calef of Marlboro street, a prominent member of the Vincent Club, who was recently chosen regent of the Abigail Adams Chapter, D. A. R., which is composed exclusively of smart Back Bay girls, is to play the leading role. Miss Beatrice C. Turner of Brookline and Miss Carmelita Shreve are other interesting society girls who will take part.

A week from Monday Miss Terry is to give the first in the series of her fashionable chamber concerts at the Somerset. She will be assisted by Bertha Cushing Child, Lucia Gale Barber and William Kittredge. The long list of patronesses contains the names of mostly every socially prominent woman in the city.

The four Lenten poets' mornings which Mr. William Heinrich is to give at the Tuileries beginning March 21 will be among the most fashionable of the literary events of the Winter. Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., Mrs. Oliver Ames, Sr., Mrs. Frank E. Peabody, Mrs. John L. Gardner, Mrs. Ole Bull, Mrs. Guy Norman, Miss Alice M. Longfellow, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, Mrs. George H. Monks, Mrs. Thatcher Loring, Mrs. J. Arthur Beebe, Mrs. George H. Chickering, Mrs. Jacob H. Hecht, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley and Mrs. George Lee are among the prominent society matrons who have already subscribed.

Engagements

Surprise was evident in the smart set Wednesday afternoon when the engagemnet of pretty and interesting Emily Lockwood, daughter of Rhodes Lockwood of Mt. Vernon street, to Mr. William Wood of Brookline was announced. Both are well known in social circles. Miss Lockwood is being deluged with flowers and felicitations.

A Boston-Baltimore engagement to interest the smart set is that of Mrs. Louise Stevens Denny of this city to Dr. William Whitridge Williams of the latter city. Dr. Williams is well known here through his association with the Harvard Medical School. He is a member of the faculty of the Western Reserve University of Cleveland. He is related to the Whitridges in Boston and belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families in Maryland. His brothers, Dr. J. Whitridge Williams and Dr. Dudley Williams of Baltimore, are graduates of Harvard and well known socially in Boston and Cambridge.

Mr. Benjamin Hurd of New York, who graduated from the Institute of Technology in '90, is receiving congratulations from his Boston friends upon his recently announced engagement to the beautiful Southern belle, Miss Elizabeth Mayre of Norfolk, Va.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Helen M. Fitch of Wellesley and Mr. Shirley S. Philbrick of Chicago. The wedding is scheduled for the early Spring, and the young couple, after an extended honeymoon, will reside in the Windy City.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Evelyn Putnam Reed of Andover, a niece of Mrs. Charles H. Masury, well known in club and social circles throughout the State, to Mr. John M. Ahern of Liverpool, England. After the marriage, which is to follow shortly, the young couple will sail for Liverpool, where they will make their home.

A notable Cambridge engagement just announced is that of Miss Margaret Goodenow, daughter of the late Colonel Nathan C. Goodenow, to Leon J. Cole of Ann Arbor, Mich.

One of the prettiest romances out of which an engagement has sprung is that of Gorham Stevens of Cambridge and New York, who has just returned from Greece where he has been studying architecture and ardently wooing a beautiful young Greek girl whom he met last Summer at one of Prince Ghika's tennis parties. His engagement has caused a mild stir in society. Mr. Stevens's connections here are of the best, being related to the Putnams, Phillipses, Francises and Dennys. He will return to Greece in the Spring, when he will be married in Athens.

Mr. Harry W. Dunn, a prominent lawyer of this city and a graduate of Harvard in the class of 1900, is kept busy receiving congratulations upon his announced engagement to Miss Nellie A. Houghton of Auburn, Me.

Weddings

A notable February bridal will be that of Miss Edith Atherton, daughter of Mrs. George G. Atherton of High street, Brookline, and Mr. Philip Seymour Johnson of Beacon street, a son of Mrs. Amos Johnson. The wedding will take place in St. Paul's Church, Brookline. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father there will be no reception after the ceremony. Mr. Johnson is a cousin of Mrs. Curtis Guild and a brother of Mr. Samuel Johnson.

Next Saturday is the day set for the wedding of Captain Charles R. Lloyd, U. S. A., of Fort Strong, Boston Harbor, and Miss Marie Baker, daughter of Commander Asher C. Baker, U. S. N., of Annapolis, Md.

A wedding of the week which attracted much attention was that of Miss Anna Belle Gray of Cambridge and J. Frank Woodward of Andover, N. H. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents by the Rev. W. S. Woodbridge of Medford. The bride, a particularly winsome girl, is a descendant of Elbridge Gerry, who signed the constitution. Four generations of her family were represented at the nuptials.

What promises to be one of the most interesting bridals of the early Spring is that of Miss Margaret Crowninshield, daughter of Mrs. Edward Crowninshield, to Professor Norton Adams Kent of New York.

Cambridge

Mr. and Mrs. William Taggard Piper of Brattle street have announced the engagement of their daughter Anne to Matthew Hale of Albany, N. Y. Mr. Hale is a Harvard man, class '03.

Miss Lucia Briggs has been elected vice-president of her class at Radcliffe. Miss Briggs is the daughter of Professor LeBaron R. Briggs.

Mrs. E. M. H. Merrill of Bellevue avenue is entertaining Miss Bertha Chapman of Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Randolph Kelley, who are spending the Winter at Norfolk, Ct., returned to Cambridge last week for an informal observance of the wedding anniversary. They spent the few days of their visit with Mr. Kelley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stillman F. Kelley.

Mrs. Jerome F. Dowing of Lee street is spending six weeks in Bermuda.

Headmaster William F. Bradbury of the Cambridge Latin School was given a delightful surprise last week by the teachers of the school. One of the pleasant features of the evening was the singing by Mrs. Kileski Bradbury.

Mrs. Hugh Cheyne held a cake sale last week at her home, No. 27 Hurlbut street, in aid of the Massachusetts State Federation bazaar.

Amateurs Are to Divide Honors With the Professionals at Local Theatres This Week.

BY J. FRANK DAVIS.

A dream of childhood and a cartoon neither the slightest reflection of real life, yet so amusing that you want to go again—that is the epitome of the past week's two theatrical openings.

Do you remember, when you were little, and sleepy, and mother had tucked you into bed and left you for the night, how the little wooden soldiers that you had safely shut in their box after playtime was over used to mysteriously get out and grow large—even as large as grown-ups—and march, and perform evolutions, and even talk? They were always back in the box when you awoke, as still and woodeny as ever, and usually you didn't tell mother about them because grown-ups laugh when little boys and girls tell them what wooden soldiers do of nights, but you knew, for years and years, that the toys had lives. And how you used to wish they'd do it daytimes, when you were out of bed to see them.

"The Babes in the Wood" is that dream come true, except that the wooden soldiers in the box were never half so entertaining as Fred Walton. There are all the other toys, seventy or more of them, come to life and marching before the little boy and girl on the Santa Claus throne. There is Toyland, with its houses of blocks, its stiff trees and its Noah's Ark animals, and there are lots of pretty ladies, who sing and dance, and some funny men who sing and dance and say quaint jokes—but none of them come up to Fred Walton. That is why the Boston Theatre, big as it is, is filled every night, for the fame of a new thing in theatricals travels as rapidly as the news of new gold fields. There are so few really new things on the stage nowadays.

Walton is not really new. He has been doing such parts as this wooden soldier for a dozen years—but America has never seen him before. He says, and his management says, that he plays speaking parts ten months of the year and pantomine only at Christmas. Let us be thankful that they offered him sufficient largess to induce him to violate this rule and be just a dumb, wooden soldier while he is in Boston.

"The Babes in the Wood," which you haven't happened to hear of before, because they called it "The Babes and the Baron" over in New York, is the first real English Christmas pantomine we have ever seen. Oh, yes, they have given us what they called Christmas pantomine—"The Beauty and the Beast" was an example of it. It was pretty, and tuneful, and elaborate, and we liked it. But it was Americanized out of all resemblance to the original. "The Babes" is Americanized somewhat, of course, otherwise we wouldn't laugh at the jokes, but the wooden soldier is just as he was—and the wooden soldier is the thing.

It would be as cruel not to take the children to see this toyland show as to make them rake the yard on circus day.

We have had plays founded on books, on Scripture texts, on songs, on hymns and on contemporary history. So far as I remember, "The Education of Mr. Pipp" is the first to be founded on a series of cartoons.

You remember the pictures, with the queenly Gibson girls, the smirking foreign noblemen, the vulgar dowager and the inoffensive henpecked Mr. Pipp, always in the rear. They were exaggerated, but they were entertaining. The play that Augustus Thomas has built around the characters of the drawings follows their example in both these particulars.

Thomas calls the play a comedy, and that is as good a name as the next, because it isn't any one thing in particular, being not only a comedy but a farce and a melodrama, with the strength about evenly divided between the latter two definitions. Mostly it is Digby Bell, who has arrived in the field of legitimate acting so emphatically that a dozen curtain calls a night is his minimum.

From Pittsburg to Paris we follow the ambitious Mrs. Pipp, the rebellious Misses Pipp and the subdued Mr. Pipp, and we are as delighted with the dumbfounding of the fortune-hunting villains and the "live-happily-ever-after" situation in which the girls find themselves as with the brilliant lines with which the piece sparkles. Helen Tracy's Mrs. Pipp is an admirable foil to Mr. Bell's dry humor, and W. S. St. Clair's Count Charmarot is a cleverly done piece of character work. Also there is a "bit," played by C. J. Williams, that is very small, but stands out prominently for its faithfulness to life.

In all good nature may a suggestion be made to the stage management? Why should the preceptor of police and the Parisian hotel proprietress, who are both presumably French and talking privately, speak in dialect to one another? They have a three-minute rapid fire conversation in the last act that seems to have quite a little to do with the plot, and I, for one, haven't the slightest idea what either of them said.

In real life there is no more a Mr. Pipp like Digby Bell that there is a toy soldier like Fred Walton. One is a broad cartoon. The other is a fairy dream. But both, for widely different reasons, are worth seeing, worth praising, worth laughing over. Which is really more worth your while? Ah, that is a question I can't answer. You'd better see them both.

THE THEATRICAL NEWS.

NON-PROFESSIONAL actors hold the centre of the local stage this week, with two remarkably promising productions. The First Corps of Cadets offer the last of their long series of theatrical events, an Indian extravaganza called "Miss Pocahontas," at the Tremont, and the Knights of Columbus will hold the Majestic Theatre all the week in a comic opera by Hugh J. McNally, called "The Isle of Dreams."

It will be an exceedingly interesting week from a professional standpoint, also. Maxine Elliott, the most beautiful woman on the stage, comes to the Hollis; E. S. Willard comes to the Colonial with his repertoire of very strong plays; a young Irish star, Fiske O'Hara, who is said to rival dear old Chauncey Olcott, comes to the Globe, and that perennial favorite, "The Volunteer Organist," plays at the Grand Opera House. The three stock companies are to produce strong plays. "Fedora," Sarah Bernhardt's great tragedy, is to be given by the Empire Theatre stock company, with Mary Hall in the title role, "The Proud Prince," originated by E. H. Sothern, is revived by the Castle Square company, and "Slaves of the Mines" by the Bowdoin Square company.

At all of the vaudeville and burlesque houses complete changes of bill are made, and "Babes in the Wood" at the Boston and "The Education of Mr. Pipp" at the Park hold over for another week.

Tremont Theatre

After a remarkable theatrical career of sixteen years the First Corps of Cadets brings its series of operatic successes to a close this week when "Miss Pocahontas" will be brought out, opening at the Tremont Theatre to-morrow night and running for six evening performances and a matinee on Saturday. The play, by Messrs. R. A. Barnet and H. M. Baker, is the best in the series. It is styled "an Indian war whoop in two whoops," the scenes being laid in Virginia and in modern civilized land.

It is filled with comedy, many musical numbers by Dan J. Sullivan and several new and lively dances arranged by M. B. Gilbert. It will be given by the largest company that the Cadets have ever presented, including such excellent comedians as W. B. C. Fox, A. A. Hallands, H. J. Stevens, F. J. Kovach and C. A. Stiet. J. S. Chipman, W. S. Powell and H. P. Stevens are cast in leading feminine roles.

Majestic Theatre

At the Majestic Theatre Monday evening next "Isle of Dreams," the Knights of Columbus' first musical comedy production, will be given its first performance. The venture is made for the purpose of establishing a fund to build a local temple for the Knights of Columbus, and success is assured.

"Isle of Dreams" is a musical comedy in [illegible] and two scenes. The book is by Hugh J. McNally, past district deputy of the order. The music was composed by Edward J. Phelan, of Lynn, while the lyrics are about equally divided between Messrs. McNally and Phelan.

The company is secured from the ranks of the Knights, many of whom have received reputations as amateur actors. The ladies were secured from the various church choirs.

Hollis Street Theatre

Miss Maxine Elliott, who will appear at the Hollis for two weeks beginning to-morrow, concluded last Fall an engagement of twelve weeks at the Criterion Theatre, New York, during which she attracted large audiences nightly, her play, "Her Great Match," meeting with universal approval. Since then she has been on tour. Miss Elliott is as beautiful as she has always been—one can say no more—and as "Jo" Sheldon, the heroine of Clyde Fitch's comedy, she has a character which is entirely congenial to her. [illegible] cast includes Charles Cherry, Herbert Standing, Leon Quartermaine, Felix Edwardes, Cory Thomas, Hodgson Taylor, Mathilde Cottrelly, Madge Girdlestone, Nellie Thorne and Susanne Perry. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Colonial Theatre

E. S. Willard seems to have been playing to something like "record breaking business in most of the places in which he [illegible] ry of the Court Square Theatre.

The programme for Mr. Willard's first week in Boston will be as follows: Monday evening, "David Garrick," by T. W. Robertson and "The Man Who Was," by Rudyard Kipling; Tuesday evening, "The Fool's Revenge," by Tom Taylor; Wednesday matinee and evening, "The Middleman," by Henry Arthur Jones; Friday evening, "A Pair of Spectacles," by Sydney Grundy, and "The Man Who Was"; Saturday matinee, "David Garrick"; [illegible] "The Man Who Was," and Saturday evening, "Tom Pinch," by Charles Dickens.

Keith's Theatre

Artistic features of Keith's vaudeville show for the week of February 5 will be Jean Marcel's bas reliefs, a form of living pictures seen here a little over a year ago. There is nothing in vaudeville more beautiful and artistic. Several new subjects have been added. These posings are by famous French models and will be a great treat for art lovers.

Prominent on the list will be found S. Miller Kent, a popular legitimate actor, in a pleasant little comedy sketch, entitled "Just Dorothy"; Smith and Campbell, two conversational comedians; Weatherby Brothers and Tracy, in a new song comedy, entitled "Bachelor Island"; the Wolpert trio, a rolats imported for the Keith circuit; Clifton Crawford, formerly of "Mother Goose" company, and well known in Boston as the author of the Cadets' "catchy" songs.

Empire Theatre

Sardou's "Fedora" is the attraction at the Empire Theatre this week. It made one of the notable successes of Mme. Bernhardt's recent engagement in this city. It was first seen in Paris twenty odd years ago, being produced there by Mme. Bernhardt just after she severed her relations with the Comedie Francaise. The version to be used at the Empire Theatre is practically a literal translation of that presented by Mme. Bernhardt and it is intended to make the stage settings and accessories follow as closely as possible those of the Bernhardt production of the play.

Castle Square Theatre

It will be a notable week at the Castle Square next week, for there will be an elaborate production of "The Proud Prince," the romantic miracle drama by Justin Huntley McCarthy, author of "If I Were King." It was produced by E. H. Sothern two seasons ago with great success, and it will be put on at the Castle Square with his complete authorization. Except for Mr. Sothern's brief engagement here, it has never before been given in Boston.

No more ambitious production has yet been made at the Castle Square. Scenery, stage settings, costumes and electrical effects will be perfect. The cast will include over 100 people. The scenes are laid near the seacoast of Sicily, and they will represent all the beauty and picturesqueness of that romantic country. The title role created by Mr. Sothern will be played by John Craig.

Globe Theatre

Fiske O'Hara, the latest of Irish stars, will make his Boston debut at the Globe Theatre at to-morrow's matinee in "Mr. Blarney from Ireland," from the pen of Charles E. Blaney. Unlike most of Mr. Blaney's pieces, the author has not depended upon sensationalism for its drawing powers but has written an up-to-date comedy drama of New York life.

Mr. O'Hara is better known to Boston playgoers by the name of George Fiske which he used when he was leading tenor of the "Bostonians" and "Isle of Spice" companies.

Grand Opera House

Nothing as pleasing to all classes has so far this season been offered to theatregoers as "The Volunteer Organist," which comes to the Grand Opera House this week. Its story is sweet and is entirely different from the efforts hitherto put forth by any dramatist. The piece may truly be called a semi-religious one, inasmuch as its plot has so much to do with the church, and indeed one of the central characters is a broad-minded, progressive minister, who, notwithstanding his liberal ideas, does not fail to accomplish in his flock the end which he set out to attain.

Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. At the Tuesday matinee the clergy of Boston and vicinity have been invited.

Boston Theatre

If the mission of a musical spectacle be to enthrall the senses, satisfy the tastes of all classes of amusement lovers, while at the same time [illegible] the best and biggest possible variety of musical and comic entertainment, together with a most sumptuous scenic [illegible] surely "Babes in the Wood" has fulfilled its mission. As presented at the Boston Theatre this, the latest [illegible] nursery rhyme [illegible] in the realm of musical spectacle or extravaganza. Most of the comedy is expressed [illegible] Fred Walton, supreme [illegible] in the role of a wooden toy soldier. [illegible] a place which fits this [illegible] situation [illegible]

Park Theatre

Boston has accorded a hearty welcome to the Gibson folk, and record-breaking success attends the engagement of Digby Bell in "The Education of Mr Pipp," at the Park Theatre. Only eight more performances of Augustus Thomas's brilliant comedy will be given. [illegible] ideal Mr. Pipp. His droll use of the Pippigrams and his willing subjection to a domineering wife instantly win sympathy.

News and Notes From the Field of Theatricals

the masculine types. The playwright follows the artist's idea, inasmuch as he takes the Pipps across the seas and entangles them with a trio of bogus noblemen.

Columbia Theatre

California's fairest daughters, thirty in number, with laughing eyes, peachy complexions, dimpled cheeks, rosebud mouths and Venus-like forms, with just a dash of vivaciousness and gaiety to set the heart of the most confirmed bachelor on the double beat, are what the patrons of the Columbia Theatre will fall captive to this week. This merry company is known as "The California Girls." They have created a furore in every city played this season. They will be seen in a two-act musical creation entitled "The Great White Way," which is one of the funniest as well as the most elaborate of the season's productions, and is full of good lyrics, capital comedy, dances and marches. A big feature will be the "Flower Ballet," which calls for a stage setting far out of the ordinary.

The olio will be given by the Four Thoroughbreds, Little Forrester, the Amatos, Curtis and Adams, Helen Russell and Nellie Sylvester.

Lyceum Theatre

Patrons of the Lyceum Theatre will enjoy an entertainment of exceptional merit next week. The attraction will be the Trocadero Burlesquers, which this season will be under the management of Charles H. Waldron, manager and owner of the Palace Theatre. Mr Waldron has rejuvenated the company, and he presents the strongest aggregation on the circuit. Two new burlesques, entitled "Hotel Astorbilt" and "A Saintly Sinner," include Frank Graham, John Boyce, Charles Mackie, Ben Walker, Annie Hill, Mae Taylor and Grace Graham.

The great feature of the olio will be Brian, who juggles projectiles, heavy cannon and a gun carriage with the ease with which an ordinary juggler handles Indian clubs. Among others in the olio are Boyce and Scanlon, comedians, the Grahams, Mae Taylor, Alf and Mabe Wilson, colored artists, and Mackie and Walker, character comedians.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Slaves of the Mine," a sensational four-act melodrama, will be seen at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. It is the kind of a play that is sure to please the habitues of the Bowdoin, for it abounds in comedy and lively action. A mining region and a strike scene are reproduced in a spectacular manner. The cast is a splendid one, made up of the favorites of the Lothrop stock. Miss Charlotte Hunt is the star, and her character of Nellie Reid is a beautiful one. Pearl De Sousiour will have a lively role, while Annette Marshall, Charles Miller, Wilmer W[illegible], Edwin Denison and the others will have good parts. The drama will be mounted with new settings. It is offered for [illegible] week, with a daily matinee and bargain prices for ladies.

Howard Athenaeum

In addition to the usual big burlesque company in a great singfest of feature [illegible] the Old Howard will offer this week an even dozen of the best acts of vaudeville. The Orpheus Comedy Four are announced as America's premier singing comedians; the Kita Banzai troupe, Japanese acrobats; the Two Racketts, in their comedy success "The Village Blacksmith," in which Mr Rackett will impersonate Bob Fitzsimmons; Daisy Lar[illegible], one of the favorite comediennes of London; Tacott, "the white coon"; Mlle. [illegible], the physical culture girl; Davey and Phillips, comedy skitlists, new to the Howard; the Lippincotts, song and dance [illegible]; Corrigan and Hayes, the burnt cork [illegible]; Al Burke, novelty dancer, and the Howardscope with some new moving pictures comprise the olio. In the burlesque the new comers are Annie Morris and [illegible] Hart, while several of last week's favorites will again give a good account of themselves.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Broncho John, king of the cowboys, famous on two continents, comes to Boston to-morrow for the first time in ten years and will renew old acquaintances at Austin & Stone's Museum. Broncho John is the dashing hero of a hundred Indian fights. He will bring with him his great west show, including a score of daredevils, superb horsemen, dead shots, scouts, trappers and knights of the plains. They will appear in wild west togs with their guns, knives and other implements and present an entertainment replete with illustrations of life on the plains.

From far away cannibal lands will come to the museum this week [illegible] Reno, the master minds of intelligence from the South Sea Islands. John T. [illegible] will exhibit his Marionettes. Trixie and the biggest snake on earth, Ben Hur and a dozen other attractions will be seen in the curio hall. In Powell's "Minstrel Maids" production this week the stars will be Harry Powell, as interlocutor; Charley Clark, the prince of black face artists; Lewis LeClair and Billy Green, end men.

Palace Theatre

For this week at the Palace Theatre the "Paris by Night" company, including two burlesques and a dozen specialties, first part called "Gay Life in Paris" and in a rollicking finish, entitled "On the Avenue La Grand," furnish the bill. Messrs. Campbell and Caulfield, Vic Jerome, Bobby Raymond, John Russ, Herbert Simon and Frank Terrill, with that polished comedienne, Lottie Freeman, create the fun, while such talented burlesquers as Maggie Lee Clark, Catherine Taylor and Emily Simpson will sustain the musical burden. There is also a chorus of twenty shapely girls, brightly gowned in Paris made costumes.

In the olio are the "Majestic Musical Four," Miss Catherine Taylor, late of the Bostonians; Faust trio in their acrobatic act, Campbell and Caulfield, the Irish comedians, and Raymond and Clark, rapid-fire conversationalists.

"Mizpah" Coming.

Boston playgoers will take a special interest in the forthcoming Frohman production of "Mizpah" at the Majestic Theatre a week hence, in view of the fact that its central figure, Queen Esther, is portrayed by Miss Adele Block. This charming young actress, whose Jewish blood and striking type of Semitic beauty would seem to specially fit her for this role of the Old Testament Queen, is a Boston girl and makes this city her home when she is not engaged in footlight work. She studied music at the Conservatory of Music and has a host of friends here.

Clergy at Grand Opera House

Tuesday afternoon, February 6, will mark a memorable event in the history of the Grand Opera House, as over 700 ministers of Boston and vicinity are the invited guests of William B. Gray, the author playwright, to witness the production of his pastoral drama, "The Volunteer Organist." This play has received the voluntary indorsements of the clergy of the States and Canada.

Sunday Concerts

One of the most interesting concerts ever given in the Colonial Theatre will be that for the benefit of the Charlestown Veteran Firemen's Association Relief Fund on February 11. The chief feature will be the Fifth Regiment Band.

Miller's wonderful trained elephants will head the bill at the Majestic Theatre Sunday concert to-night. The act comes direct from the New York Hippodrome. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Truesdell and company, Seymore and Dupre, the Maxsmith duo, Johnson and Wells, Miles and Raymond and the Majestiscope complete the bill.

George Wilson, the minstrel, with a lot of new stories, heads the bill at the Sunday concert at the Globe Theatre to-night. Then there are Moore and Schley, Harry Cantell, Miller's educated elephants, Mr and Mrs. Howard Truesdell and company, the Maxsmith duo and a half dozen others.

Mr and Mrs. Mark Murphy in their best comedy, George H. Wood, the comedian; Brown, Harris and Brown, Milt Wood, Orville and Frank, Kennedy and Wyble, George H. Whalen, the Healy sisters, Mike Scott, the Clermonds and Lizzie Ott, all will participate at the concert to-night in the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Roller Skating

Manager Byrne of the Park Square Roller Skating Rink has been weeding out all the objectionable element among the patrons of his rink, and has raised the standard of the amusement greatly. The rink is now a popular resort for ladies in the afternoons and evenings, and the music by the Royal Italian Band adds greatly to the pleasures of skating. There are a number of unusual skating events prepared for the coming week.

Coming Attractions

Ernest Hogan, the "Unbleached American," who created such excitement at the Globe Theatre a week ago with his "Rufus Rastus," is to play a return engagement there for the week beginning February 12.

William H. Crane brings his latest comedy, "An American Lord," to the Hollis Street Theatre on February 19.

"At the World's Mercy," by Owen Davis, comes to the Grand Opera House soon. "After Midnight" is also booked for an early production at this house.

"I'll Never Forget You, Dear."

A Love Story With Points of Real Originality, Published To-Day as Part Of This Newspaper.

Popular songs of serious sentiment seem to be improving, both in their poems and in their musical settings. That which is printed to-day as a separate section of this newspaper—"I'll Never Forget You, Dear"—while simple and sincere, as a love song must be or prove barren of effect, it has points of originality and sound art which are unfortunately missing in many of its rivals for public favor.

While making use of the very popular waltz measure, the composer, with his melody and piano accompaniment, has woven together phrases that are not trite, that have the ring of a fresh inspiration. The leaps of an octave up and down are so arranged to produce real notes of passion demanded by the words given to them. And all the desirable musical effects are gained without resort to unfamiliar intervals outside the original key.

The words of the song make a poem considerably superior to that of the average love song. This is the first stanza, with the refrain:

I think of you in the sunshine,
  I dream, night and day, of you,
When all the world is then silent,
  And stars shine out in blue,
And if the hour then be golden,
  Or whether the day be drear,
Your love is beside me always—
  I'll never forget you, dear!

The stars may forget their places,
  The day may forget, dear, to break;
The flight of the hours may alter,
  The rose may forget, dear, to wake;
But love that is true is forever, dear;
  Not a day, nor a month, nor a year!
To the end of the world I love you—
  I'll never forget you, dear!

This making of true love more stable and dependable than any and all the fixed objects and established functions of the universe is a very pretty idea that is not hackneyed, and that has enabled the composer to get away from the commonplace in his melody of "I'll Never Forget You, Dear."

An Appeal

To Be Fair to Yourself—to Learn by a Test what Liquozone Means to You. The First Bottle is Free.

To you who are sick and are waiting—this appeal is to you. An appeal to be fair with yourself.

Don't think that the help which you need is impossible, because common remedies fail as they must fail in germ troubles. Please send us this coupon and learn, at our expense, how much a new remedy means to you.

In the past two years, millions of people have begun to use Liquozone. To-day there are countless cured ones, scattered over half the world, telling what it has done. We ask you to learn its wonderful power as they did. Let us buy you a bottle to try.

What Liquozone Is.

The virtues of Liquozone are derived solely from gases, created from five substances, all of which are stated on the bottle. These substances include the best producers of oxygen, sulphur dioxide and other germicidal gases.

The process of making requires large apparatus and from 8 to 14 days' time; and it is directed by chemists of the highest class. The object is to so fix and combine the gases as to carry their virtues into the system. The result is a blending of gas-made products, each of which is now endorsed, as a remedial agent, by the world's highest authorities.

The gases are harmless, and the product they create is harmless. The gases are beneficial, and the result is a tonic. The gases are germicidal, and uniting with the liquid multiplies their germ-killing power.

Liquozone contains no alcohol, no opiates, no narcotics. Every virtue comes from gas alone. The invention of Liquozone has meant a way to utilize gases in the treatment of germ diseases.

Kills Disease Germs.

The main value of Liquozone lies in the fact that it is deadly to germs, yet helpful to bodily tissues. It is a germicide so certain that we publish with every bottle an offer of $1,000 for the discovery of a disease germ which Liquozone cannot kill.

Common germicides are poisons which cannot be taken internally. They destroy the tissues as well as the germs. That is why medicine has proved so helpless in dealing with germ diseases.

Liquozone is not only harmless, but it is a tonic. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Its benefits are quickly apparent—often from the very first dose.

The fact that Liquozone is so destructive to germs is attributed to the fact that germs are of vegetable origin. They apparently absorb this gas-made product, and it ends their activity. But the cells of the body—being animal—thrive by Liquozone.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone, after its power had been demonstrated. This was after the product had been tested for years, in hundreds of cases, including many of the most difficult diseases of mankind. At first the results seemed incredible, and the tests were repeated again and again to confirm them. When the power of the product was thus proved beyond question, we purchased the rights and brought it into wider fields.

Since then we have let every sick one we learned of test it at our expense. The result is that millions have learned by experience some things that Liquozone can do. Most of the cured told others, and the others told others. The result is that about 12,000,000 bottles of Liquozone have been used, mostly in the past two years. There is now almost no hamlet—no neighborhood—without living examples of its power.

Now other chemists and companies, in alliance with us, are supplying it to other nations. It is hoped, before long, that every nook of the world where sickness exists will have Liquozone there to combat it.

Germ Diseases.

In the past few years, scores of diseases have been traced to germ attacks. All of these diseases, until a few years ago, were attributed to other causes, and treated in various and ineffective ways.

The list of known germ diseases now numbers about one hundred. It includes most of our minor ills, and most of our serious sickness. And there are very few diseases which are known not to be due, directly or indirectly, to a germ infection.

Some germs—as in skin troubles—directly attack the tissues. Some create toxins, causing such troubles as Rheumatism, Blood Poison, Kidney Disease and nerve weakness. Some destroy vital organs as in Consumption. Some—like the germs of Catarrh—create inflammation; some cause indigestion. Directly or indirectly, nearly every serious ailment is a germ result.

Any disease which calls for a germicide, or for a tonic, calls for Liquozone. In this class of troubles, this gas-made product has rendered immeasurable service. It brings such results as may not be brought without it.

In any ailment caused in any way by germs, we supply the first bottle of Liquozone free. Then in all—no matter how difficult—we offer each user a two months' further test without the risk of a penny.

50¢ Bottle Free.

If you need Liquozone, and have never tried it, please send us this coupon. We will then mail you an order on a local druggist for a full-size bottle, and will pay the druggist ourselves for it. This is our free gift, made to convince you; to let the product itself show you what it can do. Its acceptance places you under no obligations whatever.

If your ailment is not one to which Liquozone applies, we will tell you. If it is, we will give you the fullest advice and directions, based on a vast experience.

Please don't delay or hesitate. Don't suffer from a trouble that Liquozone can end. Please learn at our expense how much this product means to you. Send us this coupon today.

$45,000 TO PROVIDENT VICTIMS.

Proposal of Receivers May Result in Partial Repayment to Bank Depositors

WOULD SELL INTERESTS IN THE SHENANDOAH CO.

MEANS 25 PER CENT. WITHIN NINETY DAYS

Other Assets May in Time Bring a Further Return to the 8,900 Interested

Forty-five thousand dollars for the partial repayment of the depositors of the Provident Securities and Banking Company will be become available within ninety days, if the proposition made yesterday by Receivers Weed and Hall to D. C. Willoughby, representing himself, Charles D. Gurley and Milford Steele, president of the Shenandoah Irrigation and Land Company, is accepted by them and confirmed by the court.

The proposition as made by the receivers is that they will entertain and recommend to the Court for acceptance an offer from Mr. Gurley and his associates of $45,000 for all the interests of the Provident company in the Shenandoah Irrigation & Land Company.

Mr. Willoughby believes this will prove acceptable to his associates, as it is to him, and the receivers believe it will be acceptable to the Court. Mr. Willoughby further stated that if the arrangement could be made he personally will make a payment of $5,000 as an evidence of good faith and to bind the bargain.

Mr. Steele arrived in Boston from New York on the Merchants' limited, reaching the South Station at 10:10 o'clock. When told by a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter of the proposition of the receivers, Mr. Steele at first seemed to think it would not be acceptable to Mr. Gurley and himself. He drove from the station to the Hotel Lexington, where Mr. Willoughby is living, and after a short talk with him, apparently changed his mind, as he said:

"I am inclined to think we can get together on that basis."

Only Part of Assets.

No assets of the Provident company are included in this offer, except the 142,500 shares of stock and six bonds of the Shenandoah company. The other assets, including the Franco-American Gelatine Company stock and notes, will be held by the receivers.

The conference between the receivers and Mr. Willoughby was held in the receivers' office, room No. 931 Exchange building. Lucius R. Eastman, attorney for the depositors' committee, was also present. After the conference, Receiver Hall speaking for the receivers and Mr. Willoughby, said:

"Charles D. Gurley and his associates have, within the past few days, made a written proposition to take over the assets of the Provident company and to assume the liabilities of the company to the depositors in the auxiliary department, paying 10 per cent. in cash and the balance in debentures of the Shenandoah Irrigation and Land Company. The receivers have not felt justified to accept such a proposition nor to recommend it to the court and have so informed Mr. Gurley. We could not ask the court to authorize such a settlement and we decided to try further negotiations.

"The receivers have to-day told Mr.

DEAD.

ONE KILLED AND 6 INJURED IS RECORD OF DAY IN BOSTON

Remarkable Feature Is That Legs Are Broken in All the Accident Cases

One death and six serious injuries were the net result of a series of accidents in Boston yesterday. A remarkable feature was that all of the accidents were broken legs.

The dead man is Patrick F. Reagan, forty-nine years old, of No. 359 Silver street, South Boston, who died late last night at the City Hospital as a result of injuries received in the South Boston yards of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. Reagan was run over by a [illegible] and both of his legs were crushed at the knees so that amputation was necessary.

The other injuries about the city were not so serious. Captain Peter J. Cole of Calais, captain of the schooner Native American, which is anchored at Bucks Wharf, Charlestown, while watching the firemen fight a blaze on Hanover street was pushed off the sidewalk, breaking his right leg below the knee.

Henry H. Miles, fifty-three years old, of Squantum street, Quincy, caught his foot in the street car tracks in Dewey square, fell to the ground and fractured his leg.

Ella M. Bradley, fifty-one years old, fell in a coal hole opposite No. 30 Winter street, and fractured her leg. A quantity of lumber fell upon the foot of Allen Sagrow at the Standard Storage Company's building in Charlestown, fracturing his ankle.

While at work for the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad John Birch, sixty-one years old, was struck by a bale of cotton and both legs were fractured.

BATTLING NELSON GUEST OF MRS. JACK GARDNER

"Battling" Nelson, the champion prize fighter, was a guest in Mrs. "Jack" Gardner's Fenway palace yesterday afternoon. The admission, which money cannot buy, and which high social position cannot obtain, was freely given to the little gladiator from [illegible].

Nelson [illegible] engagement at the Howard [illegible] decided [illegible] day in town he [illegible] afford to take a little rest and amuse[illegible]. It could not [illegible] away from Boston without [illegible] of those things —besides [illegible] which it is justly famed, [illegible] to embody so much of the grandeur of civilization and art of Boston as the Fen[illegible].

Having just drawn his salary of $1,250 for the week he decided that he could take a cab and [illegible] enough left for a ham sandwich. His manager, William Nolan, told Nelson he was getting bats on the top floor, but that did not bother the fighter any. He felt sure of a cordial reception, though Nolan insisted that it was likely to be more warm than cordial.

And lo! everything fell out as the man [illegible] pened that Mrs. Gardner was slightly indisposed and could not give the celebrated American the glad welcome that might otherwise have been his, but the freedom of the palace was his, and he was free to gaze and "rubber" as much as he liked.

Nelson made a discovery too. Contrary to report, these men in buttons at the gates are not deaf mutes [illegible] but very healthy-minded Americans. Pretty soon he returned all smiles. Mrs. Gardner had heard the famous name. She was indisposed, but Nelson was to have the freedom of the palace.

SAY MRS. JACK'S "GIORGIONE" THE REAL MASTERPIECE

Special Cable to Boston American

Milan, Feb. 3.—The report recently cabled to some American papers that the picture of "Christ with the Cross," by Giorgione, bought by Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, of Boston, was only a cleverly executed copy, is officially denied.

An investigation made by the authorities at Vicenza has revealed that the painting at present on exhibition in the galleries of the Loschi-Zileri Palace in that city is only a copy, and that the original is missing.

The living members of the "Zilerie" have all been questioned by the authorities and it appears that the painting was sold for $20,000 to one of the experts employed by the American woman collector eight years ago. Since then the members of the Zilerie family have fooled all the government inspectors by exhibiting the clever copy they had caused to be made, which, however, could not have deceived any expert.

2 MORE WOMEN ATTACKED BY 'SLASHER.'

Mysterious Miscreant Cuts Hair from Head of Mrs. Sullivan in Charlestown.

LATER APPEARS IN THE SOUTH END IN SKIRTS

Tries to Snip Off Tresses of Girl, Who Proves Too Quick for Him.

"Jack the Slasher," who, within the past ten days has robbed a score of girls and women of their hair, made his appearance in Charlestown last night, cutting the hair from the head of one woman and later, disguised as a woman, is believed to have attempted to do the same thing to a girl on Washington street, at the South End.

The Charlestown woman, who was the latest victim of the man whom the police believe to be insane, was Mrs. D. Sullivan, who lives at No. 21 Tufts street. She was ascending the steps of her residence shortly after 8 o'clock when she was seized by the shoulders, her head drawn back and her hair, which was coiled up on her head, snipped off with a pair of shears.

As she turned she saw a man running away. She screamed and called her husband, who was in the house, but before he could get to the street the man was out of sight.

Disguised as a Woman.

Mrs. Sullivan describes the man as being about five feet five inches in height, twenty-five years old, smooth shaven and rather good looking. He was of dark complexion and wore dark clothing.

The supposed "Slasher" who attacked fourteen-year-old Gladys Doyle at the corner of Washington and Concord streets was dressed as a woman, but several who saw the person believe it was a man in disguise. The man, or woman, stepped from a [illegible] and approaching Miss Doyle, seized her by the shoulder. Maud Parks, who was with Miss Doyle, said "Slasher!" and Miss Doyle, reaching over her shoulder, seized her braids of hair, at the same time drawing a hat pin from her hat as a weapon.

Her assailant pushed her into the street and ran, pursued by several men who had witnessed the occurrence, but they were unable to catch him. Miss Parks is positive that the attack was made by a man, as she said she noticed the peculiar walk and also noticed that the feet were much larger than an ordinary woman's.

Within the last dozen days more than a score of little girls and at least two women in Greater Boston have been attacked by the so-called "Jack the Slasher" and robbed of their hair. Frankly, the police believe that this miscreant is a maniac [illegible] out for a more violent turn of his [illegible] insanity. For this reason [illegible] every [illegible] they have [illegible].

This is the most remarkable case of the kind [illegible] New England has [illegible] the [illegible] of the Slasher [illegible] and the number of victims is larger than have been reported to the police of Boston in any similar case.

In one of his latest attacks the miscreant was disguised as a woman. He wore a shawl over his face, and with a skirt to complete the illusion was seen by at least two persons.

Chased Him, Screaming.

"I was leaving the house to get some milk at a grocery store nearby, and as I got into the inner corridor I saw the man looking out of the door in the outer corridor. I thought it was a woman and passed into the hallway without any fear. I was just about to open the outer door when he grabbed me.

"My first instinct was to scream, but I thought of my sister, critically ill upstairs, and feared to frighten her. I tried to fight the man off, for I knew it was a man by the strength of the grip upon my shoulder. [illegible] I could raise my hand he had forced me against the wall, and with some sharp weapon, I think it was a razor, had cut through my hair.

"I tried to catch him and struggled so that he let go and ran out of the street. He crossed the road, and I chased him screaming. He ran down the alleyway at the back of the Cadets' armory to Columbus avenue, and was lost in the crowd. I then reported the matter to the police."

BATTLE RAGES WHILE CROWD OUTSIDE WATCHES

Barred out by locked doors, hundreds of men and women stood clamorously on Washington street early last evening and watched a scene in real life so thrilling that it might have been lifted from a "yellow" melodrama. It was a fight to a finish between two bold thieves and the proprietor and an employe at William C. Gregor's optical establishment at No. 341 Washington street.

There was the theatrical accompaniment of a revolver in the hands of one of the thieves, there was the persistent effort on his part to kill Mr. Gregor, there was the fierce, desperate struggle of Gregor to prevent this, and finally there was the escape of one of the thieves by a trick so startling and unexpected that it succeeded. What seemed to be a surrender was followed instantly by a successful dash for freedom, with hundreds in pursuit.

The robbery occurred just at that moment when Washington street is most crowded. It occurred in a store so brilliantly lighted that any attempt at robbery could have succeeded only by the sheer boldness that these two men displayed, and it occurred in a manner which showed the planning of a clever brain.

Crook Defends Pal.

As a result of the arrival of the police one of the greatest of the old-time "crooks," Maurice Conley, a man who has served two terms in Sing Sing for $13,000 at one time, and $10,000 at another, was taken. His pal escaped.

Conley calmly refuses to give the slightest clue to his pal's identity, and takes without comment the charge of robbery which has been preferred against him.

The principals in the little melo drama which was so singularly unrolled for the benefit of hundreds of passers by were Conley, sometimes known as "Mofley," William C. Gregor, proprietor of the store, Dr. Charles L. Stockwell, an employee, and the unknown "crook" for whom a general alarm has been sent out.

Conley and his pal entered the store at fifteen minutes of seven o'clock. For a time they had stood in front of the display window and admired a pair of field glasses. When they entered they were greeted by Mr. Gregor in person. Dr. Stockwell, an optician, was in the rear room attending to his duties. Conley and his pal spoke to Mr. Gregor and expressed a desire to see the glasses displayed in the window.

In order to get these glasses it was necessary for Mr. Gregor to enter the window, leaving the store practically deserted. The minute he disappeared into the window, Conley rushed for the back of the store where a cash drawer, without an alarm, contained the money. His pal was left in front as guard.

Conley's familiarity with the location of the cash drawer showed that he had examined it beforehand. He had no difficulty in opening it, and was returning to the front of the store when Mr. Gregor stepped out of the show window. Mr. Gregor saw just enough to know there was a trick of some kind and he shouted to Dr. Stockwell to come to catch Conley.

"Stop, or I Shoot!"

Then Mr. Gregor leaped over the counter and closed the front of the store. It fastened with a spring lock. Then, as Dr. Stockwell came out from the rear, Mr. Gregor advanced upon Conley and his pal. Instantly Conley drew his revolver.

"Stop, or I'll shoot," he exclaimed.

Undaunted by the threat, Mr. Gregor advanced and Conley raised the revolver. As he did so Dr. Stockwell struck down his arm and Mr. Gregor leaped forward. His arms twined about the "crook." Conley's pal started to run.

"Grab him," shouted Mr. Gregor.

Dr. Stockwell threw his arms about Conley's pal and in a moment the four were rolling on the floor. The struggle was desperate. Time after time Conley tried to bring the revolver into firing position, but Gregor struck down his arm, while Mr. Stockwell and the other man fought frantically.

Then began the clamor in the street. The violent slamming of the glass door first attracted attention and a few stopped

$4,000,000 LOSS IN EAST ST. LOUIS FIRE.

Union Elevators and Wabash Railroad Station Destroyed by Fierce Blaze.

From DeForest Wireless Telegraph Company, and by Boston American Leased Wire.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 3.—A fire which has already destroyed more than millions of dollars' worth of property, including the station of the Wabash Railroad and the Union Elevators, containing 1,000,000 bushels of wheat valued at $1 a bushel, is threatening the entire water front of East St. Louis. The fire started in the grain elevators at 11.30 to-night. The fire had gained such headway when discovered that absolutely no progress could be made in checking it, and the firemen devoted their attention to the saving of the remainder of the water front.

Fifteen houses, including workmen's shacks, went down in less than an hour. The St. Louis Transfer Company's big stables were swept out of existence as if they were of paper. Four hundred head of horses and mules have been [illegible].

At 2.30 this morning the AMERICAN received from the DeForest Wireless Telegraph Company a direct dispatch from the scene, stating that the Burlington railroad's station was included in the blaze, which had not yet been controlled. The estimate at that hour was that the loss will reach about $4,000,000, as the blaze was spreading along the river front and the wind had not died down.

WILD NIGHT OF FIRES IN BOSTON; $20,000 DAMAGE

Choking with smoke, fifty-eight persons, mostly children, were driven in their nightclothes on to the street by a blaze in the eight-suite building at No. 113 Union Park street just before midnight.

Barefooted and thinly clad, as most of them were, they made a pitiful sight, shivering in the cold, until they were taken into nearby houses and cared for until the fire was out.

Fred Crowley, a son of one of the tenants, came home and entered the house, only to be driven back by the dense smoke coming from the cellar. He rushed for the box and sent in an alarm, and then came back and aroused the inmates.

With two of his brothers they went into the cellar with pails of water. In a small closet was found a mattress burning briskly. The heat had melted the gas pipe in the closet.

The occupants of the house had some difficulty in fighting their way out through the smoke, which had filled the house so completely that the gas refused to burn.

$15,000 LOST WHEN FIRE MELTS 80,000 GRAPHOPHONE RECORDS

Fifteen thousand dollars damage was done in fifteen minutes and 80,000 graphophone records destroyed by fire at the Boston Cycle and Sundry Company building, No. [illegible] street, about 9.30 o'clock last night. Beside the records which were melted by the intense heat, very little damage was done. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

CROSSED ELECTRIC WIRES START BLAZE IN A LEATHER STORE

A blaze among the stock of the Surpass Leather Company, on the second floor of No. 30 South street, last night, did $2,000 damage. The building, a four-story brick, is used exclusively by this company, the second floor being used for storing their enamel goods. The fire was caused by crossed electric wires, and the loss was due more to water than to the blaze.

WOMAN BURNED, FIRE HORSE INJURED IN BACK BAY BLAZE

Lace curtains coming in contact with a lighted gas jet in the apartments of Mrs. Mary S. Law, who lives on the top floor of the apartment house at No. 2 St. James avenue, caused $25 damage and severely burned Mrs. Law while she endeavored to extinguish the blaze.

While responding to the alarm, Driver William Budreau, of engine No. 33, was thrown from his seat by the colliding of the engine with a cab horse at the corner of [illegible] and Boylston streets. The favorite horse, Bess, of the engine company, was cut in the breast and was taken to the [illegible] hospital. The cab was demolished.

SUMMER COTTAGE DESTROYED BY FIRE AT NANTASKET

Fire which entirely destroyed the Summer cottage of Louis F. Galiano at Stony Beach, Nantasket, and also damaged the Stony Beach railroad station last night.

People in Lynn and in other places along the South Shore saw the flames, which lighted up the entire beach, and reports were current that some ship was afire at sea. The flames could be seen for miles.

The fire is thought to have been of incendiary origin. The house was valued at $1,500.

SAY COLONIAL LIFE SHORT $18,000.

Fraternal Society Receiver to Begin Action by Suit for $35,000.

PRESIDENT DECLARES HE RECEIVED NO SALARY

Following a suit for $35,000 to be brought against the Colonial Life Association on Monday by Henry A. Wyman as receiver, who alleges a shortage of $18,000 in the funds, will probably come a deep probe into the affairs of the association by the State Insurance Commission. The suit is directed against the officers of the company in Essex and Suffolk counties.

President Joseph J. Wall of the association, whose office is at No. 57 Chatham street, this city, stated to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN that the actual management of the association was in the hands of G. W. Starbird of Lynn. Mr. Starbird was at home last night, but too ill to be seen, nor would his wife receive a message concerning the Colonial Life Association to convey to him.

The Colonial was a fraternal association with a membership of about 9,000. It had branches in several cities of the State and did business up to last April, when it went into the hands of a receiver. To the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN President Wall said:

"I am not, nor have I been interested in the company. I was elected president about two years ago—the books will show exactly when—and served without salary. I don't know a great deal about the affairs of the company. The actual management was in the hands of Mr. Starbird. The office of president was one of those honors that are thrust upon men occasionally."

While the matter has been brought to the attention of the Insurance Commissioners, the direct effort to bring out all the affairs of the company will be made through John J. Higgins, attorney, of the firm of Gleason & Higgins of No. 60 State street.

The officers who will be named in the civil proceedings are Joseph J. Wall of No. 57 Chatham street, Boston, president; Benjamin H. Goldsmith, treasurer; Dr. George E. Whittier of Haverhill, and Mrs. George E. Whittier of Haverhill, a director.

ASKS $15,000 FOR DAUGHTER'S DEATH

Worcester, Feb. 3.—Mrs. Mary McNulty of No. 74 Merrick street has brought suit against the Denholm & McKay Company of this city to recover $15,000 for the death of her daughter, Grace. Miss McNulty was employed in the store and was caught between the elevator and the first floor of the building, receiving injuries which resulted in her death.

At the inquest conflicting stories were told by employes of the store. Martin McDonough, the elevator boy, and Miss Lena Gately, a cash girl, were the only witnesses of the accident.

PROVIDENT VICTIMS MAY GET 25 PER CENT. OF THEIR DEPOSITS WITHIN 90 DAYS

By Boston Sunday American Photographer.

SNAPSHOT OF D. C. WILLOUGHBY, BEFORE DOOR OF CONFERENCE ROOM.

Offer to Dispose of Shenandoah Interests, if Accepted, Will Yield $45,000.

Willoughby, who represents Mr. Gurley, Mr. Steele, himself, and perhaps others, that it may devolve upon the receivers to visit the Shenandoah property and judge of its value for themselves. On the other hand, it may not be necessary, as we know of at least two responsible men in Boston who have already made such an examination.

May Sell for $45,000.

"If the receivers do not find from inspection or information that the property is different from what we suppose it to be, as we say to Mr. Willoughby, an agreement may be reached by which the Provident company may be allowed to sell its interest in the Shenandoah—and the Shenandoah interests are the only ones under consideration—for the sum of $45,000, the money to be paid in 60 or 90 days."

Mr. Willoughby interrupted and asked Mr. Hall to make it clear that this was in no way conditional upon investigation.

Mr. Hall replied that it was conditional upon the Shenandoah property being found not essentially different from what it had been represented to be.

Continuing Mr. Hall said: "We also said to Mr. Willoughby that we could not offer any more favorable terms than that, if, instead of this, he wanted to submit a spot cash proposition of a similar nature we would give it consideration, but this proposition is as good, as we will recommend to the court.

"Mr. Willoughby was hopeful that the proposition would be accepted and will confer with his associates to see if they are willing, as he expresses himself to be. He hopes for their confirmation and will let us know at an early date."

$5,000 As Guarantee.

Mr. Willoughby replied that he would see to it at once. Mr. Steele was on his way to Boston and might arrive in time so that a decision could be given by Monday.

"If they agree I will make a personal deposit of $5,000 as a guarantee of good faith. Such an agreement will mean a cancellation of all interests in the Shenandoah."

Mr. Hall added: "There is no agreement concerning any other assets of the bank. They are not in consideration. No negotiations have been approached about the Franco-American Company or other assets. This proposition will be subject to the approval of the court."

There was on deposit in the auxiliary department of the Provident company about $180,000 in 8 900 accounts. Of this sum $45,000 is twenty-five per cent. In addition to this the receivers have a few hundreds of dollars that were found in the bank and a little more received from the sale of the furniture. They also have a note of the Great Western Salt and Soda Company, indorsed by Horatio Adams, treasurer of the company, for $10,000. In this the Provident company has an equity of $6,000. This note probably is good, as Mr. Adams is reputed to be fully able to pay it and probably can be obliged to do so, even if he is not willing.

As Mr. Willoughby left the conference he was approached by a deputy sheriff, who conversed with him for several minutes. They then went to an office on Congress street. Later Mr. Willoughby said that the deputy sheriff wished to see him in regard to some little trouble he had had some time ago with Arthur Doherty, a scene shifter of this city. He declared that he had arranged the matter and anticipated no further annoyance.

CROWDS WATCH THIEVES FIGHT TO RIFLE STORE

to look in. They shouted and others rushed to the scene. For several minutes they stood helplessly peering through the windows into the brilliantly lighted store at the fighters.

The crowd, in its eager excitement, forgot to call the police. It merely stood shouting and battering vainly at the stout door while the battle raged.

Mr. Gregor and Dr. Stockwell fought frantically to hold their prisoners and the "crooks" fought with the desperation born of seeming certain capture. Then Mr. Gregor began to weaken; Conley was a more powerful man. Dr. Stockwell was faring badly, too, in the hands of the second man.

Police to Rescue.

At this moment the attention of Patrolman Daly was attracted by the crowd in the street. He forced his way to the the door and looked in. Seeing the situation, he tried to force the door. From inside Mr. Gregor saw him and released Conley to open the door. Dr. Stockwell, panting and exhausted, also released his prisoner.

Mr. Gregor threw open the front door. Conley's pal raced for this possible avenue of escape and Conley also started toward the door. Dr. Stockwell seized Conley, but the second man threw himself into Patrolman Daly's arms.

"Hold him!" shouted Mr. Gregor.

It was just too late. The unexpected weight of the thief had staggered the policeman a little and enabled the "crook" to wriggle out of his arms. Then this man fought his way through the crowd which had gathered, smashing here and there impartially, avoiding grasping hands, and before the policeman had recovered was running along Washington street. Inside Mr. Gregor and Dr. Stockwell were clinging to Conley.

A half-hearted attempt was made by the crowd to follow the second thief, but he shook them off after a race of a block or more. Policeman Daly disarmed Conley and took him in charge. He recovered both $67 [illegible] approximate $100 which had been in the cash drawer.

Police assistance was summoned and search for the second man began. It continued practically all night without result. When Conley was asked for his name he laughed.

At the Court Street Police Station Conley was identified as the Maurice Conley of police fame.

Conley is a handsome, well-dressed man of thirty-two years. He has served two terms in Sing Sing, one of seven years and one of three, having been just released.

Upon being released from his first term at Sing Sing he was turned over to the Boston police and served a term in the Concord Reformatory for the theft of $200 and a gold watch and chain from a South Boston pawnshop. In all three jobs the same methods were employed.

He has eminently respectable parents living in this city.

Kansas City has a doctor who has found what the medical profession have been seeking to learn for many years, "The Uses of the Appendix Vermiform." This doctor, C. H. Carson, looks upon surgical operations that remove the appendix as a crime against nature. He has cured permanently every case of appendicitis that has been brought to him for treatment at his home, Twelfth and Washington Sts., Kansas City, Mo. He publishes a magazine which gives full details of this method of treatment and will send it to all who write for it.—From the Kansas City Journal.

SCORES HURT IN PARIS CHURCH FIGHTS.

POPE ADVISES HIS PEOPLE TO SUBMIT

Paris, Feb. 3.—As a net result of the rioting, though the inventory was taken in only one church, that of St. Pierre du Gros Caillou, over forty persons were seriously injured and a further considerable number slightly hurt. The latter included a number of police and firemen who were almost blinded with cayenne pepper. Fifty arrests were effected. The storming of the building was greatly protracted owing to the use by the "defenders" of red pepper.

M. Louise Lepine, prefect of Paris, and other high officials, and the newspapers of all shades of opinion, deprecate the [illegible] incidents.

Clergy Advise Peace.

It is said that the clergy have done their best by advice to their congregations to remain calm, but without avail, the militant Catholics being firmly resolved to resist what they term the spoliation of the many Paris churches, containing many millions of francs' worth of jewelry, military medals and decorations, given by devotees as thank offerings.

It is charged that the blame for the recent conflicts attaches to the Minister of the Interior because of his order that the inventory of the churches should be carried out before the regulations under the separation law are definitely drawn up.

This leaves the Catholics uncertain regarding the eventual fate of Church property, and their doubts on this subject have brought about their resistance to the order and its results.

Women Join Fight.

The fight at the church of St. Pierre du Gros Caillon, was more violent than the one that ocurred at the Church of St. Clothilde, many persons receiving ugly wounds. There was undoubtedly a considerable proportion of fervent Catholics of both sexes among those who resisted who believed in the sanctity of their cause and who were prepared for martyrdom, but many were mere anti Republican partisans, including Royalists, Imperialists and Nationalists. Baroness Reille was brought out by the police, among other prominent prisoners. She exclaimed, "Well, we have made a glorious defence."

Of the 120 persons arrested in connection with the church riots, only forty seven have been detained in custody, among them the Count de Bouille and Robert d'Harcourt, nephew of the Count de Mun, who was released; also one priest and two municipal councillors. Count de la Fouchcauld was sentenced to three months' imprisonment by the correctional tribunal without application to the first offenders' act.

During the taking of the inventory at the Church of St. Saturnin at Tours, yesterday, street fighting occurred between the Catholics and anti-Catholics, who were only separated by a large force of gendarmerie.

POPE TELLS HIS PEOPLE TO SUBMIT TO THE AUTHORITIES

Rome, Feb. 3.—The Pope has telegraphed to the French episcopate advising Catholics to submit to the taking of inventories of church property by the government, deploring the scenes of violence that have occurred and exhorting trust in God. It is rumored that this action is due to a hint on the part of the government.

COMMISSION FOR BIG LOCK CANAL

Washington, Feb. 3.—The report of the Isthmian Canal Commission, recording its decision in favor of an eighty-five foot level lock canal, was submitted to Secretary Taft to-day. The report is accompanied by the report of the Board of Advisory Engineers, the majority of whom declared for a sea level canal. It will now be for Secretary Taft to express his own views upon the great project in an indorsement when transmitting the papers to the President.

G. W. Blake of Dorchester Proves a Hero in Panic at Upham's Corner and Then Hurries from Scene.

Modestly acknowledging the grateful expressions of twenty-five women, to save whom from injury he had risked his life in stopping a runaway horse at Upham's Corner yesterday, G. W. Blake, of No. 36 Harlow street, Dorchester, hurriedly left the scene of his heroic act, but not before he had been overwhelmed by the women whom he had saved and by the spectators who had witnessed the occurrence.

The women were waiting on the sidewalk for a car. Suddenly they saw a horse dashing madly down Columbia road and swerve into Dudley street.

Straight toward the throng of women he ran. Horror stricken, they watched him approach. A few started to run away. Before the others could recover their wits, the frightened animal was almost upon them. Suddenly a figure dashed across the street. It was Blake.

"Look out!" he cried, as he jumped between the horse and the panic-stricken women. Grabbing the bridle, he hung on, turning the horse's head so that he swung clear of the women, who fled screaming in different directions.

Blake was dragged some distance and dashed heavily against a telegraph pole. He hung on gamely, however, and finally stopped the runaway.

JEROME TO ACT ON INSURANCE CASE TOMORROW.

New York, Feb. 3.—Whether or not District Attorney Jerome is to prosecute insurance men criminally is to be disclosed Monday, when Mr. Jerome will return to his office from his country home at Lakeville, Ct., after a week's study of the evidence adduced by Mr. Hughes in the Armstrong investigation.

It is hinted that Mr. Jerome has manifested considerable curiosity concerning Judge Andrew Hamilton and [illegible] of that man both before and after his departure for Europe.

While Mr. Jerome will engage help outside of the office to assist in any prosecution, he will prosecute in person all cases in which indictments may be found.

NOTED FINANCIERS ARE SUED FOR $1,005,000 LOST IN TRUST CRASH

New York, Feb. 3.—A suit for the recovery of $1,005,000 [illegible] in the Supreme Court of Nassau county, at Mineola, L. I., against James H. Hyde, former vice-president of the Equitable; James W. Gould and [illegible] of other prominent [illegible] stockholders of the Commonwealth Trust Company and the North American Company, who financed the United States shipbuilding trust in 1902.

Charles W. Mayer, the plaintiff, alleges that he lost the amount named in connection with the flotation of the company through the unlawful acts of the trust companies and other defendants named, and asks the court to compel them to make good his loss.

YERKES' WIDOW MAY FIGHT WILL.

Mrs. Mizner, Newly Wed, May Seek Dower Rights In Estate of Late Traction King.

WILL UPSET PLANS FOR BIG HOSPITAL

New York, Feb. 3.—Wilson Mizner is now comfortably established in the Yerkes mansion in Fifth avenue, the home of his bride. He has completed all of his arrangements for remaining in the great palace reared by the traction magnate, and to close friends he declared that in all probability he and his wife, until Monday the widow of Charles T. Yerkes, would remain there for several months.

Stories that Mrs. Mary Adelaide Yerkes Mizner would take steps at once to attempt the breaking of the Yerkes will were affirmed and contradicted to-day. Under the present arrangement Mrs. Mizner will receive $[illegible] a year at least, being the income from $7,[illegible], in which she has a life interest.

Lawyers conversant with the property declare that if the widow broke the will and received her dower rights of one-third of the real property left by Yerkes she would only get about $2,000,000 at the outside, and perhaps less. In any event if the will is broken, Mr. Yerkes's plans for a museum and hospital will be dissipated.

Yerkes's Children Surprised.

Mr. Mizner made it clear to-day that until the will is filed neither he nor Mrs. Mizner would make any statement for the public.

"We understand that Mr. Yerkes's will is to be filed [illegible] February [illegible]," said Mizner. "I don't think that until that time Mrs. Mizner will make any definite statement. She will wait until the will is probated and then act. Up to that point our plans are definitely settled, but I should say that we do not care to make any statement."

Mrs. Mizner declined to give out any statement regarding her attitude toward the will. Nor is it known what Mr. Yerkes's children will do under the circumstances. No statement was made by Mrs. Rondinella nor Yerkes's son in Philadelphia.

The formal announcement that Mrs. Yerkes had married Wilson Mizner came as a sharp surprise to the son and daughter of the late millionaire. Though they had not been on the best terms with their father for some time prior to his death, and though their share in the estate was small compared with its magnitude, they assented when the will was read to having its provisions carried out.

Miss Grigsby Watching.

But should Mrs. Mizner succeed in breaking the will and obtaining her dower rights, they would materially benefit. There would be a new division of the estate and their shares would be very greatly increased.

Another person who is eagerly watching for the coming events is Miss Emilie Grigsby, for whom, it is alleged, Yerkes planned to leave a couple of millions in trust. Her attorneys believe that if the Yerkes's will is broken it cannot fail to help her to secure the income that she believes is justly due her.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK J. P. MORGAN'S TRAIN.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 3.—Three men are in jail at Lynchburg charged with wrecking a freight train on the Southern railway. It was reported that several New York millionaires who have been spending some of the Winter at Florida resorts were passengers on this train.

Train thirty-four, the Jacksonville limited, which was running on the flyer's time, lost a few minutes near Greensboro and just missed meeting the fate of the freight train.

The trio broke the switch lock, opened the switch and changed the light so as to give a clear to the approaching train.

MOODY WATCHING BEEF TRUST CASE

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Attorney-General William H. Moody arrived in Chicago to-day for the avowed purpose of investigating the trial of the stock yards packers for immunity. The simultaneous arrival of Chief Wilkie of the Secret Service Bureau, is regarded as significant.

"I am making no secret of my reason for coming to Chicago," said the Attorney-General. "It is for the express purpose of looking at closer range into the beef case. While there is no development which requires my immediate attention, I am anxious to be on the scene to watch the proceedings."

The result of this trial may be potential. It may have an important bearing on the other cases now pending. If the government loses in this case it would have a bearing on the taking of testimony by the other body."

The government's reply to the immunity charges was outlined by District Attorney Morrison and is said to have met with the approval of his superior. Mr. Moody will take the stand for the government.

Honor for White House Bride-Elect

Wedding Gifts Pour in From All the States of the Union and From Foreign Lands.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the President, attended the reception given by Mrs. Vice President Fairbanks to-night, accompanying her mother. Before going there she spent an hour or two at the theatre, and before that, in the afternoon, she was at the White House with Congressman Nicholas Longworth, to whom she is to be married.

The President was with his guests of his Harvard class until 10 o'clock, after which he drove out to get Mrs. and Miss Roosevelt at the Fairbanks reception.

The White House bride-elect is said by her friends to be greatly pleased at the reported idea of the Cubans to give her as a wedding gift the plantation enclosing San Juan Hill, and it is believed that the President heartily approves of this project. When the news was received that the Cuban Senate was thinking of spending the $25,000 appropriation for pearls and other jewelry the President made no comment, as the matter had not come officially to the attention of the White House, but it is understood that he desired a change in the substance of the gift. The sentiment expressed in the present of San Juan Hill is reported to be especially pleasing to him.

As a matter of fact it appears that Miss Alice will not miss the Cuban pearls, for the jewels that she has received and will receive will reach a great value. It is evident already that no bride in the country has received so great a number and such a wide variety of gifts as will mark the Roosevelt wedding. Some predictions are that the presents will aggregate $1,000,000 in value, while even the most conservative [illegible] will be [illegible]

Miss Roosevelt was forced to make a choice a day or so ago between three very beautiful [illegible] Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid had planned the [illegible] of their gift, but Mrs. Reid could not make up her mind which of three articles she wanted, so she had them sent to Miss Roosevelt with a request that she select the one she most preferred. There was a diamond tiara, a dog collar of pearls and diamonds and a necklace of diamonds. Miss Roosevelt chose the dog collar.

An unusual [illegible] of wedding [illegible] the number of homes [illegible] from as far away as California on the West and Florida on the South. A special [illegible] receptions [illegible] for the purpose.

While no official announcement has been made as to where the young people will spend their honeymoon, it is whispered in the set in which the bride moves that she and her husband will go to Georgia—possibly to Roswell, where Miss Roosevelt's grandmother, Martha Bulloch, lived and was married.

Congressman Longworth is Miss Roosevelt's almost daily companion. They have visited together and shopped together, and the purchases Miss Roosevelt has made or at least has considered would provide [illegible] weddings, say her intimates.

Already there are many heartburnings among those who think they should have been invited [illegible] and it is said that those not bidden to the wedding will leave Washington in many cases, so that their absence will be less noticeable. Nearly 5,000 invitations have been issued, of which [illegible] to foreign [illegible] and are courtesy invitations. It was originally planned to invite but 1,500. The [illegible] reached its present large number.

PET SPANIEL BOUGHT HERE FOR MISS ALICE ROOSEVELT

One of the most perfectly bred dogs of the Ruby Spaniel class, Lady Toots, has just been purchased for Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the President, at a price which, while not made public, is said to be remarkable. Mrs. Marion Porter of this city, who bred and owned Lady Toots, consented to part with the dog only because she understood it was purchased for Miss Roosevelt.

Lady Toots is only two years old. Mrs. Porter has had numerous offers for her but always declined until the present. One of the persons who tried to buy this dog was Thomas W. Lawson, but his offer, which is said to have approached $500, was declined. Now it seems that Lady Toots's fate will be to take the place of the present Roosevelt pet, which is said to be in [illegible] health.

Mrs. Porter has bred Ruby Spaniels for nearly a score of years and considers Lady Toots the greatest of all these. She did not exhibit in the bench shows this year, but her dogs at various times have captured many blue ribbons.

This aristocratic dog, which is a ruby spaniel valued at more than $500, was sold by Miss Marion Porter for the President's daughter.

MAYOR SAYS FIRE CHIEFS MUST DECIDE ON "DAYS OFF"

Explains How Financial Condition of City Must Limit Additional Expenditure.

Mayor Fitzgerald last night on his return from New York issued a statement in which he explains his attitude in the situation due to the circulation of a petition among firemen of Boston which requests that the one-day-off-in-five ordinance which was inaugurated during the term of Acting Mayor Whelton, be rescinded in favor of the one-day-off-in-eight system.

Firemen were in open revolt against the proposed change, and denounced it as a rank coercion.

The Mayor says:

"Fire Commissioner Wells asked for an additional $125,000 for his department. This amount would represent about one-half the additional taxes which will be raised in the present year if the city's valuation increases as much as it has the past few years, and this is very doubtful. I told him the city's financial condition would not permit any such addition to his present appropriation and he must change his figures. Mr. Wells could not see how the demands for increased service in the down town business district as well as the granting of additional fire protection in Dorchester, West Roxbury and other suburban sections could be delayed longer.

Need More Apparatus.

We must have additional men and more apparatus [illegible] guarantee proper fire protection in these districts, he said. The repeal of the one day in five ordinance was the [illegible] suggested, and the one day in eight which the men had before, with two twelve-hour leaves and longer time for meals to take its place, or a one day in six which could be arranged for quite satisfactorily.

"I told the commissioner that I would like to talk the matter over with the fire chiefs, whom I felt could speak for the men. A conference was arranged and the matter thoroughly gone into, every chief expressing the greatest [illegible] the willingness of the men to agree to meet the city half way in the matter.

"I know nothing further of the affair, leaving it entirely in the hands of the fire commissioner and the officers of the department. I might add that it was stated [illegible] at the present time [illegible] and some other employes of the department do not get the one day in five."

What the Rule Says.

Rule 9 of the department, which is the rule brought forward by the firemen as a reason for their failure to sign the petition, is as follows:

No member shall participate in or lend encouragement to any movement having for its object [illegible] of the laws and rules of the department, to a con[illegible] members [illegible] when any one is dissatisfied [illegible] serves in the department.

Several [illegible] petition have been told [illegible] failure to sign will hurt their chances of promotion.

CITY RAZED BY EARTHQUAKE; FATE OF 3000 IN DOUBT.

Submarine Volcano May Be Cause of Tremendous Upheaval In South America.

PHENOMENAL ACTIONS SUGGEST TIDAL WAVES

People in Terror Lest Coast and Island Ports Have Been Wiped Out.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Panama, Feb. 3.—Buena Ventura, Colombia, a city of 3,000 inhabitants, has been destroyed by an earthquake.

It is reported further that the earthquake extended to the city of Guayaquil, which has also suffered damage, to what extent is not known.

The cables having been broken, it is impossible to secure the details of the disaster.

Phenomenal tide movements, amounting to almost tidal waves, have been observed here since Wednesday, and it is believed that they are due to volcanic disturbance.

That a submarine volcano or a wave created by an earthquake may have caused serious disturbances at Buena Ventura, Tumaco and other ports is feared.

Captain Holroyd of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamship Quito, which left this morning for Guayaquil and other ports, was ordered to keep well off the coast and to maintain a strict watch for unusual changes.

New York, Feb. 3.—The islands of Porto Rico, St. Thomas, Santa Cruz, Antigua, St. Kitts, Montserrat, Nevis, Dominica, St. Lucia, Barbadoes, St. Vincent, Grenada, Tobago and Trinidad, in the West Indies, are cut off from communication by cable with the rest of the world.

The officers of the Commercial Cable Company and the French Cable Company explain the situation by the remark that the West Indies route has never been properly surveyed, but it will be remembered that the first presage of the great volcanic disasters at Martinique and St. Vincent came from the same broken cables.

There is also a theory that the French action against Venezuela may have something to do with the severing of the cables.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much-improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

To Reform and Begin Life Anew Is the Promise Made by Count de Castellane for the Countess's Forgiveness.

WOMAN OF TITLE NAMED IN SCANDAL

COUNTESS MAY FORGIVE CASTELLANE

SHE RETURNED TO HOME OF HER HUSBAND.

Protestations of Love and Fidelity Made to the Former Anna Gould.

Paris, Feb. 3.—Although the name of a woman of title has come to the surface in the estrangement between the Count and Countess Boni de Castellane, as well as that of another noted Parisienne, there yet remains a possibility of a reconciliation. Friends of the family are working night and day to induce the Countess, who was Miss Anna Gould, to rescind her action looking toward a separation, and have succeeded to the extent of persuading her to return, with her children, to the Castellane mansion.

Before this occurred the Count himself implored his wife to return to their home, pointing out the scandal that must result should society discover they were living apart. He begged her to leave the Hotel Bristol in the Place Vendome, where she had gone with the children and a maid, assuring her with fervid protestations of love and fidelity that he would begin a new life if she would forgive his indiscretions.

There are two stories in common circulation to-night as to the exact cause of the breach in the Castellane household. The first, which secures much credence from those who know the family, says that the estrangement is the outcome of a plot arranged by a woman of title, a member of a world famous family in high finance, to whom Count Boni had been much devoted.

Woman Swore Revenge.

The Count has ceased his attentions to this Baroness, boulevard gossip has it, and she, becoming enraged, swore to be revenged. She laid a deep plan, as the first step in which she invited the Count to visit her house, ostensibly for the purpose of holding a farewell interview, and then anonymously notified the Countess of the time and place of the rendezvous.

The Countess, says the story, went to the Baroness' mansion, and was present when Count Boni arrived. A stormy scene ensued, as a result of which the Countess went to her home, took the children, and went to live at the hotel.

The other report is that the Countess intercepted letters to her husband from Madame de L——, a noted Parisienne, and left home as soon as she had learned what they disclosed.

When the Countess returned home the Count went to his club. It is believed to-night, however, that both are under the same roof. Servants at the mansion say that neither may be seen by callers.

An intimate friend of the family [illegible] to-night that no efforts were being spared to bring about a reconciliation and that he believed they would be successful. "It is [illegible]," he said. "How could the mother live without them? And how could she expect them all if there was a separation?"

COUNT BONI A NOTED FIGURE IN VIVACIOUS CIRCLES OF PARIS

By Special Paris Correspondent.

Paris, Feb. 3. The [illegible] discord in the palace of [illegible] is the chief subject of gossip in all circles of society. The Count is one of the most conspicuous figures in the vivacious life of Paris—not the life of the boulevards, which everybody [illegible] the [illegible] of the exclusive, expensive [illegible] clubs where [illegible] worlds [illegible].

Since the [illegible] of [illegible] Count, it is reported, gave the beautiful Spanish danseuse [illegible] a duplicate of the necklace [illegible] his wife, having the bill for [illegible] charged to his wife's account, which resulted in a scene with the Countess that almost precipitated a separation, Boni has continued living a life of vivacity. He was attentive to women of all classes of society without discrimination. Although one of the handsomest and most accomplished of the aristocrats of Paris, the Count is extremely democratic in the selection of his associates of both sexes.

The last time the Count was the subject of society gossip was when cruising in a yacht with a party including a beautiful American, the wife of a noted British official who was detailed to service abroad recently. The Count's name never was coupled with those of the famous beautiful actresses who are conspicuous in the lively half world of Paris, although last summer it is reported Boni came near getting into serious difficulty with Baron Henry DeRothschild, the reputed cause of the trouble being a pretty American vaudeville actress now playing in a London theatre.

The Count rarely appears in conspicuous [illegible] Maxim's, but frequent [illegible] prominent [illegible] restaurants, catering to exclusive vivacious private dinner parties [illegible] vaudeville [illegible] wards. A [illegible] Count Boni's [illegible] Cercle Du Royal [illegible] to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN correspondent to-night: "The Count is one of the best fellows in the world but is too impressionable and fickle. He is indiscrete about affairs of the heart which every club man believes will sooner or later cause the Countess to take extreme measures. We hear to-night that it is altogether probable a reconciliation will be effected."

COUNT CAN HAVE NO GOULD MONEY IN THE EVENT OF DIVORCE

New York, Feb. 3.—"If the Countess de Castellane secures a legal separation from the Count, he will be completely deprived of any [illegible] from the Gould estate."

This is the opinion of former Judge John F. Dillon, chief counsel for the Goulds, given to a correspondent of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to-day.

"The Countess," he said, "even after securing a separation, might consent to allow the father of her children a certain income, but that would rest entirely with her. I do not believe that all the power of the French courts can touch her income, which [illegible] $250,000 a year in semi-annual payments."

From reliable sources it was learned to-night that the Gould family will carry out its original agreement to pay off the Count's debts that were contracted prior to the time he was sued by European art dealers and other creditors.

It is authoritatively stated, however, that the Goulds will refuse to shoulder the responsibility for debts contracted by de Castellae since that time. This determination is bade on the fact that Count Boni arrived at a distinct understanding with George J. Gould that he would live within the $[illegible],000 income that remained to his wife after the settlement with the creditors reduced it to that amount from over $600,000 a year.

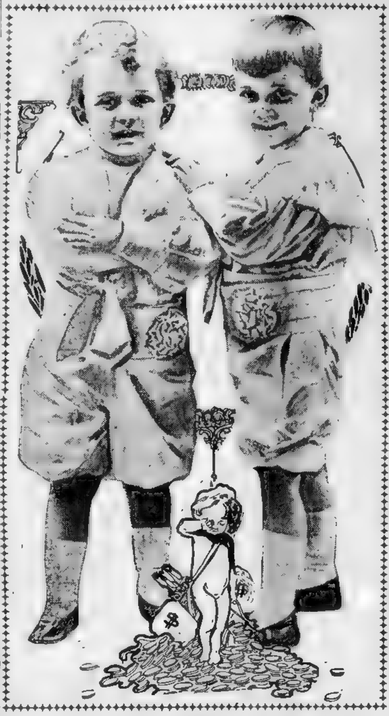
George J. Gould, head of the Gould family, stated to-day at his town house, at Fifth avenue and 67th street, that the newspaper [illegible] were the first intimation that he [illegible] received of the reported intention [illegible] to sue her husband.

"I [illegible] heard of any trouble between [illegible] and Count Boni de Castellaine," said Mr. Gould. "In fact, I am not in a position to discuss their affairs, because I know very little about them."

The reluctance of Mr. Gould to discuss the report [illegible] troubles between his sister and Count Boni is accounted for by the fact that he has always acted as the mediator in the matrimonial differences. The fact that the Countess has not informed her brother of her present troubles in [illegible] friends of the family that the [illegible] difficulties in the Castellane [illegible] beyond arbitration.

In [illegible] of the lack of information in regard to their sister's affairs asserted by the Goulds, a close friend of the family said:

"The Countess instead of being urged by her family to patch up the breach, is being encouraged to legalize her separation from the Count. The Goulds are tired of hearing of the treatment that the Countess has been obliged to endure, and it is the unanimous wish of the family that it cease now and forever."



WHO WILL GET THESE CASTELLANE TOTS IF COUNT AND COUNTESS SEPARATE?

STRIKE OF 550,000 MINERS PLANNED; CONFERENCE FAILS

COAL MEN'S CHIEFS TO RAISE GREAT FIGHTING FUND.

Special to the Sunday American.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 3.—The coal miners and operators have left Indianapolis for their homes, the miners leaving behind them their national board members to map out plans for collecting munitions of war for the threatened big strike of April 1, when 550,000 miners expect to quit work.

President Mitchell said that at the afternoon session of the board to-day the matter of levying $1 a week strike assessment was taken up and discussed informally, but no definite action taken. Such an assessment added to the present funds, amounting to a little over $2,500,000 in the national district, sub-district and local treasuries, would give the organization $[illegible],000 available cash on April 1.

President Mitchell said this evening that he would not go to the anthracite districts after February 10, when he will start for the conference with the operators, which is to be held on February 15.

The board remained in session until 5.30 o'clock and it is likely that a special session will be held to-morrow owing to urgent demands for action. The meetings will then continue next week.

Both Sides Firm.

The apparent determination of both operators and miners indicates that neither will make overtures to the other for further negotiations and, as indicated by the speeches of both the radicals and the conservatives of both organizations at the joint conference, it is probable that the 500,000 men controlled by the United Mine Workers' Union will walk out of the mines in every part of the United States on April 1.

There have been intimations that President Roosevelt and the National Civic Federation will be asked to set in motion negotiations looking to a rehabilitation of the joint agreement.

Mitchell Pessimistic.

President John Mitchell said:

"It is true that never in the history of this country has a strike of such far reaching effect been threatened.

"It means a national suspension of mining if the strike comes on at the expiration of our mining contracts, March 31, and it includes the anthracite districts.

"I do not know whether this action will have any effect on the meeting of the anthracite miners and operators on February 15, but it is the plan now to meet the anthracite operators at that time."

Twenty-five Indictments Out Against Chicago Court Clerk, Based on Embezzlement, Forgery and Concealing Records

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Twenty-five indictments providing the maximum penitentiary terms aggregating 288 years, were returned by the grand jury to-day against John A. Linn, from 1892 to 1900, clerk of the Superior Court and since then clerk of the Circuit Court of this county.

The charges on which these indictments are based are embezzlement, forgery and concealing public records. It is charged that Linn conspired to have Frank J. Chaises, cashier of the Superior Court, secrete himself to prevent testifying before the grand jury; that Linn sequestered $50,000 of Cook county funds with intent to defraud; that he withheld his records from his successor in office; that he embezzled $50,000 and that he is guilty of larceny and forgery.

Accompanied by his son, J. Roger Linn, Attorney Moritz Rosenthal and officials of the Metropolitan Surety Company, Mr. Linn went to Judge Barnes's court room at 4 p. m. and gave bonds of $25,000.

"Mr. Linn will remain at his position and has not decided to resign," said Rosenthal. With the exception of being pale and slightly nervous, Mr. Linn did not show any agitation over the indictments.

WILL CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY OF LINCOLN.

William Randolph Hearst Is Asked to Attend Independence League Ball—Organization Develops Strength

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Feb. 3.—Interest in the Independence League, formerly the Municipal Ownership League, continues to manifest itself throughout the several organizations of Manhattan and the Bronx.

The organization in the thirty-second district is looking forward with anticipation to Lincoln's birthday night, February 12, when it holds its first annual ball.

Dr. J. H. Byrne, city committeeman in the fifteenth, has built up a good organization. In addition to doing the detail work necessary for a political organization, the social end has not been overlooked and an entertainment and ball will be held at the Amsterdam Opera House, Tuesday, February 13, for which a large number of tickets have been issued.

An invitation has been sent to William Randolph Hearst and the committee hopes he may be able to attend.

The twenty-sixth district organization under the leadership of P. D. Riordan is rapidly becoming one of the important organizations in the league.

Charles H. Hussey, city committeeman of the thirteenth, reports his organization to be in an excellent condition. The club rooms are used by the members every evening, and are crowded on every meeting night.

GRAND JURY HEARS OF FENWAY GRAFT TOMORROW.

Moran to Have Official Probe Into McNary Charges, Provident Bank and Other Important Unsettled Matters

District-Attorney John B. Moran will to-morrow resume his investigation before the Grand Jury of the Fenway "graft" charges contained in Special Attorney Asa P. French's report to Mayor Fitzgerald made during the recent political campaign; and the other important matters which were pending when the Grand Jury adjourned last month owing to the sudden illness of the district attorney.

It is also reported that the result of the inquiry undertaken by Mr. Moran in the affairs of the defunct Provident Securities and Banking Company may be placed before the Grand Jury.

Among other matters are the alleged frauds in the pay rolls at City Hall, and the alleged bribing of jurors in the C[illegible] case.

The probing of the Fenway "graft" had only begun, and witnesses were waiting to testify regarding the allegations of Congressman McNary against Mayor Fitzgerald, when the proceedings of the Grand Jury were interrupted by Mr. Moran's illness.

The probability of an extended session was indicated by Mr. Moran during the past week when he appeared before the Public Service committee of the legislature to advocate legislation giving him assistance to carry on his investigations.

During the past month Mr. Moran has been unusually active, and indications leave no room for doubt that this will be the most strenuous week since District Attorney Moran began his investigations, and sensational developments are promised when the Grand Jury hands in its report to the court.

ALIENISTS TO TEST SCHIDLOFSKI'S SANITY.

Examination of Wife Murderer Will Be Made Early This Week at the Request of the Prisoner's Counsel

The alienists will be appointed early this week by Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court to examine John Schidlofski, confessed wife murderer, and determine whether or not he is insane.

Schidlofski, who is now in East Cambridge jail, killed his wife at the Arlington [illegible] links last August and stated in extenuation that she had lied to him about her age and about the amount of money she had.

Immediately after the crime Schidlofski went to Colorado where he was captured through the efforts of the BOSTON AMERICAN and brought back here for trial. Since that time he has, it is alleged, showed signs of insanity.

This examination is made at the request of the counsel for the prisoner, Henry H. Winslow and Philip H. Sullivan. If the alienists determine that there are no signs of insanity Schidlofski must stand trial for the murder that he has already confessed.

HAVE YOU CONSUMPTION?

Answer Me Five Questions.

I am a specialist in the treatment of this disease, and my right to the claim of pre-eminence is based on the cure of over three hundred cases. These cures cover a period ranging from one to sixteen years, hence, time has proven them complete and permanent.

The personnel of the cured embrace all classes, from the professional man and banker to the tradesman and journeyman. If you wish to communicate with some of these people and find out about their cure they will tell you the truth and will not mislead you. They have no interest in me aside from a feeling of gratefulness for what I have done for them and a desire to see me successful in curing others.

EUCO-MYRTO-PINO

is my remedy. It is in three parts, one for inhaling, one for injecting and one in tablet or liquid form for internal use. The chief elements of these remedies are volatile in the system and act together to arrest the progress of the disease, stop the cough, fever, night sweats, improve the nutrition, increase the weight, build up and heal the torn-down and diseased organs. No person having consumption can take this treatment without realizing at once that they are being benefited and cured. The cures remain permanent because the tuberculous poison is eliminated from the system.

Gland, Joint and Bone Tuberculosis is very prevalent. The hospitals throughout the country are filled with the subjects of this form of consumption. Surgery is held forth as the only remedy. Does it cure? No, it merely cuts away that portion of the body where the disease manifests itself and leaves the poison in the system to break out again with renewed intensity. These are facts to which every one who has undergone an operation for any form of tuberculosis can testify.

With my remedy, EUCO-MYRTO-PINO, I have restored to perfect health and usefulness many arms and legs that were to have been cut off after the failure of numerous operations to cure. I have also cured many cases of tuberculous glands following the failure of repeated surgical operations. I challenge the world to refute these statements. I have the living witnesses wearing the scars left by the surgeon's knife to testify to the truth of what I say. I will give you their names and addresses if you are interested and you can satisfy yourself as to the truth of my claims.

Expense of the Treatment at Home varies from $10.00 to $250.00, according to the form of the disease, condition of the patient, and the kind and amount of the remedy required to cure. My advice to all who have consumption is to take the treatment early in the development of the disease when a cure is [illegible] and can be had at [illegible] cost. The treatment is pleasant and simple to use and can be taken by any one at home.

If you have consumption and want to get well I ask you to let me know by filling out the attached coupon.

"ISLE OF DREAMS" TO BE GIVEN BY FINE TALENT.

Production with Book by Hugh McNally and Music by E. J. Phelan Will Run for Six Nights—Success Is Assured

Boston Chapter, Knights of Columbus, will to-morrow night start their new musical comedy, "The Isle of Dreams," at the Majestic Theatre. It will run for six nights, with a Saturday afternoon matinee. The book is by Hugh P. McNally, and rehearsals show it to be exceptionally good. Entirely new scenery has been painted for the production, and the costumes have been given particular attention.

Dancing, which has a large part in the comedy, is under the direction of John J. Coleman, and the dramatic end of the play is in charge of John T. McNary and Francis T. Horgan.

The music is by Edmund J. Phelan of Lynn and Joseph M. Daley, the latter having written several songs for the occasion, which will be introduced at each performance.

Attractive features will be two specialty numbers by the dairy and nursery maids. The former will be presented by the Misses Grace M. Costello, Bernadetta Marstof, Josephine Laundrigan and Sadie F. Esdase, and the nursery maids will be the Misses Gertrude McCarthy, Lillian Walsh, Carlotta Williamson, Violet Cummings, Eva Sweeney, Mary B. Crowley, May McCarthy, and Eleanor McCormack.

Others in the cast are: Florence D. Coughlan, Mary V. Donovan, John D. Clarke, Frederick R. Walsh, John J. Mogan, Helen A. Hosea, Eleanor R. Wickham, T. J. Carleton, John H. Newman, J. A. Henderson, Kathryn C. Haney, Richard P. Walsh, James J. McCarthy, W. A. Denning, W. H. O'Brien, William E. Riley, G. L. Whalen, Henry O'Neil, J. J. Mickolaewski, Lillian Herbert, Louise Gilhooly, Elisabeth Suter and Lotta Cummings.

On Tuesday evening Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and party will occupy four boxes, and it will be "Mayor's night."

STOMACH ON THE BRAIN.

What if a Man Gain the Whole World, and Lose His Appetite?

The man with a well-behaved stomach never thinks about it. He eats what he likes and likes what he eats. He knows he'll enjoy it, because he knows he has a stomach that will easily digest it. All things look good to him; he will sit close to the table, and with a merry twinkle in his eye and a world-peace expression, he will "start" on the delicious meal before him.

But the man with the bad, brashy, gurgly stomach is the man who is always thinking about it. He can seldom eat what he most likes, and seldom likes what he eats. His stomach worries him before meals, after meals and between meals. It is on his brain. It robs him of his cheer and interferes with his daily work. Around him is a dark spirit which presses itself forward in his thoughts, crying: "I am agony, I am disgust, I am nausea. I am sickness, languor, worry. I am conceived in quick lunches and pappy food, and nourished by gulpy meals. I rob brains of their force and bodies of their life. I steal away nerve and vim. I bring heart disease and apoplexy. I make the world a pit of weariness and darkness. I am woe. I am death. I am dyspepsia. But yet, I bring also hope, light and future health, because by my gloomy presence I give you warning and a chance to escape me."

This is a bad dream, but it is the daily dream of the dyspeptic. If it were not for the white we couldn't tell the black. If it were not for dyspepsia we couldn't know the joy, the happiness of a well-ordered digestion. All the world looks bright to a man of good health, and good health is impossible without a good, hardy stomach. And any sick or weak stomach can be made a good, strong one by just taking something which will digest your food for you, instead of letting your tired stomach do it. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the most effective little tablets in the world for this very thing. If you feel bloated after eating, or you have nausea, aversion to food, brash, irritation, sour stomach, heartburn or dyspepsia, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will stop it because one grain of an ingredient of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food.

Your stomach is overworked. Let it take a rest. You're not yourself when you have a bad stomach. These tablets will do the work that the stomach has to do and make you feel bright, think clearly and give you ambition and power to concentrate your attention on your work. You'll feel good. You should always have a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on your dining table. They will make you get all the good possible out of everything you eat, and you'll enjoy it.

RICH FAMILY IN FINANCIAL TANGLE

Worcester, Feb. 3.—The family of Ransom C. Taylor, the wealthiest man in Worcester, holder of nearly half of the real estate on Front street and a great deal on Main street, is mixed up in a financial tangle that threatens to disrupt the family and scatter the fortune.

Mr. Taylor's wife has appealed for the appointment of a conservator over his estate, on the ground that Mr. Taylor is mentally irresponsible. Mr. Taylor's daughter secured a verdict of $33,000 against her father.

Mr. Taylor's son, Willard S. Taylor, has been forced to give a second mortgage on his Franklin Square Theatre property, for $8,000, in favor of Charles A. Kabley, a real estate dealer. Another mortgage on the same property, for $5,200, has been given to Charles T. Tatman.

$10,000 GONE; TEACHERS ANXIOUS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Feb. 3.—A messenger, Thomas Whalen, who was sent from the City Paymaster's office with nearly $10,000 in pay checks for school teachers in Long Island City, has been missing since Thursday morning and the police and detectives are seeking him. As none of the checks has been cashed, there is mystery as to the cause of his disappearance.

The loss has thrown 113 school ma'ams into a state of intense anxiety, as no explanation has been forthcoming regarding the delay in paying for their services for January. The missing messenger was employed by Wood's City Dispatch, the firm having the contract for the transmission of the checks each month.

The Board of Education has directed that new checks be forwarded to the teachers.

75,000 FARMERS ARE GOING TO CANADA.

Prominent Official Says Rural Americans Are Steadily Emigrating.

THEY SELL FARMS HERE AND BUY OTHERS CHEAP

Washington, Feb. 3.—George H. Ham, a prominent officer of the Canadian Pacific railroad, who is now in Washington, in discussing the failure of the attempts to secure a reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada, declared:

"High tariff walls cannot restrict, however, the movement of people between Canada and the United States. You have nearly two million Canadians in your country, and we have more than half a million Americans in the Dominion. About one-half of the 500,000 Americans have crossed over to Canada within the last ten years and settled in the prairies of the Canadian West. They are principally from Minnesota, North Dakota, Washington, Iowa, Montana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and South Dakota—all Western and Northwestern States.

"And why do they come? Because they sell out their farms at $30, $40, $50 and $100 an acre and buy virgin soil at $3 to $25 an acre or get it free by homesteading. They do not leave any deserted farms. This year the number of Americans emigrating to Canada will probably aggregate over 75,000."

BABY, DAY OLD, ONE OF 4 TO DIE IN FIRE

Prentice, Wis., Feb. 3.—Four lives were lost and one person was fatally injured in a fire here to-day, which destroyed the house of Grant Stewart.

The dead are Grant Stewart, two children and a babe that was born yesterday. Mrs. Stewart escaped from the building by jumping through a window, but she was so badly burned and cut by glass and with the exposure that she cannot live.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs, and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crude [illegible] of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the [illegible], and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of [illegible] of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers [illegible] the best [illegible]

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

HOMES FOR CATS AND DOGS BUT NONE FOR CHILDREN

Rep. Newton Declares Against Race Suicide

Has Bill in Legislature to Limit Powers of Discriminating Landlords.

By Eleanor Ames.

"Homes for poodles, monkeys, cats and canines abound in Boston.

"Homes for babies are hard to find.

"It seems to be an unwritten rule that a man may raise anything he likes in his home, except children," declares Representative William Lawrence Newton of South Boston.

Representative Newton is the arch enemy of race suicide. He has voiced his animosity to this great and growing evil by presenting a remedial bill to his associates beneath the Gilded Dome, and the shadow of the Sacred Codfish. It is konwn as House Bill 267 and reads as follows:

"Resolved, That a commission of three persons be appointed by the Governor to consider what steps can be taken to counteract the tendency known as race suicide, and especially to prevent discrimination by landlords against tenants with children. The commission shall consider whether any legislaton in the premises is expedient or possible, and what measures, if any, might properly be taken by the Commonwealth to arouse public opinion in respect to the aforesaid evils. The commissioners shall serve without compensation, but any expenses necessarily incurred by them shall be paid, on approval by the Governor, from the treasury of the Commonwealth. They shall report to the general court not later than the first day of February in the year nineteen hundred and seven."

NO CHILDREN ALLOWED IN THESE FLATS
ANY KIND OF A DOG GETS IN

Believes in Many Children.

Representative Newton is tremendously sincere and earnest about his bill. He believes that there is peril for present and future generations in the attitude of landlords who repudiate children and welcome dogs.

He believes in children—plenty of them—the more good ones the better. He believes in the rights of children to live in decent surroundings and receive smiles instead of frowns.

"It has come to the pass where a man can't give his children as good a home as he can afford to pay for, because the landlords won't permit him to," he told me, in tones of indignation.

"Think of it! Able and willing to bring up one's children in the best sections of the city, and compelled, forced, yes, driven to an inferior locality!

"Do you know why so many boys and girls from eight to fifteen years of age are hanging around dance halls and other bad places. Because their homes are not pleasant.

Man's Castle Not His Own.

"Since the days of King Charles I., a man's home has been supposed to be his castle. The landlords of to-day seem to be determined to revoke that law. They might as well say 'a man's home is his castle until the stork flies in the window.' Then he better seek a new castle."

"Well," I said, by way of argument than from any strong beliefs, "I feel, 'it isn't pleasant for the other tenants to have a lot of children in the house.'"

"I suppose the other tenants were never children," retorted he, with withering sarcasm. "What's better in this world than children?" he demanded fiercely. "Dogs? Canaries? Monkeys? Cats? Parrots? Mind you, I like dogs and cats and all animals. I would never harm any living thing, but why should they be given a better chance than children?

Marry at 25, Men.

Representative Newton is unmarried. Being only twenty-four years of age he has yet a year of grace before he reaches the age at which he considers it best for a man to marry.

"Twenty-five is the proper age for a man to marry," he said decisively, "and he should marry a girl of his own age. The trouble is that too many people marry too young. They don't know their own minds.

"When they marry they should marry with the idea of raising children. Unless they do this they fail to live up to the Scriptural idea of the purpose of life. People who get married and don't have children are flying in the face of the Almighty. The Christian religion calls for children as the outcome of marriage. There are too few marriages. There are too few children."

Ideal Family Is Six.

"What do you consider an ideal family," I asked.

"Six," he answered promptly, "three boys and three girls. In the old days ten or fifteen children were not too many, but the conditions of to-day are different."

"Six children are a heavy burden to support," I mused.

"They should be a joy instead of a burden," he replied. "What is a man for if not to work and help the world?"

I really couldn't tell, only I was sure that lots of men are not fit for that.

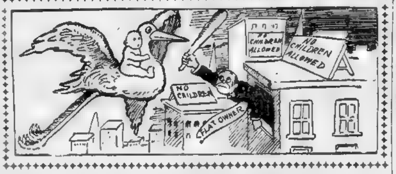
"Lots of men have no idea of responsibility," said he.

Head of Family at 12.

Representative Newton is not one of these. He has shouldered the responsibility of an entire family ever since he was twelve years and ten months old.

Although he is not married, he has been the nominal head of a family for twelve years, and so well has he cared for that family, that his grandmother and mother idolize him, and his brothers and sisters regard him in the light of an ideal.

William Lawrence Newton, Representative from South Boston, is a very remarkable young man. He is entitled to your respect, admiration, friendship and encouragement. He is ambitious, strenuous, honest, sincere and enthusiastic.



A MAN'S HOME IS HIS CASTLE TILL THE STORK FLIES IN THE WINDOW. THEN HE HAD BETTER SEEK ANOTHER CASTLE.

Took Father's Place.

His young shoulders received their early responsibility at the death of his father. There was an older boy, but he was "more easy going," as his family express it, and it seemed perfectly natural for "Will" to take his father's place.

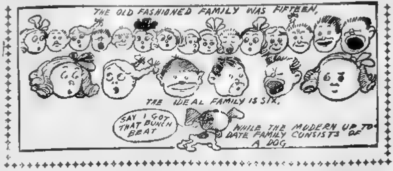
Now, with three children, the eldest only fifteen, working, and three younger ones going to school, it is not an easy matter for a moneyless widow to get along. Mrs. Newton worked early and late. It was a constant struggle. Will, serious, far-sighted and shrewd beyond his years, saw this. He worked and planned to make it easier. He shined shoes, and sold papers, and ran errands, and did any honorable job he could to turn an honest penny.

Then he got a place in the stock exchange.

The hours were easy, and he could still devote the mornings and evenings to other work.

Finally he saved $67.50. That started him [illegible]. He bought a horse and wagon and became a retail produce dealer.

"People call it peddling fruits and vegetables," he explained, "but it's more. We have a regular route. We have three [illegible] running all the time, [illegible] routes and regular customers [illegible] South Boston. They stick to us year after year."



THE OLD FASHIONED FAMILY WAS FIFTEEN,
THE IDEAL FAMILY IS SIX.
SAY I GOT THAT BUNCH BEAT
WHILE THE MODERN UP TO DATE FAMILY CONSISTS OF A DOG

THE IDEAL FAMILY IS SIX. IT USED TO BE FIFTEEN, BUT CONDITIONS HAVE CHANGED

Not Spoiled by Success.

Prosperity has not made Representative Newton lazy. He has been in politics for six four years. He was elected to the Common Council the very day he cast his first vote.

Not a man in Boston leads a more strenuous life. He is up at 5 o'clock these Winter mornings, and goes to the stable and feeds his horses. He says he thinks as much of his horses as he does of himself.

Then he eats breakfast and goes to a preparatory school, for he is preparing for college, and you must remember that his schooling was interrupted when he was less than thirteen years old. From school he goes to the State House; from the State House back to the stable to attend to feeding and stabling his horses.

In the evening, unless business calls him away, he stays at home and reads and studies.

Up at 3 in Summer.

In Summer he rises at 3 o'clock and is down in the market buying fruit and vegetables, still wet with dew, as the farmers come in.

For seventeen years he has lived in the same house on Broadway, South Boston, he and his grandmother, who, by the way, has nine children, fifty grandchildren and two great-grandchildren; his mother and his brothers and sisters.

He is a man of good principles.

He smokes, but he neither drinks nor gambles. His enmity to rum is strong and unabating, for he says nine-tenths of the trials of the world can be traced to rum.

He is charitable to a degree.

He believes in his fellowmen and, in turn, they trust him.

College Next Fall.

Next Fall he hopes to go to college.

He wants to study law. People tell him that the law is overcrowded.

"I know lawyers that are making only $8 a week," one man told him.

"Lots of peddlers make only $8 a week," he retorted, cheerfully, "but I make that a day."

It's a safe wager that he'll win out in whatever he takes up. Here's to Representative Newton and his race suicide bill. Whatever happens to the bill, may its father live long and prosper. He's a good fellow and deserves success.

MIX-UP IN NAMES LEADS TO STORY OF ARREST.

Friends of Walling, American Reported Detained in Russia, Hear of Mistakes Made in Copying His Letters

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Feb. 3.—In recent letters [illegible] from English Walling, a noted university settlement worker of New York, who is now in Rusia on a tour of study, Mr. Walling has told of the results of his [illegible] and studies in a most in[illegible] manner. Some of these letters have been printed in the New York papers, [illegible] an accident occurred which gave his writings an aspect of his being [illegible] in the political movements that are now going on in that country.

A letter from Mr. Walling was given by the editor of a local paper, and the reporters, in copying it,, confused it with [illegible] letters of a political nature which Mr. Walling had not written, but which were on the table at the time. In this [illegible] passages which he had not written were inserted in his letter that would indicate that he was studying a phase of [illegible] in which, as a matter of fact, he is not interested.

"Some time ago I received from one of the best known literary men in Russia a letter stating, among other things, that an educated young American named Walling [illegible] arrested," said A. Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, yesterday. "I at once assumed that this was English Walling, the grandson of W. E. English, who, in the 80's ran for the Vice-Presidency on the Democratic ticket. I knew that Mr. Walling was travelling in Russia and had received a letter from him.

"Mr. Walling is extremely well known on the East Side through his settlement work: it was there I met him. In that letter he spoke to me of Russia in a general way and told how he was trying to help some American newspaper men in their efforts to obtain Russian news. There was nothing else in his letter, and nothing of a political nature mentioned in it.

"I was amazed later that this letter was confounded in some newspapers with other information with which his letter had nothing to do. The story of his arrest turned out to be ill founded, my correspondent having mixed his name with a similar name of purely Slavonic origin. Russia is now naturally full of all kinds of wild rumors which reach this country from time to time.

"Fortunately in Mr. Walling's case, he was not molested by the authorities and is continuing his study as he planned it in the beginning. I understand that he has had interviews with some of the most important officials in Russia and has collected valuable material for solid contributions to our literature on Russia of today."

CATTLE TURN THEIR OWN CAR OVER

Moving about to keep warm as they stood in a stock car at Pier 5 of the Hoosac tunnel docks, Charlestown, yesterday, sixteen cattle started a swaying movement of the car which increased until car and cattle went over with a crash.

Axes were used by the men to chop away the top of the car, and the panic-stricken animals were led out with great difficulty.

Neglected Colds MAY CAUSE Consumption.

MRS. ADDIE HARDING MRS. MARY MEYER MRS. FRANCES WILSON

Even people who have strong lungs may acquire consumption from a cold.

Mrs. Addie Harding, 121 W. Brighton Ave., Syracuse, N. Y., writes:

"I have been a user of Peruna for the last twelve years and can truthfully say that there is no better medicine on earth.

"A SURE PREVENTATIVE"

"With me it is a sure preventative for colds and many other ills. In my home can always be found a bottle of Peruna. Two or three times a year I am troubled with my throat.

"I always had to have the services of my physician two or three times in each case.

"Although a user of Peruna, I never thought of taking it for my throat until about two years ago.

"I tried Peruna to check it, and to my great delight I was not troubled with the smothered and choked feeling and never have since.

"I can check it every time with Peruna.

"I certainly would not be without Peruna one minute."

Mrs. Mary Meyer, Thomson avenue, near Shell Road, Winfield, L. I., N. Y., writes:

"I have been annoyed with a cough for years.

CONSUMPTION WAS FEARED.

"Often it was so bad that I could not sleep half the night. Many people thought I had consumption.

"A woman recommended Peruna to me two years ago. I began to take Peruna and now I am perfectly free from a cough.

"I am glad to say that Peruna cured me entirely. I take Peruna occasionally when I do not feel well and I also give it to my children.

"Peruna is the best medicine for coughs and colds. I have told many people how much Peruna has helped me."

Many a person catches cold and pays no attention to it.

He scarcely recovers from the first cold when he takes the second.

Still he gives it no heed, and possibly takes another cold, and so on.

He doses himself with bromides, quinine and various expectorants.

His case is catarrh, at this stage, and his case should be treated as catarrh.

A common cold is acute catarrh.

Finally, if the cold is allowed to continue, it becomes chronic catarrh.

Mrs. Frances Wilson, 32 Nelson street, Clinton, Mass., writes:

"Had you seen me at the time of my illness and now, you would not wonder that I take delight in sounding the praises of Peruna.

"My ailment was a severe cold which attacked the bronchial tubes and lungs.

"I followed your special directions and after using six bottles of Peruna I was on my feet again.

"I think Peruna a wonderful medicine."

All colds, coughs, bronchitis, laryngitis and tonsilitis should be treated as catarrh, as they are in reality catarrh.

CONSUMPTION PREVENTED.

It has saved a multitude of people from consumption by eradicating catarrh before it reaches the lungs. The tendency of catarrh of the throat or head is to spread downward to the lungs. If taken in time, Peruna will prevent these cases.

We have in our files many testimonials from people who thought they were victims of consumption, but have been permanently relieved by the faithful use of Peruna, thus showing that catarrh was really the cause of their ailments.

I Tried for 20 Years

To Perfect an Electric Belt Without Vinegar. I've Got It Now, and You Want It.

There's no disputing the virtue in Electricity as a cure for weakness and pains. The brainiest doctors living now admit it.

There has been a doubt that any one has mastered the best way to apply it.

The doctor's battery is too crude; shocks too much, and at best can be applied only half an hour at a time. That is not enough to do any good.

Those other machines in a doctor's office never reach the trouble. Electric belts charged in vinegar and acid came nearer being a success, but you have to charge them every night.

To get the benefit without these defects I have worked for 20 years on a dry cell electric belt, and I've got it.

Electro-Vigor gives five times as much power as any vinegar belt made, and you never have to charge it. You have the current under perfect control, and it cannot burn or blister.

ELECTRO-VIGOR DRY CELL BODY BATTERY

is the only dry cell body battery in the world; the only body battery which does not have to be charged each time before using. It is always charged and ready for use. It is the modern, up-to-date scientific method of applying the grand curative power of electricity. Guaranteed for one year, it lasts a lifetime. It has special attachments for men.

My patents, issued by Uncle Sam, are the strongest that have ever been granted a maker of electro-medical body appliances. Beware of imitations.

Norristown, Pa., December 27, 1905.
Dr. S. J. HALL.
Dear Doctor:
Your Electro-Vigor appliance, which I have been wearing regularly since I received it about thirty days ago, is doing me great good. The pains through my back and kidneys have been eased to such an extent that it is seldom I have the least pain. I had no idea it would bring about results in such a short time. I am also glad to state that it has done my stomach a great deal of good. In fact, my entire nervous system is relieved of that tired feeling which I so often experienced before using the Electro-Vigor. It is to you I owe much for this relief.
Yours very truly,
THEODORE GAUL,
806 West Elm Street.

You just put on Electro-Vigor and turn on the current. No trouble, and five times more power than any vinegar belt gives.

That's all about what it is. This is what it does: it invigorates the weak; it arouses the fire of life in those who have begun to despair of ever knowing the vigor of youth again. It pours oil into the joints of the Rheumatic, relieves them of their pain and makes them feel like young athletes. It cures Dyspeptics and develops a stomach which will digest anything that is fit to eat. It restores vital energy in every organ of the body, making men and women stronger, happier and younger than they are. Electro-Vigor is life to weak people.

Philadelphia, Pa., January 12, 1906.
DOCTOR HALL.
I have spent over $200.00 with doctors, specialists and other electric treatments for kidney and bladder trouble and was growing worse all the time when I accidentally saw your advertisement in one of the papers. I had about lost faith in everything, but I thought I would make one more effort and I got your Electro-Vigor and used it as you told me to. The result is I am free from pain and have more snap and vigor—in fact, life is worth living now. My appetite has improved wonderfully, and I now enjoy a good sleep, something I was not able to get before.
I wish you every success, as you certainly deserve it. Yours respectfully,
JAS. H. BAIRD, 1119 Park Av.

Are you sick and weak? Electro-Vigor will cure you.

Don't drug, because drugs have never cured you, though you have tried them; and they never will. You have lost your nerve force. That is electricity, and Electro-Vigor will give it back.

FREE BOOK I have published a 100-page illustrated book which is the most beautiful book that has ever been devoted to electric treatment. It will interest you, and as it tells you my story in an honest, plain and candid way, I think you will like me better for having read it. I send it sealed, free, if you will inclose this coupon.

LAWSON OFF TO INSURANCE BATTLE.

With the intention of giving the Governors of Minnesota, Iowa and other States the power of being in voting command of the Equitable, New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies, Thomas W. Lawson will be in Chicago to-day and meet the committee which is to consider the plan of securing control of the big companies.

Mr. Lawson, accompanied by Mr. Ridgeway, publisher of the magazine in which "Frenzied Finance" is still running, and by Secretary McSweeney, left Boston yesterday afternoon on the 2 o'clock Wolverine express for Chicago. With two trunks filled with proxies of the policy holders of the insurance companies, giving Mr. Lawson the power to vote for them in the election of officers of the company, the famous stock operator and author had a special car, the Iolanthe, attached to the Wolverine express.

He expects that the dealing with the committee will be concluded by Monday night. If so, he will leave for Boston either that night or Tuesday morning.

Lawson Predicted Scandal.

Long before the exposures of the internal workings of the Equitable began, which exposures were followed by others relating to the New York Life and the Mutual Life, Mr. Lawson predicted that the day would come when the improper use of policyholders' money would come to light. He began his campaign against the insurance companies months ago, promising to oust the officers and elect new ones who should properly represent the policyholders. He promised to do this if the policyholders would send him their voting proxies, and he has stated that he has received more than the majority necessary to give him the balance of power at the election of officers.

Since Mr. Lawson began his campaign the New York investigating committee has made the names of Hyde, McCall, McCurdy, Alexander and others become bywords. Mr. Lawson has stated that he will deliver to the committee of governors the proxies which will give the power of ousting from their positions the men who are now in control of the three biggest insurance companies in the United States.

Great Upheaval Threatened.

If the proxies are delivered and voted according to plans already made, the greatest upheaval in the financial history of the country is to be expected. The three insurance companies have assets aggregating hundreds upon hundreds of millions. They control banks and trust companies. The railroad bonds they own represent ownership of the greater part of many railroads. Before the insurance war started the officers of the company were absolute despots over the control of the funds. It was shown at the insurance investigation that hundreds of thousands of policyholders' money went into the pockets of the insurance officials. Dinners costing $30,000, unearned salaries of hundreds of thousands of dollars, bond sales and purchases which enriched the insurance heads by millions of dollars, were only a few of the disclosures made.

If Mr. Lawson's trip is successful, if he does what he has promised to do and has said he can do, many thousands of people in the United States will be benefited. The stupendous spectacle will be presented of the public having free sway in the control of three great insurance companies. The enormous scope of such a result has hardly been contemplated, for it has seemed impossible of achievement.

DEALT IN STOCKS ON SPIRIT'S TIPS; $5,000 SUIT.

Rev. F. A. Wiggin, Medium, May Be Called in Hearing of Mrs. Simmons Against John Q. A. Whittemore, Millionaire

Whether or not the spirits of the departed dead have any knowledge of the fluctuations of the stock market is a question which will be raised at the hearing next Tuesday of a suit for $5,000 brought by Mrs. Adelaide E. Simmons of No. 157 Huntington avenue against Millionaire John Q. A. Whittemore of Cambridge.

It seems probable that the Rev. Frederick A. Wiggin of the Unity Church, a spiritualist and medium, who recently attracted attention by a statement that he had the long expected message from Dr. Richard Hodgson, will be an important witness.

According to allegations made by Mrs. Simmons she frequently consulted Mr. Wiggin shortly after the sudden death of her husband. At that time Mr. Wiggin gave her advice, and this advice was, she alleges, said to come from her dead husband's spirit.

Of these transactions Mrs. Simmons says:

"One day I asked Mr. Wiggin if I should invest any money in stocks. He said my husband approved of it and that Mr. Whittemore, a wealthy and reliable broker and a member of the Spiritualist society would be a good one to go to. He at once negotiated with Mr. Whittemore and bought for me 250 shares of the Sedalia Copper Company stock. He received a commission from Mr. Whittemore for the transaction.

"Later I bought fifty more shares of the same stock from Mr. Whittemore himself. Mr. Wiggin introduced me to Mr. Whittemore who pretended to be my friend, and told me specifically that I could have my money back at any time.

"After that I received my dividends for some time, six months or so, then they stopped. I went to Mr. Whittemore and asked for my capital back, telling him at the same time that I had learned that the stock was worth only $2 or $4 a share. He promised to settle it all up."

BROKER ARRESTED IN $25,000 SUIT OVER MINE.

New York, Feb. 3.—George H. Munroe, a member of the firm of Munroe & Munroe, brokers, was arrested to-day by Deputy Sheriff Walgerid, in a suit brought by former United States Senator Warner Miller to recover $25,000.

Munroe promptly furnished $15,000 bail and was released.

In his complaint Miller sets forth that the defendant obtained $25,000 from him by false representations in regard to the condition of the Montreal and Boston Mining and Smelting Company, Limited.

ROOSEVELT DINES HARVARD MATES

Several Boston Men Are Entertained by the President at the White House.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The President gave an informal dinner at the White House this evening, the guests being the members of the Harvard Class of 1880, of which the President was a member. Attorney General Moody and Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon were members of that class.

After the dinner the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and some of the dinner guests went to the reception at the residence of Vice President Fairbanks.

EXPECT ARREST IN CHASE DEATH MYSTERY.

Inquest to Be Resumed at Once, and Public May Soon Know Whether Rich Woman Took Own Life or Was Murdered

Lynn, Feb. 3.—Believing that the public should know whether or not Mrs. Jennie P. Chase of Swampscott was a suicide or was murdered, Judge Berry of the Municipal Court has declared that the inquest into her death must be resumed at once. New and startling testimony is expected when the inquest is resumed, and it is probable that an arrest will follow the finding of the Coroner. The inquest will probably be resumed on Monday or Tuesday.

To-day Judge Berry sent a letter to District Attorney Peters urging that the inquest be resumed. This evening Mr. Peters and Chief of Police Harris, of Swampscott were in consultation.

The inquest was adjourned during the sensational testimony on January 8 of Professor Whitney of Harvard to the effect that arsenic sufficient to kill was found in the stomach of the dead woman. Speaking of the delay Judge Berry said to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"I can see no valid reason for such prolonged delay. I believe the public should know as soon as possible whether Mrs. Chase met death at her own hand, or if there is a suspicion of murder."

Among the witnesses to be recalled are Dr. Chase, husband of the dead woman and Professor Whitney.

400 DINE AND TALK ABOUT TELEPHONES

Four hundred members of the Telephone Employees' Association of New England held their fifth annual banquet at the American House last night. W. J. Denvir was toastmaster and introduced the following, who addressed the diners: T. B. Lockwood of the American Bell Telephone Company.

BACCARAT A GAME OF SKILL

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Ghent, Feb. 3.—The Court of Appeals has decided that baccarat, played with one board, is a game of skill, not chance. The judgment was rendered in the case against M. Marquet, lessee of the Kursaal, at Ostend, who was charged with an infringement of the gambling laws.

NEPHEW OF GREAT ITO COMES FROM JAPAN AS A CABIN BOY

ARISTOCRATIC JAP YOUTHS LEARNING TO BE SAILORS

Shipped With Companion on the Brilliant, and Aspires to Be Officer in Mikado's Navy.

Naomi Ito, nephew of the distinguished Marquis Horimi Ito of Japan, who arrived here as a cabin boy on the big British sailing vessel Brilliant, explained yesterday that he is a cabin boy at present because he is bound to be an officer in the Japanese navy and having "flunked" his examinations, started in to be a sailor on his own hook as the next best thing.

"I am going to be an officer in the Japanese navy," he said, "and would be at the present time if I had not flunked my exams. Almost two years ago I graduated from Wachitia University in Japan. I tried the entrance exams for the Naval Academy at Tokio, but flunked my trigonometry. A year ago I decided I would go to sea and serve my apprenticeship before the mast, so that is why I am here. There's nothing like this life on deep water and one gets plenty of chance to study."

The young fellow gets nothing but praise from all on board, as his shipmates are great admirers of his independent spirit. As his uncle did before him, Ito decided to make his own way in the world although his parents are of a high caste in the Flowery Kingdom and are very wealthy.

The immense vessel has just completed a tour of the world. One year ago a cargo was shipped to Japan, and stops were only made for a few weeks at Newcastle, Australia, and on the coast of South America.

When the craft started from Tokio Naomi Ito and his companion, Kaije Tiko, another young Japanese aristocrat, had signed to make the voyage, the first to be cabin boy and utility man and the other as assistant steward. Both expected to leave the ship as soon as Boston was reached. They expected to have enough money at the end of the year's voyage to attend an American college, possibly Harvard, but now that the time has come for them to decide they have chosen to be sailors.

Baseball, both these young men declare, is played with more science in their country than here.

"Why," said young Tiko, "I know one of the pitchers on our university nine has eight distinct curves he uses, combined with great speed. Twice the baseball team from off the U. S. S. Kentucky landed and played our college team. The first game ended with the score of 42-0. The return game was 35-0, both in our favor."

"It's no use wrestling with either of those lads," said one of the crew when the two young Japanese had gone forward. "That Jiu Jitsu business they use is something wonderful. They can take the biggest man on this craft and place him on his back in two minutes."

SECRETARY TAFT'S HORSE.

Secretary Taft, who is hard at work reducing his great weight, devotes a good deal of time to equestrian exercise, which he finds of most value. The horse he rides has been described as "a large, square Percheron built on dry goods box lines and looking as though he might easily carry half a ton."

WANT BIRDS BACK AGAIN.

German farmers are trying to induce the smaller birds to return to their old haunts about the fields, and for this purpose are setting out boxes and other artificial devices to serve the birds for homes. The farmers need the birds to destroy the insects.

DIAMOND PROFITS BIG

Steady Demand for These Securities.

Investors See Big Returns from Money.

Colonial Diamond Field Rich With Precious Stones.

Information as to the vast properties and securities of the Colonial Diamond Mining Company which appeared in this paper last Sunday were sufficient to demonstrate how eager and anxious New England investors are to grasp a solid, conservative and profitable investment. This company owns outright 1500 acres of diamond property on British territory. A thorough scientific and expensive examination has proven beyond any question the large deposits of diamonds. These diamonds are of the so-called "Melee" type, and are of a size and unusual hardness which places them in great demand, and they are selling on the open market as high as $125 per carat.

These precious stones are secured without expensive machinery and without an elaborate plant, manual labor alone being required to extract them from Mother Earth.

This vast diamond field is located where customs or duty or royalty are not required, but the British Government exerts a supervision and require reports, so that officially there is on record at all times exact information as to the products from these fields. For 4 months our company has had a gang of workmen employed, and the profits from their work on the diamond fields is more than satisfactory, but we want to put several hundred men at work on the diamond fields, and for this purpose we are selling a small block of capital stock at $10 par per share.

The money from the sale of this stock will be used entirely in employing more workmen on the diamond fields. This company is capitalized for $500,000.00, and we have no hesitancy in declaring that large dividends will be cleared the first year.

If you are interested in making an investment of from $50 to $1000 send us your name and address, or call at this office and we will show you the products of our diamond fields and point out to you that no better opportunity for a safe and conservative investment has been offered New England people.

Hetty Green, the Richest Woman in the World, Says: "The Way to Get Rich Is to Invest in Necessities."

The Bidwell Cold Motor is one of the greatest necessities of the 20th Century. This stock has already taken three jumps up. Now is the time to buy. It will go higher in about thirty days. The profit is yours. Don't speculate—invest. Here you have a necessity. Look at this list below. Every one of these people made his fortune by supplying some great necessity:

THE BIDWELL COLD MOTOR.

I will supply the greatest necessity now known in the business world. The demand is so large that it will make all of us rich. If you want to get in with me on this you will have to be quick about it. The stock is selling like hot cakes.

PROF. BENSON BIDWELL.

Inventor of the Trolley Car System.
Inventor of the Railway Car Telephone System.
Inventor of the Bidwell Cold Motor.
Inventor of the Water Electric Generator.

I never made an unsuccessful invention. My first invention was the elctric fan just as it is run all over this country in hot weather. I didn't get a patent on it, but see what a tremendous success it is!

I next inventd the Trolley Car System, just as it is run to-day, I made it perfect and successful right from the start. It has never been improved since I invented it. Look at the millions of money it has made for the stockholders. The stock in the trolley manufacturing companies sold below 15 cents a share in 1893 and 1894. Poor men could buy that stock then. Thousands of them did buy it and every one who held onto it is a rich man to-day.

No Man on Earth Ever Lost a Penny He Invested With Me.

Next I invented the Railway Car Telephone System which is now being installed on the Southern Pacific Railroad. It is a system by which passengers or train crews can telephone from still or moving cars anywhere the same as if seated in an office. It is a more perfect system in operation than any other telephone you ever saw. This is on the road toward millions for the stockholders.

This Is My Greatest Invention.

Now I have invented something bigger and greater than either of the above. It is called the Bidwell Cold Motor. It is guaranteed not to burn out and is exactly the kind of a motor the steam railroad people have been looking for. It will change all the steam railroad systems over to electric roads, because it will be cheaper to run than steam and can be run faster and more safely than any present method.

The one drawback the railroads have had in changing over to electricity has been that no motor as at present made can be run 150 miles at 60 miles an hour without burning out. It would melt the very wires.

By using the Bidwell Cold Motor a train of cars could be run from New York to San Francisco without a stop at the rate of 60 or 80 miles an hour and not even warm up and without a hitch.

Besides running faster they would be more safe and sure than steam, cost less to operate, and would last longer than any other motor now known.

The Bidwell Cold Motor is the greatest invention out since I invented the trolley car.

The Opportunity of a Lifetime.

I want to give every man and woman a chance to come in with me on this, for I expect to make millions for the stockholders out of this new patent.

The stock will be sold on the square. There will be no hocus pocus about preferred or common stock, nor any other scheme, trick or wrinkle by which anybody can be frozen out.

Every dollar invested will represent one hundred cents of the best stock. Every share will be exactly like every other share. The profit on every share will be the same as the profit on every other share. In short, there will be nothing but a square deal all around.

I have a life long reputation for square dealing. I will personally see to it that every stockholder gets a square deal on this.

In order to make it possible for every man and woman to get in with me on this big deal I have decided to sell the stock for a short time only at the following prices.

100 shares, $40; 250 shares, $100; 500 shares, $200; 1,000 shares, $400; 5,000 shares, $2,000; not over five thousand shares at this price to any one person.

OUR MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN.

100 shares, $6 cash, seven monthly payments of $5 each; 250 shares, $16 cash, seven monthly payments of $12 each; 500 shares, $30 cash, seven monthly payments of $25 each; 1,000 shares, $40 cash, ten monthly payments of $37 each; 5,000 shares, $200 cash, ten monthly payments of $185 each.

Send all money by bank draft, express money order, P. O. order or registered letter.

Special to Electric Light Men and Manufacturers.

We are now prepared to fill your orders in our own factory. We are now manufacturing the Bidwell Cold Motors. We are taking orders for cold motors and cold generators for arc and incandescent lights on a guarantee not to burn out for 10 years.

Be a Safe and Sane Investor and Get as Much of This Stock as Your Means Will Allow. It Will Pay You a Life Income in Handsome Dividends.

More money is made every day by good judgment in investing money than by all the labor and wages in the country. Safe and shrewd investment in this stock will make fortunes.

You will never get rich on wages. No one ever did. Every man in this world who ever got big money got it either by speculation or investment. Speculation is unsafe. You stand more chance to lose than you do to make. Investments are right the other day. Make a safe investment and it is sure to bring you returns.

Here Is a Vital Point to Remember!

There never has been a failure of consequence in electrical manufacturing. Stop and think of that. All are immensely successful. All pay big dividends and have made their investors wealthy.

This company will soon be one of the biggest in electrical manufacturing in the world. This is bound to be so, because there is not a place now where a motor or generator is used but it will have to sooner or later change for the Bidwell Cold Motor or Generator. Why? Because we make something better than any other kind now known.

These Are Cold Facts—You Must Act Quickly.

If you want some of this stock at the present low price you must come in now. There is only a small amount to be sold at this price.

I firmly believe that within five years the stock will be selling at $3 a share. This is your opportunity. It is a case of come quick or not at all.

BULLS TOSSED IN DRIVE BY BEARS.

Wild Rush of Selling Follows Report of Threatened Strike in Coal Districts.

READING BEARS BRUNT IN BIG MARKET RAID

The sharpest decline which the stock market has suffered in months occurred yesterday, marking a temporary ending of an unprecedented bull movement. At odds with itself, Wall Street has paused to think the situation over and decide what it really wants.

It has vacillated for a week between an active stock market and a dull one, between an advancing and a retreating impulse, between strength and weakness, now with a firm intention of plunging madly ahead in a resumption of its recent wild career, now hesitating, feebly tremulous, as to what course to pursue.

The speculative mind will eventually be made up, without doubt, to carry on the bull movement which has halted, but just now it is engaged in contemplating the situation which it has created.

Boom Followed Reaction.

The week started with a reaction, which was hailed as a good thing for the market, as it would obviate the danger of fictitious values being enacted. Prices slumped badly for two days, partly because of profit taking and partly because a reaction was due and was helped along by large interests which were opposed to stocks going any higher at that time. Then, on Wednesday, the market went up with a rush that was accepted as sure proof that the downward course of prices was at an end. The next day the market was more irregular, although Amalgamated almost reached 117, Anaconda went back above 260, the Steels rose again and Reading recovered some of the loss it had suffered during the reaction. The irregularity continued to prevail, and there was less activity. The more active traders seem, after yesterday's break, to have closed out their accounts and to be now content to give the market a little time in which to adjust itself and get into condition for another period of great activity. It seems to be generally expected that the next movement of the market will be upward, although no such bull market as the one we have just witnessed is anticipated.

Strength Still Unshaken.

The underlying strength of the market is unshaken. Stocks, or the greater part of them, are in strong hands, which are able to control the situation. General business is a hive of industrial prosperity, and earnings of security-issuing companies were never greater. The many great market

FIX DATE FOR FIRST TRIAL ON GRAFT CHARGES.

Central Falls, R. I., Feb. 3.—The trial of Joseph Vadimis of this city, who is charged with obtaining money from Anthony Pytel, proprietor of the Crown Hotel, and offering the same to Aldermen Joseph Wright and other city officials for influence in obtaining a license for the said Crown Hotel, is set down for Friday, February 9, in the District Court in Central Falls.

The arrest caused a sensation throughout the city, inasmuch as it was the first arrest made in the State under the "anti-graft" law passed at the last session of the General Assembly. It is intimated that other arrests [illegible] with alleged grafting will follow shortly.

FRENCH FIRM TO START BIG PLANT

Providence, Feb. 3.—The vote of the City Council of Woonsocket exempting from taxation for a term of fifteen years the firm of Tiberghien & Sons of Turcoing, France, has made it practically certain that a big yarn spinning plant, the first of a chain of such structures, will be erected in Woonsocket early in April, giving employment to more than 300 hands and that within a year other plants will follow which will employ about 1,500 operatives and represent an investment of upward of $500,000.

It is proposed to erect dyeing and finishing plants, yarning, combing and weaving mills and to do in this country a considerable part of the business the firm now does in France.

Other French manufacturers are said to be awaiting the result of this experiment and are likely to follow the example of the Tiberghiens.

PROBING HILLER'S MANAGEMENT OF ESTATE.

New Haven, Feb. 3.—It is understood that the administrator of the estate of Mrs. A. [illegible] Hiller, who died some time before the mysterious "suicide" of Charles A. Edwards in the Hiller house, will ask A. Maxey Hiller, her son, to give an accounting of the revenue obtained from the property at Chapel and High streets, of which he had been the virtual agent for twelve years. It is not clear just now how much money Mrs. Hiller received from this source.

Mrs. Hiller, according to members of her family, always thought that the entire income was not more than $600 a year. The administrator, who has examined the [illegible] of the property, has learned that the property has been renting for a total of from $1,600 to $1,700 a year.

[illegible] Chapel street property was the cause of much trouble in the Hiller family. Maxey Hiller was determined that his mother should deed it to him or make him the administrator of her will. His animosity to Charles A. Edwards was due in a measure to the fact that the latter was opposed to this proposition.

THERE WILL BE NO COAL STRIKE.

New York, Feb. 3.—There will be no coal strike. There will be much agitation, and the miners may even be forced to go through the formality of voting for a strike. But there will be no strike. Public sentiment is having some influence these days. The coal operators have learned to fear it. They have been exploiting the stocks in their companies in a sensational manner and they have, in the course of their stock market campaigns, given the public full information as to their [illegible] profits.

In doing this, they have burned the bridges behind them. They must grant the increase in wages demanded by the miners. They have plenty of money to pay the increase without adding a penny to the price of coal. If they refuse to do so, their whole stock market structure will collapse in panic.

The miners are under the leadership of men who know this as well as do the operators. But the leaders of the miners are men of rare intelligence and discretion. They will not take any [illegible] advantage of their superior tactical position. Their demands will be moderate and the public will be unanimously on the side of the workingmen at this time.

The operators recognize this [illegible] and are beginning thus early through their subsidized newspapers to scold the miners for wanting a share of the immense wealth which they have helped to create. They are trying to overcome the insurmountable. They will grant the increase and there will be no strike, but stubborn pride may cause them to make a false appearance of firmness up to the very last day of the judgment.

The stock market, therefore, must be viewed with the understanding that all rumors of strike which will be current between now and the first of March are false.

They will create reactions. Timid traders will be frightened out [illegible], and [illegible] it will be found that after [illegible] shake-up the market is firm.

The copper war is settled. The big railroad deals are going through and given good crops, the year of 1906 will [illegible] the greatest, widest [illegible] highest bull market in history.

Devoted to Mining as a Business.

The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company, a Colorado corporation capitalized for $1,500,000, stock fully paid up and nonassessable, is an enterprise devoted exclusively to MINING AS A BUSINESS. It is offered by men of the highest reputation and personal integrity.

The properties and privileges of the Company are calculated to produce such revenues as will make the stockholders independent for life.

Idaho Springs, Colo.

Idaho Springs, Colorado, is one of the largest and is one of the oldest mining camps in the State. It is 38 miles west of Denver on the Colorado & Southern Railroad. Gold predominates, but silver, lead and zinc are found in quantities and some copper. The value of the ore produced here runs into the millions annually, and competent mining engineers say that these mines have but just begun to deliver their enormous tonnage of precious ores.

OVER THREE HUNDRED PRODUCING MINES in this district and twice as many new ones to be opened up, most of which require cheap transportation means to get the ore to the railroad or mills and this means transportation tunnels.

What is a Transportation Tunnel?

In the Idaho Springs Mining District, covering practically all of Clear Creek county, as I have told you, there are over 300 mines being actively operated, and there are probably three times as many that are not operated, some of them equal, if not of greater value. These mines are located, many of them, in most inaccessible places upon the mountain tops and sides, usually where the veins crop out above the ground. When the mine owner or company operating has followed the vein down into the ground a sufficient distance, hoisting machinery is necessary to draw up the ore. Such machinery is operated by steam and requires coal. The coal has to be hauled up from the railroad, anywhere from half a mile to five or six miles distant, and the cost of hauling it up from the railroad to [illegible] mountain tops and sides is oftentimes more than the cost of the coal itself. After the ore has been hoisted out of the pit or shaft, it must be hauled by wagon back to the railroad, and there reduced by a mill or shipped direct to the smelters at Denver. The enormous cost of getting the ore up out of the shafts and to the railroad means that only high-grade ore can be utilized, that is, ore that will run enough gold to the ton to pay all these burdensome expenses and still leave some profit. If these expenses could only be reduced, the hundreds of mine owners would make a greater profit on the high-grade ore and would also be able to market practically all of their low grade ore.

Now it is a geographical fact in the Idaho Springs District, that the ore veins grow [illegible] and richer the deeper under the surface they go. In some instances they have been tapped 1,000 and 2,500 feet below the surface and found to be from two to six times as thick as on the surface and from two to ten times as rich in quality. Now imagine a tunnel run through such district veins of ore, imagine the ease of the operators of the mines, going into the tunnel and blasting the ore from overhead and dumping it into our cars, and letting us run it out through our tunnel direct to the railroad at a cost to the mine owner of $1.00 a ton, as against a cost of several dollars a ton by the former method of working on the surface with a steam hoist and the requirement of coal, etc., etc., to be transported by wagon over the mountain tops. Five hundred tons a day is a fair average of what one mine can produce when such a tunnel cuts its vein under the circumstances suggested. Ten such mines would produce a fair average of 5,000 tons a day, 20 would produce 10,000 tons a day, etc., which at an average rate of $1.00 per ton means an enormous earning capacity for the tunnel, while the cost of operating [illegible] comparatively slight.

Such a tunnel also drains the water from the mines, for which a reasonable charge is made, also from our powerhouse power is furnished for the various mines, also electric lights for the miners, all of which means a profit to us.

Rich Properties and Perfect Title.

The property and privileges of the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company consists of five Patented Claims, 82 acres of Placer Ground, a Tunnel Site, Water Rights and the rights pertaining to a Transportation Tunnel. The Company's title to these properties and privileges consists of United States Patents (the most perfect title obtainable for a mine), covering the Mining Claims and Placer Grounds, and the title to the Transportation Tunnel privileges is secured under the laws of the State of Colorado.

How the Company Will Make Money.

FIRST OF ALL THE TUNNEL (which is already bored over 600 feet) will be run through eighty active mines, which have to date produced about $60,000,000.00 by expensive surface and shaft workings. Several will be cut this year. Ten such mines can send enough ore through our tunnel to earn for us annually profits of between one and two millions of dollars, after deducting all operating expenses. This tunnel will be a big producer for more than a natural lifetime.

THE GREAT HOOSAC MINES are the FIRST to be cut by our [illegible], which is now bored to within 200 feet of this mammoth body of ore, and WE OWN THESE MINES, which contain enough ore, estimated by engineers, to run from 1,500,000 to 6,000,000 tons, and which assays $3.50 to $40.00 a ton. The cost of mining ore is so slight that profits of many millions will accrue to the stockholders of this Company.

THE HOOSAC MILL will be the third source of profit. At the mouth of the TUNNEL this Company will erect at once a 100-ton concentrating mill which will not only treat the ores of the Company's mines, but will also do custom work for the other mines of the neighborhood. The earnings of such a mill will be between $30,000 and $50,000 a year.

THREE DISTINCT PROFIT EARNING FEATURES—two of them of enormous proportions—constitute the business of the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company.

This business is unlike most propositions offered the public. IT is NOT a speculation or a prospect.

Safety of the Company's Management.

The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company has for its President and Active Manager, and one of the principal owners of the enterprise, Mr. E. D. Quigley, who for 35 years has been one of the foremost operators of the Idaho Springs District. Mr. Quigley is a man of exceptional ability, strength of character and genuine worth. He is highly indorsed by all the Bankers of Idaho Springs and several of the principal banks of Denver, by the newspaper publishers, by the Chamber of Commerce and by all who recognize and appreciate real worth and real manhood. Mr. Quigley is pledged to the Company to carry this enterprise without digression or interruption, to the greatest possible success and in the speediest possible manner, with all regard to safety, economy and general business prudence. Mr. Quigley is not a Wall street magnate, schooled in the fine art of stock jobbing and manipulation of the people's money. He is a practical and competent man of honor, fitted by disposition, education, experience and success to be the organizer, the leader, and the respected chief of this enterprise. He well deserves this compliment as recently expressed in an editorial in the Idaho Springs Siftings-News, as follows:

"Mr. Quigley, to whom the credit is due for having successfully financed this proposition, is one of our oldest and most conservative mine operators. He has a thorough knowledge of the mines of Gilpin and Clear Creek Counties, his operations therein covering a period of 35 years. He is energetic, experienced, and of unquestioned integrity, and every dollar committed to his care will be consecrated to the operation and development of the properties under his charge.

"This, taken in connection with the merit of the propositions named, is a guarantee of a successful issue."

Why You Are Asked to Join.

The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Co. can borrow enough money to accomplish its purposes, but the directors and stockholders will not permit the Company to run in debt to such an extent. There are big capitalists who would put up the money, but they would want to own the business themselves, and then the present owners and you, if you were a stockholder, would not have the profits that the business will surely earn. So you are asked to come in with hundreds of others as a partner and buy at the present ground-floor price as much stock (on easy terms) as you feel you can afford to buy.

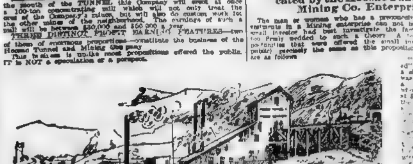
The management of this Company is such that your investment of $5.50 or $50.00 or $[illegible], or whatever it may be, will be as conscientiously accounted for and probably more so than if you were the owner of the Company and had the active management in your own charge.

Probable Profit to You—Several Hundred Per Cent. Annually.

This is treasury stock that is offered and the price at which you can buy it to-day is far below the value at which it will be held when the TUNNEL, MILL and MINES of the Company are in active operation. If the estimates of our experts are realized by one-third the figures they state, this stock will be worth many times its par value of $1.00 per share. Your income from dividends, it is reasonable to suppose, would be annually per share many times more than you have to pay for it now.

Past Opportunities That Have Produced Vast Fortunes Thought to be Duplicated by the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Co. Enterprise.

The man or woman who has a preconceived notion that investments in a Mining enterprise can not be profitable to the small investor had best investigate the facts before becoming too firmly wedded to such a theory. A few of the vast opportunities that were offered the small investor (the general public) precisely the same as this proposition is being offered, are as follows:



"Union Consolidated" was quoted at 9c a share and in a year was selling for $10.00 a share. The man who bought 50 shares at $4.5[illegible] made $500 on the transaction in [illegible] his dividends. The man who [illegible] a greater [illegible] shares [illegible] proposition, [illegible] multiplied [illegible] from [illegible] share to $65 [illegible] single year.

$[illegible] invested in Isabella in 18[illegible] is now worth $[illegible] and, in addition, you would have received $350.00 in dividends.

$[illegible] invested in [illegible] Con. stock in 18[illegible] is now worth $2,000.00 and in addition you would have received $1,000 in dividends.

$25 invested in "Jack Pot" in 1894 is now worth $1,500.00, and in addition you would have received $750.00 in dividends.

$100 invested in the "Elkton" mines in about 60 days realized $8,600.

"Granite Mountain" shares were peddled on the streets of St. Louis at 10c, with but few buyers. In six months it sold for $10.00, and in less than two years it was quoted for $75.00 per share, and has paid over $14,000,000 in dividends.

The Boston News Bureau was the first to give information concerning it, and has never yet failed to be in the lead with Anaconda or Amalgamated information. It will endeavor to keep its readers posted in the future as in the past.

It was in

manipulators who have, in one way or another, some connection with Amalgamated and the Heinze interests, have been able, through this strength of the general market, to work their will on the copper specialties. They have had in mind the probable settlement of the copper war and the uniting of the great Amalgamated and United Copper interests.

During the past two months large blocks of Amalgamated and United Copper have been acquired by friends of the companies, and this buying sent Amalgamated across par and United Copper above 75. Whenever the prices went above the desired purchase price the market was attacked, and this accounts for the reactions in those stocks which followed displays of great strength. Nothing definitely is known as to when the details of the new copper combination, the most important one since Amalgamated itself was formed, will be made public. In fact, official announcement that the combination will be actually effected is lacking. But doubt has practically vanished and experts are busy figuring out the details.

Heinze the Real Victor.

One of them believes that Amalgamated will purchase United Copper out of its surplus, necessitating no new issue of stock. Henry H. Rogers is the man whose name figures most prominently in the deal, and he is supposed to have been the one who brought to an end the big copper war through agreeing to have a syndicate purchase United Copper and then deal with him as the representative of Amalgamated. He did not deal personally with F. Augustus Heinze, the president of the United Copper Company. The feud between these two has been so bitter that personal relations were impossible. But if the reports of the settlement are true, it is Heinze and not the Standard Oil magnate who won the victory. He has fought a single-handed battle and has made not less than $10,000,000 since he first went to Butte, Mont., fifteen years ago, practically penniless.

If the settlement of the copper war is a fact, it means that one of the most far reaching feuds in the history of the country is at an end. Society, judges, courts, commerce and Legislatures have been involved in the quarrel. The Montana State elections have depended upon it, and elections to Congress have been influenced. Lives, even, have been sacrificed. Because of the litigation, the Supreme Court of Montana fell behind in its calendar two years. Both principals in the quarrel maintained daily newspapers for years in order to exploit their contentions. The elections became miniature wars, extending to the miners working for the rival camps. Underground battles were fought in Butte and many lives taken. All this had its influence on the stock market, and if it is now over there will be great relief everywhere, and Butte will become a peaceful region for the first time. Montana produces nearly one-fourth of the world's copper supply, and practically all of this fourth is mined at Butte.

Gigantic Trading.

The above-mentioned buying of Amalgamated, together with other buying which it induced, resulted in trading of enormous blocks of the stock, and the dealings at times monopolized the floor of the exchange. On Friday 350,000 shares of Amalgamated alone changed hands. The transactions yesterday amounted to 130,000 shares, but Union Pacific was the market leader with 147,000 shares. An expected dividend of 3 per cent on Union Pacific, to be declared next Tuesday, was not considered a bull argument, and caused much selling of this issue.

The prospect of a coal strike was the acute cause of the break in the general market yesterday, and the consequent influence on Reading, in particular, sent stocks tumbling from whatever vantage points they had gained. The stocks which in the recent upward movement had had the greatest advances suffered worst. A decline in London also fostered a decline in New York. When the rush to sell began there was no stopping it, and, finally 846,000 shares had changed hands, a large number for such a market, although not so large as on some preceding Saturdays when the movement was consistently upward.

Some pronounced bulls have shifted to the bear side, but the best opinion is that this further reaction is only temporary. The shakedown was engineered by the large interests, but it happened that they chose the psychological moment when the majority of traders were ready either to take their profits or to get on the short side. A decrease of $4,702,225 in the bank reserves, as shown by the statement of the associated banks, added its mite to the general inclination to sell.

The net result is, probably to the benefit of the market. Weak holdings have been shaken out, the level of prices has been lowered, there is much less danger of fictitious values being created, and the market is in a good condition for a resumption of the advance. Higher prices, therefore, are to be expected.

Decline Was General.

Of sixty-one stocks traded in on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday only two issues showed advances, and these were unimportant changes. American Locomotive gained ⅜ to 74⅜, and Leather preferred advanced ⅛ to 107⅛. All the other stocks declined, a circumstance which has not occurred to a similar extent in several months. Now that it is a fact, another consistent movement will probably be inaugurated as soon as the market leaders decide what is best to do.

Amalgamated was one of the most conspicuous features yesterday. After opening at 116, the price fluctuated, then became weak, and finally closed at 114⅝, a decline of 1½ points. This decline gave a shock to those who had expected an interrupted advance, due to the settlement of the copper war, but it may have been a move on the part of those who are actually acquiring the stock and do not want to pay any more for it than they are forced to pay. Anaconda was less active than usual, but shared the general decline by dropping 8¼ points to 276½. Baltimore & Ohio lost 1 to 114½. Brooklyn Rapid Transit lost 1⅝ to 86⅝. St. Paul 2 to 105, Chicago, Northwestern 6 to 228. This drop of six points occurred also in Tennessee Coal & Iron on transactions of only 300 shares and was the largest decline for the day. Reading was made the particular subject of a bear drive and dropped 4¼ points to 137⅝. St. Paul was driven down two points to 185. Colorado Fuel & Iron 3 points to 72, Great Northern preferred 5 points to 83⅛, Missouri Pacific 1¼ to 101¼, Northern Pacific 3 to 212, New York Central 2 to 149, Union Pacific 3 to 155, Steel common 1⅝ to 44⅝, Steel preferred 1 to 111⅛.

Boston Escapes Slump.

The Boston stock market did not suffer so severely as did that in New York, and seemed inclined to be independent. There was not the usual disposition of stocks to act in sympathy with the course of the New York market. Most of the coppers declined during the trading, however, but the losses were small. North Butte and Copper Range, two of the most active coppers, were among the heaviest losers, each declining 1¼ points, the former to 86¼ and Copper Range to 82. Boston Consolidated lost 1 to 28½, Greene Consolidated, ⅛ to 27⅞; Michigan, ¼ to 15; Old Dominion, ½ to 37¼; Osceola, ½ to 102¼; Parrot ¼ to 41¼; United Copper, 2 to 78¾. This last was the most severe decline among the coppers. It was caused by the loss in Amalgamated and indicates that there is by no means to be an unlimited advance because of the settlement of the copper war. The determined effort to keep the price below 75 is significant in view of the possible purchase of the stock by the Amalgamated interests. Utah lost ⅝ to 65 and Wolverine declined 1 point to 132. In the general list Boston & Worcester preferred was conspicuous, gaining 1 point to 81, after advancing 3 points to 80 on the previous day. Trading on the exchange was not active.

Financial Notes.

The average closing of the sixteen leading stocks yesterday was 139⅝, or 1¼ lower than on Friday, and ⅝ above the highest and 14 13-16 above the lowest for the corresponding day of 1905.

Exports of specie from New York to all countries during the week aggregated a total of silver and gold of $1,894,174, as compared with a total of $12,274,408 during the same period of last year. The imports of specie last week were a total of $37,205, as compared with $219,912 last year.

The American Consolidated Copper Company, the new $150,000,000 Coram copper combination, will open offices in New York to-morrow at No. 42 Broadway. S. S. Rosenstamm, formerly of the United States Metals Selling Company, will be in charge of the New York office of the company.

Leading manufacturing interests of New England say that there are no signs of a lessening of the demand for manufactured products, and they are looking forward to a remarkably prosperous business year in 1906. They say the only cloud in sight is the possibility of a coal strike.

The week in the money market closed with an easy tone and very little change. Boston banks are not very rich having invested heavily of late in commercial paper. There has been considerable shifting of call loans from Boston to New York by a leading stock commission house, and there is likely to be further shifting during the coming week. Note brokers report a large business, chiefly confined to out of town. Sales of commercial paper to Chicago banks have been extremely heavy. On call, money rules at 4 to 4½ per cent. Time loans range from 4 to 5 per cent.

GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Following are the last quotations on government bonds

Norton Oil vs. State Street

I am offering for public subscription 1000 shares of the 10% preferred stock of the Norton Oil Company, of Liberty Township, Delaware County, Indiana; par value $100 a share, at $131 a share, yielding the purchaser a fully guaranteed net income of above 7 3-5%, and with every share I am giving a like share of the common stock FREE, AS A BONUS.

The preferred stock, at par, paying 10%—

The common stock at par now earning over 11% and because of the great possibilities that lie in the development to the full production of the property and the assured advance in the price of oil, is worth fully as much as the preferred stock, if not more.

The two shares, with a par value of $200 and with an actual value of $262, or more, I consider a rare and extraordinary inducement at $131.

I have in the past few weeks sold nearly $200,000 worth of both classes of Norton Oil stock to discriminating investors in New England and elsewhere, and all holders of preferred stock of record December 28th, 1905, have received their quarterly dividend of 2½%, which was paid January 1st, 1906.

The 10% preferred stock is of itself alone well entitled to the premium it is selling for, on account of the fact that at that price it yields 7 3-5% on the investment—a return nearly double that paid by any bank or trust company in the United States on deposits made with them—a return in excess of that yielded, so far as I am aware, by any of the corporations with their securities listed on the Boston and New York Stock Exchanges.

A sweeping statement, but easily proved by actual comparison.

Here are a few of the leading securities listed on the Boston and New York Stock Exchanges, including some of the most recent favorites, which may be taken as representative of the entire list, and it shows the returns yielded by manipulated stocks in comparison with Norton Oil 10 per cent. preferred:

The stocks and bonds of manipulated corporations are paraded before the investing public day by day with all the impressiveness of print. They cut wide swaths in the speculative markets, and the daily paper gives up its most carefully arranged page to describing their course, but the plain investor gleans from them mighty little.

Many good people buy them for investment purposes to have and to hold because they are "Ravished by the whistling of a name." They buy New York Central at 155, notwithstanding it yields them but a little over 3%, simply to be able to include the stock certificate of such a well-known railroad corporation among their worldly possessions and to say (to themselves, if to no one else), "I have New York Central." In doing so they are animated by the same empty, foolish vanity which moves people of limited means to hire the most expensive rooms en suite of the highest-priced hotel when visiting the city for a day or two—simply for the style and the name of having done so.

But sensible investors want their money's worth. They want all that is coming to them in the way of returns on their money. They will not be cheated out of the just dues of their money by the representations of bankers and financiers who with an axe to grind insist upon their remaining content with money on deposit and investments that represent little or nothing in the way of returns.

A representative of my office a few weeks ago called by appointment on a wealthy gentleman in an interior New England city, and secured from him an interview on investment matters. As the result of that interview, the gentleman withdrew $18,000 he had been carrying on deposit in bank and transferred it to a number of investment securities, among them being those of a corporation for which I am financial agent. He did well in making the change; he would have done a great deal better had he invested the entire amount in my line—that he now freely admits.

I am a stockholder of record in ten national banks in Boston and number among my closest and best friends bankers here and elsewhere. I recognize the necessity and uses of their calling; its dignity, its duties and its responsibilities. I grant that the banking business, within its proper sphere, renders a certain substantial and distinctive public service. Banks buy and sell credit and facilitate the exchange of money and the transactions of commerce. But for permanent investment purposes the returns paid in the way of interest on deposits by them are manifestly unfair and to people of moderate means they are entirely inadequate to their needs.

Well, the bankers that lost the $18,000 deposit, which is, by the way now within seven thousand dollars of enough to start a mushroom national bank with, got awful mad at me, I am told. They had, to begin with, in discussing with their large depositor the matter of making the withdrawal, decried me and pooh-hoohed and belittled the corporations I represent, as I can imagine. Having failed to prevent their depositor from making the withdrawal, and being sore because of it, I understand they undertook to "look me up." And from that time on I have been derided and reviled. My name has been anathema. Heaven has no rage nor hell a fury like that of a banker who has lost a large deposit or a depositor of large means. And all the venom of their wrath descended on my head this time. Hereafter, let that pass, any financial institution, which hires money of the people at the rate of three or four cents on the dollar for a year's service, horse thieves will be respectable and delicate members of society alongside of me.

But I am pursuing, nevertheless, the even tenor of my way, as it were, undisturbed by the oaths and threats of those who seem to think that the people exist only for their pickings. I am doing business in broad daylight, and I invite the closest investigation into my affairs, my habits and my responsibility.

I have no apologies to make for my fight against those who think they have a right divine to "Grind the faces of the poor" with their negligible rates of interest. I believe the words of the Book of Gold that "The laborer is worthy of his hire" and I believe, moreover, that the dollar, representing as it does the stored up labor of the laborer, is in a like degree also worthy of its hire. And I say that, inasmuch as the official statistics of the government show that for fifty years the per capita wealth of the country has increased at the rate of 8% a year, less than 8 cents for the labors of a dollar a whole year does not represent an honest wage. Just as certainly as a good linotype operator is worth in any large city in this country $21 a week, just as certainly a dollar is worth 8 cents for a year's hire. And the proposition to reduce the hire of the dollar from 8 to 4 or 3 or 2½ cents a year is precisely of the same stripe as the attempt to reduce the wages of a linotype operator from $21 to $10.50 or $8 or $7 a week.

The Norton Oil Company has 393¾ acres of oil-producing lands near Muncie, Indiana, in the heart of what is known in government reports and otherwise as the Lima-Indiana oil and gas field.

This section is one of the most prosperous and flourishing in all the Middle West, largely due to its vast stores of petroleum and natural gas. It is ramified with railroads and trolley lines that in appointments, schedules and service have been practically brought to the same standard as the steam railroads.

The Lima-Indiana field is the second largest oil-producing field in the United States, the Appalachian field (including Pennsylvania) being the largest. The entire field, almost in the shape of an egg, stretches from Lake Erie on the northeastern extremity to the Illinois line on the southwestern, and from Logansport, Indiana, on its western side to Dayton, Ohio, on its eastern side. In the centre of this egg-shaped field—in a limited section which the colored maps of the government designate as being the richest in petroleum and natural gas of any in the United States—are located the valuable established and settled producing properties of the Norton Oil Company.

The government statistics on the subject of crude petroleum show that while Pennsylvania increased the value of its production for 1904 by only $336,222 over 1903, and while for the same period Ohio decreased its production by $2,501,000 and West Virginia showed a decrease of $517,249, Indiana INCREASED the value of its production by $1,[illegible] While the United States for 1904 increased its oil production less than 7% over that of the preceding year, Indiana made an increase of OVER 16%.

The Norton Oil Company has one of the largest producing properties in the Indiana field, held in perpetual lease. It has expended over $150,000 in new and modern equipments, making it in that respect second to none in all that section. It owns its entire plant, and has not a dollar of debt, making it one of the cleanest-cut corporations in America.

It has 38 producing oil wells and one natural gas well. Its wells have been drilled all around the borders of its property, so as to protect its product from being drawn off by other companies. Throughout the entire interior of its area not a well has been drilled, and President Norton estimates that there are locations on the property for 75 more wells. In all the drilling, but one dry hole has been encountered—a record that is rarely, if ever, equalled.

The property is now on a gross earning basis of at least $150,000 a year, and for the year its net profits will probably reach that figure, as new wells are constantly being drilled and several more will be in operation by the early Spring.

Its capitalization is $1,000,000, $400,000 being 10% preferred stock and $600,000 common stock. Par value of shares $100.

Dividends on the preferred stock are payable April 1st, July 1st, October 1st and January 1st of each year.

Special dividends on the common stock are declared from the surplus earnings from time to time, and it is my opinion that there will be a substantial dividend paid on the common stock this Spring or Summer.

The dividend requirements of the preferred stock will never exceed $40,000 a year, so, inasmuch as the annual gross earnings of the business may be increased to $400,000 at the present price of 91c. a barrel, or to $500,000 or to $600,000 should the expected advance in the price of oil be realized, it will be seen that a large surplus will remain to be shared in the shape of dividends by the common stock I am giving away FREE AS A BONUS.

The White River, which runs through the centre of the property, is to be utilized as a water power to propel the company's machinery. The cost of building a dam and harnessing this natural power will not, in President Norton's opinion, exceed $15,000, and it will, he says, add a half-million dollars to the value of the property, or one-half the corporation's entire capitalization of $1,000,000.

By the introduction of this water power oil can be produced and delivered as at present into the pipes of the Standard Oil Company at a cost of 5c. a barrel. As the price of oil, which has recently advanced from 83c. to 91c. a barrel, will probably throughout the future sell for an average of not less than a DOLLAR a barrel, a net profit of at least 95c. on the dollar may be reasonably counted on.

The Norton Oil Company has no problems to solve—nothing to do before it can do something else.

The oil companies around it are nearly all close corporations with no stock for sale. They all stand for something in the way of real values and their stock is seldom, if ever, parted with under any consideration.

The Racer Oil Company, less than five miles northwest of the Norton Oil Company, paid its stockholders 250% in dividends from last March to last December. Another company in the same vicinity has divided over $1,000,000 in profits among its stockholders in about two years.

In his "Life of Milton" Dr. Samuel Johnson says: "The trappings of a monarchy would set up an ordinary commonwealth." And I say the same thing of State and Wall Streets. Throttle and destroy their demoralizing and exhausting system. Wipe out speculators and parasites, with their unproductive and destructive game—wipe out the dropsical manipulated corporations—the waste paper certificates—the wash sales—the dummy transactions—the men of straw—the conscienceless inventions of the Evil One by which Pelion is piled on Ossa in one fictitious, towering, tottering heap that threatens daily to come crashing down around our ears like a house of cards. Reduce finance and investment to a system—an exact science—substituting clear, rational methods for the present blind, frenzied game of hazard and random and hit and miss. Let securities be sold to actual investors by responsible dealers, the same as sugar and cotton and steel and copper and all the commodities of commerce and trade. Draw the direct line, always the shortest, from the reliable financial agent to the actual investor seeking to buy actual securities upon actual merit. Cut out the howling dervishes and let the grass grow along the thoroughfares where they piled their unhallowed traffic in the nation's hard-earned values. Let the grass grow there, I say, for the whole race of speculators cannot of itself make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before. Put the system that stands sponsor for gambling and manipulation of corporation securities out of business and restore us to first principles and to safe and sane methods and the trappings of that system will set up new commonwealths toward the western horizon's edge and the continent's rim; make of Arizona and New Mexico, with their El Dorados of uncounted natural wealth, two sovereign States, instead of one, and from a desert of sun and sand, by irrigation, reclaim an empire of harvest and of hoard that will feed and clothe and house the unnumbered millions of that human sea which shall roll onward toward it in the ages yet to come.

C. F. KING.

I have every reason to believe that the Norton Oil Company is in a position to not only permanently pay the dividends on its 10% preferred stock throughout the long years of the future, but that its earnings will grow so large as to enable it to pay exceedingly large dividends on its common stock—dividends that the great oil industry stands almost alone in its ability to pay.

The common stock is earning over 11% now, based on its par value of $100 a share. Suppose we figure the common stock at $31 a share, the premium at which the preferred stock is now selling. That would give the common stock an earning basis of over 36%.

I believe that with the positive trebling of production, with the positive reduction in the cost of production to a much lower figure per barrel and with the possible, and even probable, advance of 25% to 60% in the market price of its oil, that a dividend rate of 50% to 60% on the par value of the common stock is by no means an unreasonable expectation. The stock at $31 a share means, of course, that this percentage would be increased by more than three times.

This is one of the supreme investment opportunities of life, whereby bank depositors and holders of unprofitable listed or unlisted stocks having a market value can convert their funds into a vastly more remunerative investment.

I am in a position to realize for holders of any of the securities dealt in on State Street or any of the other stock exchanges the highest market quotations. To those who send me their stock or bond certificates properly indorsed and witnessed in blank I will sell them without charge and convert the full gross proceeds into Norton Oil 10% preferred with its common stock bonus.

Make all remittances payable to my order, and address all communications to me personally, at my main office in the Journal Building, Boston, Mass.

Report Gains for the Strikers And See Bright Prospect of Victory

"Everything is favorable to the printers. To-day five shops, including one new concern, have told us they will begin operations Monday morning on an eight-hour workday basis, and have signed the agreement.

"One of the strong Typothetae shops, employing fifteen men, will on Monday start in on an eight-hour basis. They have not signed the agreement, but they have conferred with us, and an understanding has been reached.

"The Libbie Show Print has called its men back for work on Monday morning, and will run the shop on an eight-hour schedule. We expect another strong shop connected with the Typothetae to open on Monday under an eight-hour arrangement.

"The five shops that have signed will take about twenty-five men off the strike roll and place them in the eight-hour ranks. Early next week the union will have further announcements of progress to make."—President Coughlan, of Boston Typographical Union, in statement last night to Boston Sunday American.

PRINTERS' VICTORY NOW IN SIGHT, SAY STRIKE LEADERS

Several Plants to Start To-Morrow on Eight-Hour Day, It Is Reported From Union Headquarters.

[illegible] several printing [illegible] strike [illegible] start in [illegible] Monday on the eight-hour day [illegible].

"Every [illegible] has day [illegible] better [illegible]," said Mr. Coughlan last night, "and everything points to victory for the printers.

"At the present time," he added, "the situation [illegible] sized up accurately. None of the offices affected has given in to the union's demands. In two days there have been [illegible] about thirty men received at the strike headquarters to work in places [illegible] under the eight-hour [illegible] work has [illegible]. It is the [illegible] of the work of the strike committee [illegible] from the [illegible] Union which have requested business firms to give their work to eight-hour offices."

It is expected that to-morrow the typographical leaders will give out a statement of the offices affected by the strike and of the new eight-hour agreements which have been entered into. Eight-hour agreements have been made which go into effect Monday and which it is believed will take back more than a third of the men now out. From Monday on the strike will take on a new aspect.

The office of George H. Ellis, president of the Typothetae, [illegible], the largest in the city, is forced to work overtime in order to get out the work on hand left by the union men who went out.

The Central Labor Union will to-day take action on the printers' strike at its meeting. Committee reports will be heard, the pledge will be renewed and new resolutions will be drawn up. Delegates from the printers will be present.

Several offices have already signed the eight-hour agreement, according to a statement issued at the union headquarters, and more have indicated that they will do so by Monday. Among the firms who are reported to have been obliged to close their composing rooms are George H. Crosby & Co., George A. Henry [illegible] & Co., A. T. Bliss & Co., Samuel Usher, Libbie Show Print, Sampson & Murdock Co., Foreign Language Press, Farrington Press, Eastern Press, the Bartlett Press and the Taylor Press.

LYNN STIRRED BY CHARGES OF HUGE GRAFT IN CITY'S WATER BOARD CONTRACTS

Mayor Barney Appoints Non-Resident Commission to Probe Alleged $100,000 Steal.

Lynn, Feb. 3.—Determined to probe to the bottom the charges of $100,000 graft by the Lynn Water Board in connection with the construction of the Walden Pond dam, Mayor C. Neal Barney has appointed a committee of three non-residents of Lynn to make a rigid investigation.

The members of the committee are Alonzo R. Weed, former mayor of Newton, chairman; George E. Evans of Lowell, civil engineer; Harvey S. Chase of Boston, expert accountant. They will begin their work of investigation within a few days.

The charges of graft and reckless expenditure of money by the Water Board in the construction of the Walden Pond dam date back several years, when William P. Connery, a member of the Board of Aldermen, openly accused the Water Board of [illegible] material other than that called for in the construction of the wall for the dam. Since Mr. Connery's original charge, insinuations have been made from time to time.

Last Spring Councilman J. John Hooper made the startling accusation at a meeting of the lower branch of the city government that he had proofs that there had been a "rake-off" of $100,000 by the Water Board, and he urged that an investigation be made of the transactions in relation to the building of the present dam. [illegible] investigation was tabled.

Charges of Graft.

It is alleged that the Water Board entirely ignored the specifications of material to be used in constructing the core wall about the pond and that in the place of a concrete wall they [illegible] a boulder wall to be substituted; that instead of opening the contract to all bidders they elected the original bidder for the contract and agreed to pay him what is alleged an excessive price.

A second charge of graft against the Water Board members is based on the purchase of a second-hand engine installed in the pumping station in connection with the new reservoir. The cost of this engine and its installing was $40,[illegible]. A "rake-off" of nearly $15,000 is hinted at in this one particular.

A third charge is that the city was not given a fair deal by the Water Board and that the board acted without due power from the city in the expenditure of the appropriation to cover the cost of the work on the great dam.

Expert testimony [illegible] William P. Connery shows that [illegible] cubic yards of boulder wall was [illegible] at a cost of $104,720 [illegible] been overcharged [illegible] words where the Water Board paid $[illegible] a cubic yard for the construction it should not have paid over $2.75.

Ignored City Government.

Mr. Connery said to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN: "I charge unfairness by the Water Board in failing to allow the change of contract from a concrete wall to a boulder wall to be submitted to a competitive bid, and in ignoring the city government.

"Why were not the members of the city government permitted to pass on the new contract, and why was it that the plans and specifications for the boulder wall were not on file at the auditor's office as the law directed?"

In answer to all the specific and general charges of graft the members of the Water Board, of which William B. Littlefield is president, enter a complete denial. They court a thorough investigation and hint that in case of failure on the part of the members of the city council to substantiate the charges of graft they will enter suits for damages.

Mayor Barney's chief ante-election pledge was to order a rigid examination of the Water Board transactions in connection with the charges of graft. One of his first measures was the urging of the city government to pass an order to this effect. This the members of both branches voted, together with an appropriation of $1,000 to cover the expenses. The order called for the Mayor's selection of an impartial commission.

Investigation to be Rigid.

To a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN Mayor Barney said:

"I consider myself fortunate and the citizens of Lynn as well in the personnel of this very important commission. Each of the three members is a man of sound business reputation. I want to know the truth and [illegible] election I am convinced that the taxpayers of Lynn are themselves anxious to know the real truth of the charges against the members of the Water Board.

"It is only fair to the citizens and the members of the Water Board that the matter be fully investigated. I do not care to express my own opinion as to the [illegible], though I will say that I know of no ground on which to base any insinuation. I have done my duty in urging the city government to take this action. It is now up to this commission to give us the truth."

Alonzo R. Weed, the chairman of the commission, is of the law firm of Weed & [illegible], No. 113 Devonshire street, Boston, [illegible] professor of equity at the Boston Law School and a close student of municipal affairs.

George E. Evans of Lowell is a civil and mechanical engineer and is superintendent of the Lowell water works. He assisted in the construction of a dam across the Housatonic River.

Harvey S. Chase came into prominence as an expert accountant when he was employed by Mayor Collins of Boston to probe the [illegible].

Littlefield Will Assist.

William B. Littlefield, president of the board, is the central figure in the charges against the Water Board. He has been a resident of Lynn for the last forty years. [illegible] from Wales, Me. He has amassed a good-sized fortune, holding much real estate in the city. He is sixty-[illegible] years old and has been a member of the Water Board for the last seventeen years.

When seen by a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN Mr. Littlefield expressed his satisfaction at the appointment of the commission by Mayor Barney and said he would do all in his power to assist that body in getting at the facts in the conduct of the Water Board. He said:

"I do not know any of the members of this commission, but I believe they [illegible] do [illegible] all I can to [illegible] them in getting at the truth of the charges against the Water Board, of which I am president. I have courted an investigation from the first of the charges. I have no fear as to the outcome. The result of the work of this commission will be the complete vindication of myself and the members of the board.

"Some months ago I wrote a letter to District Attorney Peters urging him to order an investigation of the charges made against the board and I placed my services at his command. He saw fit to ignore my letter. I am glad that an investigation is now to be made by order of the city. If we were to construct the dam over again I cannot see how we would do anything different from what we have already done. Instead of an extravagant expenditure of the city's money I defy the commission to find aught but a saving to the city. The charge of $100,000 graft is preposterous, the hallucination of a diseased mind and entirely without foundation."

PLOT TO ROB STATE OF OVER $90,000 IS CHARGED.

Senator John F. Cusick and the trustees of the Danvers Insane Hospital are to demand a legislative investigation of a plan by which the town of Danvers is to receive $4,000 a year for twenty years from the State for supplying the hospital with water from a reservoir built and paid for by the State but now used by the town.

It is alleged that this is a plot of the Republican Essex County ring to rob the State of over $90,000. It came to light through a favorable report of the Committee on Probate and Chancery on a resolve [illegible] effect that the town should be paid $4,000 a year for 200,000 gallons of water daily.

The hospital is now constructing its own water supply plant. The State built the reservoir in question at a cost of $[illegible] and the town uses it, although it never paid a dollar towards its construction. Now the plan is to sell to the State its own water from its own reservoir.

WRIGHT SAYS STRIKE IS SIGN OF LABOR'S INTELLIGENCE.

Worcester, Feb. 3.—That the use of the strike as a weapon by the worker is a sign of his intelligence and education, was the statement by President Carroll D. Wright of Clark College, former Commissioner of Labor, in his second lecture at the college on "Battles of Labor."

"Fools do not strike," said President Wright. "Were our workingmen everywhere on a par with the serfs of the middle ages we should have but few labor organizations, and few, if any strikes; but with the intelligence that he has, the workingman insists that that intelligence be felt. He knows enough now to feel his condition and to know that he ought to have better conditions, but he does not know enough to know how to secure them without the brutal auxiliary of the strike."

While it may be truly said that the strike as a method pursued by working men to obtain the redress of real or fancied grievances has assumed importance only during the last generation, it is true that the strike is not a new weapon in the hands of the laborer.

Colonel Wright gave some very interesting figures regarding strikes. During the period from 1881 to 1900 there were 117,500 strikes and 6,105,694 employes were thrown out of work. In the same twenty years there have been 1,005 lockouts, involving 10,000 establishments and 1,000,000 people.

Of the whole number of strikes 51 per cent succeeded, 13 per cent succeeded partly and 46 1-3 per cent. failed.

MOTHER TRYING TO SOLVE MYSTERY OF SON'S MURDER.

Fall River, Feb. 3.—With a part of the money which she inherited from the estate of her murdered son, Mrs. Leon Vandal has begun a fresh search for the slayer who escaped three years ago after a singularly brutal crime. To this end she has first offered a reward of $2,000 to be added to the reward offered by this city.

The son was Gaspard O. Vandal, a prosperous merchant of this city. He was murdered for his money and robbed. The weapon used was a baseball bat and his skull was crushed. For months the police searched [illegible] guided somewhat by the dying man's statement that two men attacked him. Nothing resulted from this search. Now the mother, with her part of the son's fortune, has renewed it.

To a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN Mrs. Vandal said to-day:

"I cannot understand why the police failed to find the murderer of my boy. He was murdered for his money. The murderer secured $100 or more and probably spent it freely afterward, for ill-gotten gains do not generally stick to the fingers of criminals. It seems strange that somebody is not found who noted the spending of that money.

"At my advanced age I may never live to know that the killing of my son has been avenged. But I am willing to spend a portion of the money he set aside for my husband and myself to prove who dealt my boy that fatal blow."

CHARLES FROHMAN
Presents the Massively Picturesque Play

MIZPAH

"MIZPAH" retells the story of Esther making [illegible] romance of absorbing interest. The play opens in the Court of King Ahasuerus, where a plot between Queen Vashti and Haman against the King's life is disclosed. Mordecai saves the King's life. Following the banishment of Vashti the beautiful Esther appears before Ahasuerus and wins his heart. The play gives splendid opportunity for the emotional expression that characterizes Ella Wheeler Wilcox's best writings. After the love-making comes Haman's intriguing, Vashti's machinations for revenge, the humiliation and disgrace of Mordecai, the false charges against Esther, and the estrangement of herself and the King. Then the final scene showing the triumph of love and loyalty and the restoration to favor of Esther and Mordecai.

"May God's love guard the love of thee if ever we be parted."

AT THE OLD

HOWARD

THIS WEEK

ORPHEUS COMEDY 4

The best quartette of vocalists and comedians in vaudeville to-day. Legitimate successors of the "Clipper Quartette" and the "Manhattan Comedy 4." When it comes to blending fun and harmony they can turn out as smooth a mixture as was ever [illegible]. Four singers, four comedians, no excess baggage with this bunch, everyone of them can do, and does do.

KITA BANZAI JAP TROUPE

Eight of the most wonderful acrobats, jugglers, wire walkers and perch performers that ever left the land of the Geisha girls. They're from the Imperial Theatre Tokio, members of the Mikado's own band of athletic entertainers. They could give a whole show themselves, one that would "make good" and be enjoyable every moment.

THE TWO

RACKETTS

Here's a hot one. Positively the season's sensation in the vaudeville line. A sketch called "The Village Blacksmith" in which Ernest Rackett presents a caricature of "Bob" Fitzsimmons that is simply wonderful, while pretty Clara Rackett plays the part of "Julia" to perfection. The skit is built for the purpose of making fun, and if you don't get more laughs to the second (notice we say second, not minute) than you remember having any other twenty minutes of your lifetime, why, we'll buy.

EDDIE LESLIE

First engagement at the Howard in several seasons of one of variety's greatest mimical comedians. You'll find him as full of magnetism as ever. His long sojourn in Australia didn't dim his powers of observation and his ability to imitate the observed in the least. He's the same Eddie as of old.

DAISY HARCOURT

A genuine English comedienne, one of the greatest favorites the patrons of the London music halls have. She's over on a short trip, and the old Howard is one of the few theatres she'll play in this country. The songs she sings are all of the catchy, tingly type that produce puckers without persuasion.

KATES BROTHERS

TASCOTT

[illegible] say that when it comes to [illegible] he's the best ever. He [illegible] set of pipes and his dialect [illegible] perfect.

MLLE.

LATINA

DAVEY and PHILLIPS

THE LIPPINCOTTS

[illegible] novelties you'll be glad to greet. They'll win in a walk. Art and action combined most artistically.

CORRIGAN and HAYES

They hand out a bunch of good things in a [illegible] comedietta. An act that [illegible] gladness.

AL BURKE

A dancer who has got all the others in the air when it comes to novel steps, particularly use he executes on roller skates.

THE HOWARDSCOPE

THE

BURLESQUE

We haven't been smoking any green ones cooked to order when we say that our thirty [illegible] teasers are at [illegible] form. There are no oyster stew and coffee or cheese sandwich and beer gazabos in the bunch. It's a case of [illegible] and plenty of them and [illegible] or the game closes quick. This week's burletta is called

GET THERE

The pace will be rapid from the start, for you can't hold in such swift [illegible] as line up in our field. [illegible] will smooth out any worry wrinkles you may happen to be wearing.

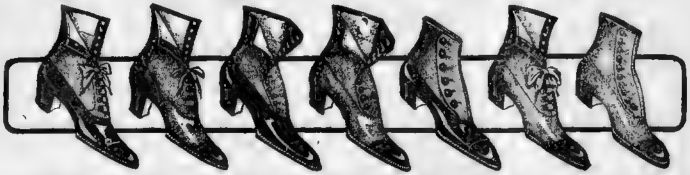
Bath Robes $1.79 Each

These bath robes for women, as a casual examination will show, sell usually for double the price we quote. You may choose from staple browns, blues and greys—some with blanket borders. All are satin trimmed and provided with cords and tassels. While this lot lasts the price will be $1 79.

2000 Pairs of Women's $4.00 and $5.00 Shoes In New Spring Styles at $2.40 and $2.50 a Pair



A Philadelphia shoemaker made these boots for the largest retailer of high-grade footwear in Newark, N. J.—the man who is known far and near as "E. Heyman, the Foot Fitter," and each shoe contains a top-facing with his name on it. By some unaccountable blunder a mistake was made in stamping the soles, and "E. Heyman, the Foot Fitter," rejected this big order of 2000 pairs of "Dress-Reform Shoes."

$2.40 For $4 Shoes

The result was that we bought the entire lot, containing 25 styles of Women's $4 and $5 Shoes, at a price enabling us to sell the shiny leathers at $2.50 and the kid and dull leathers at $2.40 a pair. These values, when the leather market is going higher, and shoe prices increasing, furnish a grand opportunity for women to secure their spring footwear at less than present factory prices.

$2.50 For $5 Shoes

The shoes at $2.40 a pair consist of glazed kid button shoes, kid and patent leather tips, narrow, medium and broad toes, in three styles, with broad heels, medium and high Cuban heels; the glazed kid lace and blucher cut shoes in nine different styles, with every new style toe, from the very narrow to the broad sensible kind. They have broad, low heels, medium military heels and high Cuban heels.

The shoes at $2.50 are made of the very best quality of patent colt, patent kid and patent calf, shiny leather button boots, in four styles of button, on narrow, medium and broad toes; low, broad heels and high Cuban heels. Others are made of the best quality of patent colt, patent kid and patent calf, shiny leather lace and blucher lace boots, in six different style toes and heels, with dull mat calf tops.

Another Triumphant Silk Sale

Repetition of the values that stirred Boston to its depths and penetrated the remotest corners of New England. While the sale of a week ago made important mercantile history and will be remembered for years as the greatest value-giving event on record, we announce an event today that is no less important.

Imported French Messaline Finished Poplins

59c This time we lead with Beautiful Imported French Messaline Finished Poplins that are positively being sold in Boston according to grade at $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 yard at the sensationally low price of 59c. a yard, and the exquisite fabric we offer is of the very best quality. If it were possible to show every reader of this advertisement a sample of this exquisitely soft silk this massive store wouldn't be big enough to hold the crowds. Therefore, skeptics will lose a grand opportunity, and those who have confidence will secure French Poplins direct from Paris and fresh from the U. S. custom house at 59c. a yard. 59c

This purchase of Poplins embraces the exclusive and highly desirable Parisian shades of Sakamodi, Rose Ambergine, Ciel Marron, Grenat Military, Finnes Massena, Phatina, Serpent Tan, Castor, Lilac Azur, Resada, Gobin Cadet, Nickel Marine, Mais Goblin, Brown Gris, Fougere Sage, Beaver, Olive, and fifty others that everybody is more familiar with.

Pictures at One-Third Former Prices

Last Monday we transacted the largest business in medium priced framed pictures ever recorded in Boston. If you were here, you saw the crowds and you know something of the wonderful values we gave. Now we announce a clearance sale of all hurt pictures in our store at one-third former prices. You will find some of the frames marred, or slightly scratched, but the injuries can be quickly removed. We haven't the time or inclination to fix them, and therefore the

MARGARET HEAD PLIGHTS TROTH TO PHILIP STOCKTON BEFORE THE ALTAR AT TRINITY

Society at Most Brilliant Wedding of Season

RARE DISPLAY OF FLOWERS AT CHURCH.

BISHOP LAWRENCE SPEAKS SACRED WORD

To lovely Miss Margaret Head, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Head of Beacon street, who yesterday noon in Trinity Church became the bride of Philip Stockton, must go the distinction of being the first bride of February, the month of Cupids and hearts. Smart society, sartorially resplendant, gathered in splendid array to witness the ceremony.

In Spring-like contrast to the heavy velvets and rich ermines and sables of the guests, were rose-hued azaleas, golden daffodils and the misty pinkish purple of Scotch heather.

Vested Choir in Chorus.

The altar was banked in azaleas from the centre of which rose a cross of yellow immortelles.

The chancel was grouped with palms and foliage plants.

The laurel draping of the chancel rail was caught at intervals by great masses of the glowing pink azaleas, while on each pew of the centre aisle were clusters of Spring's bravest flower, the daffodil, rising triumphant above the feathery heather, each bouquet being tied with a bow and long streamers of green grass-ribbon.

Led by the six ushers, followed by the three bridesmaids dressed in bewitching Empire gowns of palest blue chiffon veiled satin, the bridal party passed up the aisle as the white robed choristers entered the chancel singing "The Voice That Breathed o'er Eden."

For the recessional hymn, "Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart," was chosen and the Mendelssohn wedding march followed.

In the vestibule the wedding party paused to sign the huge register, in accordance with the English custom.

Her enveloping veil of tulle was caught by a tiara-like arrangement of orange blossoms and she carried the newest fashionable bridal boquet, a close massing of white lilacs.

Her only jewels were diamonds in the form of a sunburst, the gift of the bridegroom, who looked radiantly happy as he received the felicitations of maids and ushers.

The bridesmaids, all brunettes, were Miss Susan Thayer, maid of honor; Miss Stockton, sister of the groom, and Miss Nancy Mitchell, whose engagement to Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, was recently announced. All wore empire gowns of light blue chiffon over light blue satin, blue velvet hats of the same shade, trimmed with blue plumes and Parisian pink roses. They carried bouquets of pink roses, tied with wide blue satin ribbons.

Mrs. Head, mother of the bride, wore a becoming gown in Directoire of light blue radium, with appliques of Persian embroidery and rare lace.

Mrs. Russell, the groom's mother, was in an effective creation of black panne velvet with garnishings of rare old point lace.

Mrs. William A. Russell (Mary Head), the bride's sister, was charming in a gray cloth gown trimmed with sable and an Alice blue hat laden with plumes of the same shade.

Mrs. John L. Gardner was in rich black silk and sable furs.

The debutantes were represented by their most popular sister bud, Miss Mary Josephine Amory, in a cloth gown of Alice blue, and hat to match and ermine furs. The Misses Meyer, also debutantes, accompanied their mother, Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, who looked regal in black chiffon velvet and black plumed hat.

Mrs. Roger Wolcott was in black velvet with touches of Irish Point lace and chinchilla furs.

Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Jr., was in a stunning gray cloth suit, with blue velvet hat and ermine furs.

Mrs. W. W. Vaughn, in black velvet and point lace, was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Mary Vaughn, becomingly gowned in pale gray cloth, elaborately garnished with rare point lace.

Mrs. Guy Lowell wore white broadcloth, with garnishings of Irish point lace, and a white felt hat, trimmed with pastelle pink roses and white plumes.

Mrs. S. V. R. Thayer, who returned from Europe Thursday, was in black broadcloth and sable furs.

Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell wore a beautiful gown of gray crepe de chine trimmed with white lace and a dark heliotrope hat with white plumes.

Mrs. Oliver was in purple panne velvet elaborately trimmed with Honiton lace and a plume laden hat of the same shade.

Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., in modest mouse color gown of panne velvet and hat to match, was stunning.

Mrs. F. L. Dabney, one of society's most charming matrons, wore blue crepe de chine over blue satin and a blue hat of same shade trimmed with white plumes.

Mrs. James M. Codman wore black velvet and sable furs and Mrs. James Lee was also in black velvet and sables.

Rosamond Saltonstall, Marian Lawrence and Elizabeth Devens, all of whose engagements were announced last week, were there and after the ceremony received many belated congratulations. Miss Saltonstall's blonde beauty was set off by her gown of Alice blue panne velvet and hat to match. Miss Devens was in white and Miss Lawrence in black lace over black silk.

Mrs. Robert C. Hooper wore ashes of roses chiffon satin, blue hat and ermine furs.

Miss Dorothy Cainey, who will marry Frederick Nourse next Wednesday, was there looking sweet and winsome in a gray crepe de chine with touches of Alice blue, a white felt hat and ermine furs.

8 MEN BATTLE DEATH IN SEA FOR 6 DAYS.

Picked Up Exhausted by Passing Schooner as Ship Sinks.

HAD GIVEN UP HOPE OF LIFE WHEN SAVED

Six days' continuous battle with a gale which ripped the sails of their craft to ribbons, and then hours of frantic labor at the pumps to stay the inrush of water into the hold, was the heartbreaking experience of the eight men of the brigantine Irene who were landed safely at Boston yesterday. Utterly exhausted when picked up by the schooner Henry B. Fiske, the men were transferred to the tug Storm King and were brought in here.

At one time despite their labors, it seemed that [illegible] would overtake them and they were almost resigned to it when the Fiske sighted their signal of distress and sent off a boat after a battling sea to save them. Within a short time after they deserted the Irene she settled with her cargo of 600 tons of coal and is probably a total loss.

The men were Captain Henry Riggins of Cambridgeport, Steward Frederick Ames of Hampstead, L. I., Mat David G. Speed of South Thomaston, Me., Fred Miller, Norway; Christian Smith and Nils Olsen, Germany; Manuel Otero, Spain, and Hugo Danker, Germany.

The Irene was bound from New York to Jacksonville. On January 22 she ran into a northeast gale. Her sails were blown out of the bolt ropes and one of the lifeboats was smashed by the huge waves which broke over the deck. Sunday morning they found water was rushing into the hold through a leak. The pumps became choked with soft coal refuse which was washed into the pipes. The vessel's flag was hoisted union down as a signal of distress.

THIRD OF $3,000,000 FOR MILL HAND

News of Fortune Comes to Silk Dyer Now Getting $14 a Week.

New York, Feb. 3.—Robert Hughes, a silk dyer of Passaic, N. J., whose weekly wage for years has been $14 has just received word from Ireland that his uncle is dead, leaving an estate of $3,000,000, to be divided among three heirs and that $1,000,000 will be his. The other beneficiaries are Hughes's brother and sister, who are living in Ireland, and who, like himself, have been on bad terms with the uncle for many years.

Hughes is thirty-nine years old, is married and has two children. He is a hard working, sober and industrious man.

STRICKEN DUMB WHILE PLAYING BASKETBALL

Athlete Hit On Adam's Apple In a Game, Has Been Speechless Since

New Britain, Ct., Feb. 3.—Warren Slater, aged twenty-two, a well known athlete, is speechless as a result of a blow on the neck received last Wednesday night while playing basketball here. Some one struck him in the Adams apple in such a manner that he lost his voice and despite the efforts of several physicians he has been unable to make a sound since. Slater says he suffers no pain and he is perfectly well otherwise.

EDNA MAY DENIES THAT SHE IS TO WED

Report of Millionaire Lewisohn's Engagement to Lillian Russell Also Wrong.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Edna May, the actress waxed indignant when she was asked if it were true, as reported from New York that she were engaged to marry Oscar Lewisohn the millionaire.

"It's perfectly absurd," she declared, stamping her little foot. "I'm not engaged to Mr. Lewisohn or any other man. How did such a ridiculous story get out?"

The report current last week that Mr. Lewisohn was engaged to marry Lillian Russell, the operatic star, has also been denied in dispatches from New York that have been received here.

MRS. PALMER SAILS WITH BRIDGE EXPERT

Noted Society Woman Will Practise At Cards on Voyage to Europe.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Feb. 3.—Unless seasickness and rough weather prevents, Mrs. Potter Palmer, who sailed for Liverpool to-day on the Campania will spend most of her time playing bridge. Mrs. Palmer retained Mrs. George Bingham, a noted bridge expert of Chicago, to coach her in the game. Mrs. Palmer is a busy woman, and she said before the Campania sailed that she did not know of a better way to put in the idle hours aboard ship than at bridge.

Mrs. Craigie (John Oliver Hobbes, the novelist), who has been here for several weeks, started home on the Campania.

There were just 233 deaths in Boston during the past week, an increase of twenty over the corresponding week last year. This makes the death rate for the week 20.42. Of this number of deaths 125 were males and 108 females.

Pneumonia carried off thirty-eight, tuberculosis and heart disease thirty each. Scarletina caused only one death out of twenty-seven cases.

COUNSEL MAY NOT ASK NEW TRIAL FOR TUCKER.

Possibility That Appeal for Clemency Will Be Made to Governor Directly.

CONFERENCE THIS WEEK TO DECIDE UPON COURSE

Legal Fight Will End if It Is Thought Highest Tribunal Will Not Interfere.

A conference between eminent attorneys, to be held during the coming week, will determine whether or not Louis Tucker, under sentence of death for the murder of Mabel Page of Weston, will seek a new trial through the Supreme Court of the United States, or will throw himself upon the mercy of Governor Guild and the Governor's council, and ask for commutation of sentence to imprisonment for life.

Senior Attorney James H. Vahey of Tucker's counsel said last night to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter: "It is probable that the decision will be to go to the United States Supreme Court, although that has not been positively decided." It will assuredly be done, the attorneys say, if there seems in their minds to exist the slightest chance that the court would set aside the verdict of the trial by which Tucker was convicted. And at present they believe such a chance to exist.

Presumably, by now, the public understands that the Supreme Court of the United States will not generally review the case, nor any part of it, except that which pertains to a claim that the constitutional rights of Tucker have been infringed upon. It will not in any way attempt to review the evidence and rulings made by the Massachusetts courts, except as to this one Federal question.

Constitutional Question.

The ground upon which the highest court in the country will be asked to set aside the verdict of the jury—if the case is taken so high—will be that in admitting certain evidence against Tucker the court violated two articles of amendment to the Constitution of the United States—articles four and five.

An important piece of evidence against Tucker was the broken knife blade, found in his house by the State police. His attorneys attempted strenuously to have all reference to this knife kept from the jury, claiming that the officers entered the house with a search warrant which recited that a stolen phonograph was being sought (it being known to the officers that the phonograph they pretended to be looking for was not even missing at that time), and that they used a false pretense to secure their warrant. Further, it was alleged that in using this evidence secured in Tucker's house in this manner against him, the officers were virtually obliging him to give evidence against himself.

These are the articles from the amendments to the Constitution upon which the matter rests.

Will Confer in a Few Days.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by [illegible] and particularly [illegible] searched [illegible] to be [illegible]

TRIES TO CROSS THE TRACKS, IS KILLED

Lynn, Feb. 3.—While attempting to cross the Boston & Maine railroad tracks at the Pleasant street crossing shortly after eight o'clock to-night, Barney Sherman, forty-five years old, was instantly killed by the Portland express. Sherman had been in this country four years, and expected to be joined in a few days by his wife and three children who are now on their way from Russia. The dead man lived with his brother George, at No. 27 Flint street.

Sherman crawled under the gates, thinking he could cross the tracks before the train would reach him. He was struck by the express which passed over him, mangling him frightfully.

ATTACKS WIFE WITH RAZOR; SAVED BY FUR

A heavy neck piece of fur, which she wore about her neck, saved the life of Mrs. Grace Nichols, a pretty Italian woman of twenty-five when her divorced husband Antonio Nichols, threw a razor at her last evening. As it was, Mrs. Nichols received a gash about an inch and a half long on her neck, and had to be treated at the Relief station. The police are looking for the man, but he is believed to have taken a train for New York.

Mrs. Nichols who resided at No. 51 South Margin street, East Boston, was divorced from her husband about two weeks ago. Since then she has been trying to avoid him, but last evening, as she was on her way home from work she met him suddenly on Chardon street, near Portland street. Angry words ensued and Nichols finally threw the razor.

There was also a humorous take-off on the insurance investigation.

POLICE ARREST 12 IN GAMBLING RAID

The place was luxuriously furnished, and some 18 chairs, several tables, a large sum of money and numerous packs of cards were seized by the police. The police say they have raided the place several times before.

MAHLER'S GIANT SYMPHONY IS COLOSSAL.

Great Work of Eccentric German Composer Is Produced Here for First Time.

HAS RARE BEAUTIES AND SUDDEN SHOCKS

By Kent Perkins.

Mr. Gericke delights in two kinds of Symphony programmes—those in which harmony of style prevails from beginning to end and those where vivid contrasts are exhibited. When he introduces a new composer or a new "school" of music, he employs contrast to aid his hearers to appreciate readily the characteristic attributes of the novelty.

Last night he made a brilliant audience at Symphony Hall acquainted with Gustav Mahler, about whose head ever since it appeared above the surface of modern German music a fierce war of invective and praise has been waged.

From Athens to Coney Island.

It was as if Mr. Gericke first took the throng to Athens as a musical Cook's guide and displayed the classic majesty and serene beauty of the Acropolis, letting them wander at will about the Parthenon and the temple of the Wingless Victory and then whisked the crowd off to Coney Island on Saturday night.

Beethoven's majestic overture to Goethe's "Egmont" and Schumann's concerto in A minor, op. 54, with Harold Bauer as the soloist, furnished the magic atmosphere through which Athens glistened. Mahler conjured up Coney.

The orchestra and Mr. Bauer lent powerful aid in the transformation scene. The "Egmont" music was played with a sympathetic nobility of expression that is beyond praise. Mr. Bauer surpassed himself in the delicious sweetness of his tone, his masterly command of the instrument and his artistically restrained power. His playing roused intense enthusiasm.

After hearing Mahler's Fifth Symphony, by which the composer was introduced here for the first time, one can easily understand why he is both execrated and lauded, why he is hissed by one part of his audiences and showered with extravagant plaudits by another. Mahler is a Teuton through and through; so are his divided audiences. For those who take music as seriously as some people do religion there is justification for both cabbages and laurel wreaths in last night's symphony, and doubtless his other works are like this one in wide variety. Consequently he is both cursed and blessed.

Truly a Gigantic Work.

The piece is called the "Giant Symphony" and with reason. It is huge in all its proportions, in the required size of the orchestra, in variety of instruments, in its length, in the fertility of imagination displayed in conception and development and in the immensity of the shocks by which one is made at least to sit up and take notice, whether he likes the jolts his nerves receive or not.

Its framework and its themes are distinctly Germanic. There are many beautiful melodies and many glorious harmonies. Its novelties and idiosyncracies lie mainly in the strange and surprising ways in which the deep basses of brass, wood-wind and strings are used and the queer frills with which many of the harmonies are fringed by ingenious use of percussion instruments.

What surprises and sudden contrasts he employs! In the midst of a swimming melody dropped out in a full-voiced harmony that carries one along as easily and sonorously as does Sousa at his best, something seems to go wrong, and a "little German band" in a tenement backyard could not make a more hopeless mess of things.

Again you say: "Ah! here we are in the class with Schumann. Could anything be more exquisite than this lyric?" when, bing! you are dropped into the middle of a New York crowd drowning the chimes of Trinity with fishhorns on New Year's eve.

Part II. is for the most part a beautiful Scherzo in waltz time and movement. The people were carried away with the grace and daintiness of it last night, when without warning they were pitched apparently into the train shed of the South station with all the trains starting at once for everywhere on the wrong tracks. It was so realistic that dozens of suburbanites seized their wraps and started for the door.

With all his eccentricities and bizarre effects Mahler is worth hearing and his "New music" has the advantage over the extreme "new" French music as exemplified by D'Indy. It is human.

SOME FEATURES ON MUSIC PROGRAMS FOR BOSTON PATRONS

The name of Vincent d'Indy will again appear on the Symphony programs of next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, as Mr. Gericke will present his Symphony, No. 1, for piano and orchestra on a Mountain Air. This work has already been heard in Boston, having been played in April, 1902. It is by all odds the best liked and most popular of d'Indy's compositions, and when played in New York this Winter by the New York Symphony Orchestra, it attracted most favorable notice.

Three of the most significant names in modern music appear in Boston programs in the course of a week. Yesterday and day before the music of Gustav Mahler was made known to this city by means of his fifth symphony, which was played by the Symphony Orchestra. At the next Symphony concerts Richard Strauss will be represented by what many regard as his greatest work, "Also sprach Zarathustra," and to-morrow evening the Boston Symphony Quartet, at its fourth concert, in Jordan Hall, will play an entirely unknown work by Max Reger, of Munich, a serenade for flute, violin and viola.

The sale of seats for the violin recital by Marie Hall at Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon of next week has begun at the Symphony Hall box office.

The sonata recital to be given by Mr. and Mrs. David Mann at Potter Hall on Friday afternoon, February 16, will make the only appearance of these artists in Boston this season.

Alice Goodell Eldridge, the young and gifted pianist, pupil of Edith Noyes Porter, announces a pianoforte recital for next Tuesday afternoon at the Tuileries. She will be assisted by Caroline Gardner Clarke, Mrs. E. Wiswell Brown, Miss Ada Stuart Brown and Mrs. Jeannette Day Knight.

A most interesting feature of the program which Richard Platt is to play at his recital in Steinert Hall on Saturday afternoon, February 17, is the group of three numbers composed by himself. They are entitled "Valse-Impromptu," "Dusk" and "Humoreske."

A festival mandolin concert is to be given at Jordan Hall on Wednesday evening, March 28, under the direction of G. L. Lansing and H. F. Odell. Among those who will appear are The Boston Operatic Society of sixty voices, the Boston Ideal [illegible], the Langham Mandolin Orchestra of thirty-five members, Lansing's Mandolin Orchestra of forty-five members, the M. I. T. Banjo Club, Charles T. Grilley, impersonator, and an orchestra of 200 mandolins, guitars and banjos. An interesting feature of the affair will be the singing of the full chorus of the Boston Operatic Society, accompanied by the orchestra of 200 players.

STORK LOTH TO PAY VISIT TO CROWN PRINCESS OF GERMANY

CECILIA'S HEALTH A BAR TO DIRECT SUCCESSION.

Kaiser's Subjects Dismayed at Report That Heir Apparent Is Quite Improbable From the Wedding of Last Summer

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Feb. 3.—The stork, Germany's own stork, will not bring a new Emperor to the Crown Princess Cecelia this Spring, as had been expected and hoped. This news, coming from a most reliable source, has cast a gloom over the imperial family and court circles. All Germany is sad, for the Crown Princess has always been a popular idol and was spoken of as "the most beautiful Princess."

Not only will the stork fail to visit the household of the Crown Princess this particular time, but the still more alarming news comes that probably never again will the traditional bird of Germany make a visit to the Princess's household.

It was earnestly hoped by the imperial family that this Spring the Crown Princess would give birth to a son which would become the heir apparent to the German throne. Now it is stated that the health and general physique of the Crown Princess is so poor that she will probably never be a mother. This has caused the greatest sorrow to the Emperor, who is particularly fond of his daughter-in-law.

Should the Princess Cecelia never become a mother the imperial crown of Germany will fall upon the head of the next eldest brother of the Crown Prince when the latter dies. Prince William Eitel Frederick, who is only a year younger than the Crown Prince, would then become the heir to the throne.

On June 6 of last year the Duchess Cecelia Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Crown Prince Frederick William were married in the Lutheran church in this city. Emperor William and all the members and relatives of the royal family were particularly pleased with the event. The nuptial knot was tied with all the ancient ceremony peculiar to the house of Hohenzollern and the Emperor himself gave strict orders that none of the customs that had been observed for centuries should be left out of the ceremony.

After the marriage the crown prince took his bride to Hubertusstock, the favorite hunting lodge of the Emperor, about fifty miles from Berlin. After two weeks they returned, and in September it was announced that the crown princess was expecting "a most natural and happy event." This tended to make her more popular than ever with the German people and the crown prince shared in the [illegible] favor. Everywhere the young couple went the people worshipped them.

MRS. WHITE APPEARS IN A CLOTH OF SILVER

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rome, Feb. 3.—Notwithstanding her gray hair Mrs. White, wife of the American Ambassador, has within the short time that she has been in the Eternal City become a social belle and the envy of all the pretty women many years her junior. At all the important functions which her delicate health permits her to attend Mrs. White is the centre of admiration.

At the reception given at the Doria Palace after the wedding of Donna Orietta with Count Borromeo, Mrs. White appeared in a marvelous gown of the new silver cloth. She wore a diamond tiara and diamond ornaments.

Now that Mr. White is an Ambassador it is expected the W. K. Vanderbilts will spend some time in Rome.

SUSPENDS PUPIL FOR CRITICISM

Newburyport, Feb. 3.—Because he wrote an article for one of the local newspapers which did not please Principal W. E. Andrews of the High School, George A. Walton, president of the senior class of the school, has been suspended. The young man is a reporter for one of the local papers and his article was a semi-criticism regarding the action of the principal of the school in punishing several girl students who stayed away from school one day and did not offer acceptable excuses.

Walton's case was reported to a sub-committee of the School Board and he was summoned to appear before them. This he declined to do, claiming that the article was true and that it was written during the time when he was not engaged at school.

LIQUOR MEN SAY LAW ENCOURAGES BLACKMAIL.

Petition Sent to Each Member of Legislature Praying for Passage of Bill Calling for Repeal of Abuttors' Measure

To every member of the Massachusetts Legislature has been mailed a copy of a petition asking for the passage of the bill for the repeal of the abutters' law, which liquor dealers say has them by the throat and has caused them to be blackmailed.

The names of prominent and influential business men in all parts of the State are appended to the petition, and especial attention [illegible] to the names of signers [illegible] traits of the men [illegible] are engaged.

[illegible], counsel for the Massachusetts Wine and Spirit Dealers' Association, said:

"While we are working for the repeal of the abutters' law, our position in regard to the petition is to see that no person signed it that is in any way interested in the liquor business. The reason for this is that we desired the signers would be representative business men for all parts of the State, whose names would be known to the members of the General Court as having weight."

WRECKERS STORM ENGINE WITH BULLETS.

Burlington, Vt., Feb. 3.—Stormed with a fusillade of a dozen revolver or rifle shots, and showered with stones and pieces of coal, Engineer Hurley and Fireman Girsley of the Montreal-Boston express, south bound, figure as the latest victims of the train wreckers who have been terrorizing the Central Vermont Railroad.

The attempt to kill the engine crew occurred early to-day when the train was coming through Georgia, a town forty miles north of this city. None of the bullets took effect, but a piece of coal hit Fireman Girsley and knocked him from his seat. Had the engineer not caught him he would have fallen from the cab.

Officials of the road have asked the aid of Boston and New York detectives to assist the railroad force in running down the gang which has made several attempts to wreck trains on the road. Two attempts have been successful, the wrecks at Bolton and at Williamstown, both of which were similar in plan. The switches were misplaced, leading to a siding, but the lights had been turned so as to read "safe" to the engineer.

President of Meat Cutters Disappears from Cincinnati After Receiving Threatening Letters; Slugged Many Times

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Michael Donnelly, international president of the Meat Cutters' and Butchers' Union, has been missing since Monday and his nearly frantic wife, his union and many friends in Chicago, are firmly convinced that he has met with foul play.

Donnelly was last seen in Cincinnati. Thursday some man, whom Clerk Porter recognized as Donnelly, called at the Dennison Hotel, where Donnelly had been staying, cashed a check, took Donnelly's baggage and left, saying he was going to Louisville. Detectives are bending all their energies to find the missing man.

It is now believed the man who called at the hotel in Cincinnati was not Donnelly, but some man who closely resembled him and who was in the plot of those who put him out of the way. It has been learned that Donnelly, who has been slugged many times by his enemies, had received threatening letters within the last two weeks.

Mrs. Donnelly is in a critical state of health on account of the worry over her husband's disappearance, and fears are entertained for her life.

FREE UNTIL CURED!

I restore Weak Men and do not ask one penny in advance or on deposit. I accept their word to pay me when cured.

Happy, glorious Manhood—the strength that pushes the world! Success in its completeness. And what is weakness? Failure, despair! But why be weak, when a cure is within your reach for the asking?

I know the terrible mental torture of the nervous debility sufferer, but I also know his gratefulness when restored, and that is the basis for my free treatment until cured. Can any such sufferer come to me and be made a man among men, and then refuse to pay a few dollars for aiding him to become so? I say no, and my wonderful success backs up my judgment. I wish that every sufferer knew that the effect of Electricity upon the weak, debilitated man is the same as rain upon the parched field in summer. He may be troubled from varicocele, losses, impotency; may have confusion of ideas; fear to act and decide; gloomy forebodings, timid and fretful; avoid friends and company; without confidence in himself to face the slightest responsibility, and let him properly apply Electricity for but a few hours and all these symptoms vanish—giving way to glowing, soothing vigor through every weak part. A few weeks to a couple months' use of this treatment banish them forever, and make strong, confident, manly men out of the puniest weaklings. For nearly 40 years I have treated and restored weak men through my world-famed invention, and am still doing so with greater success than ever. In fact, I do not expect to fail in any case of this kind, and therefore as many men are skeptical and will not buy for cash at a material reduction, I will continue to give to responsible men my Herculex.

Dr. Sanden Electric Belt Free Until Cured, and as said not one cent is to be paid me in advance or on deposit. Call or write and get the belt and use, say for 60 days, and if cured pay me price of belt only—many cases low as $5—if not cured, return the belt and the deal is ended. But I know what the belt will do, and will take the risk of my pay when you are cured. I also give my belts on same terms in Rheumatism, Lame Back, Stomach, Kidney and Liver Complaints, etc. Think of a remedy that has stood every possible test for 40 years—the only one ever successfully given to sufferers on its merits!

As the originator and founder of the electric belt system of treatment, my 40 years' success is the envy of many, and my belts of course are imitated (What good thing is not?) But my great knowledge to advise and direct my patients is mine alone, and free to all who use my belt until cure is complete.

Call or send to-day for my belt. Or if you want to look into the matter further, I have two best little books ever written upon Electricity and its medical uses, and send them free, sealed, upon request.

Dr. D. G. Sanden, 1151 Broadway, Near 27th Street, New York

Office Hours: 9 to 6. Sunday, 10 to 1. Largest Electric Belt Establishment in the World.

VIENNA AUSTRIANS EXCITED OVER RUMOR TO FORGIVE MORGANATIC MARRIAGE OF HEIR APPARENT ST. PETERSBURG AWFUL TRAGEDY BY REVOLUTION NOW DECLARED INEVITABLE IN RUSSIAN EMPIRE PARIS

VOLCANIC CALM NOW REIGNS IN RUSSIA.

St. Petersburg Friend of the Marquis de Castellane So Describes the Conditions.

LEOPOLD IN A ROW OVER "THE BARONESS"

By the Marquis de Castellane.

Paris, Feb. 3.—The surface calm in Russia is deceptive. A young friend of mine who is pursuing his studies in St. Petersburg writes me to the following effect:

"The Czar is literally a prisoner under lock and key, and his jailers are composed of two conflicting parties, who are strong in mutual hatred. The head of one of these parties is Grand Duke Vladimir, who advocates autocracy, and who in his desire to get the supreme power into his own hands has gone so far as to threaten the Emperor. Prince Dolgorouki is head of the other party. He leads the Liberals, and he, too, awaits the propitious moment for ridding the world of the Czar of all the Russias.

"Within the next three months a tragedy as bloody and awful as that which stained Servia recently will take place in St. Petersburg. It is horrible to contemplate—but inevitable."

So writes my young friend, and I do not hesitate to repeat his words for the edification of the SUNDAY AMERICAN readers, for he gets his facts from a source of undoubted authority. It is from a highly placed [illegible] among the autocratic circles that [illegible] information. He goes on to say [illegible] German Poland is preparing [illegible] with Russian Poland in a revolutionary movement which is bound to spread [illegible] on every side.

King and His Comforter.

His Majesty the King of the Belgians has categorically denied the report that he had contracted a morganatic marriage with the Baroness de Vaughan.

As a matter of fact, I know that the charming Baroness is merely the aged King's nurse or companion [illegible] by her charm and gayety [illegible] the encroaching [illegible] in the Belgian [illegible]. The King of the Congo [illegible] Paris has ever [illegible] the example of his great uncle Louis XIV. [illegible] in every possible way [illegible] his illustrious relative. If like [illegible] not have a Madame de Maintenon to cheer his declining years [illegible].

At Laeken, where his Majesty generally resides, he has built a subterranean passage [illegible] which leads from his palace to a pretty dwelling [illegible] his friend resides. Thither, by this discreet way, the King goes in search of harmless distraction.

"Amatoor" Drama Is the Rage.

Drawing room theatricals have never been so much in vogue in France as they are this Winter. In all the chateaux amateur plays take up the attention of the guests alternately with hunting. At the [illegible] de [illegible], which belongs to the Comte de [illegible], at the Chateau de Lu[illegible], at the Chateau de Brissac, musical [illegible] has been given, and even [illegible] of all theatrical entert[illegible] more ultra-Parisian than the revue. Needless to say that these amateur theatricals are always crowded with the greatest success.

Our society actresses do not disdain the services of the professionals and may be heard playing with some of our most popular comedienne. Thirty years ago such an alliance would have scandalized society. I remember the commotion which was caused when the Duchess de Galliera invited society to listen to a famous music hall singer of that day [illegible].

Times have changed [illegible] modern society seems to take a good deal of pleasure in associating with the theatrical world and here again we have a proof of the levelling influence of the [illegible].

A Bluff by the Kaiser.

The eyes of all France are turned toward Algeciras. It is there that are being decided the questions that are to end in peace or war.

The return of the German Ambassador, Prince Radolin, to Paris, is considered a hopeful sign, [illegible] that the Emperor of Germany will be satisfied with having created an uproar and will not push matters further. [illegible] German Ambassador, before he left for [illegible] declared plainly that if his Imperial master insisted upon his assuming [illegible] attitude of provocation with regard to France he, Radolin, would flatly refuse, and would send in his resignation and be seen no more in the sumptuous embassy in the rue de Lille. His return, therefore, is a sure sign of William II's intentions.

The Algeciras conference may cause considerable [illegible], but it is unlikely to result in a gale which will develop into a hurricane of armed forces. By this time the world should be pretty well convinced that William's bark is worse than his bite.

SAYS WOMAN IS GANGLIONIC WONDER

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Feb. [illegible] Dr. Bernard Hollander, the celebrated brain and nerve specialist, declares that "woman is not inferior to man. She is [illegible] [illegible] is her charm for man and her power over him."

Dr. Hollander [illegible] though the brain of woman weighs about five ounces [illegible] there is no reason [illegible] inferiority of intellectual power in the female sex.

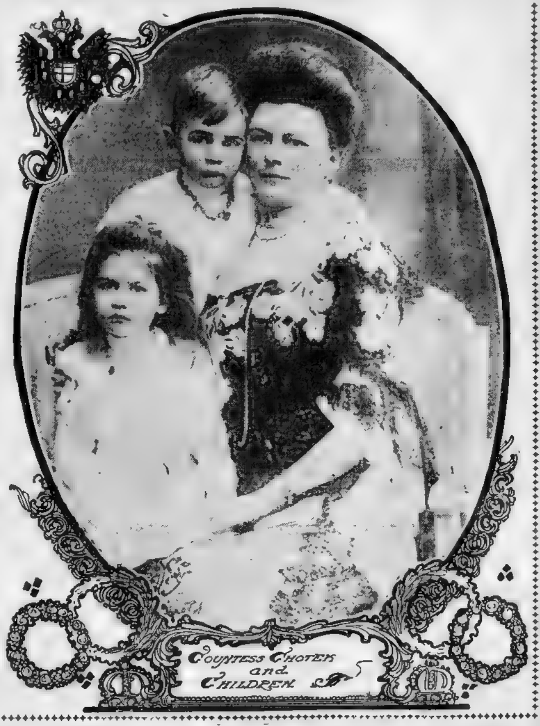
"It is shown [illegible] difference in brain [illegible] force of brain [illegible].

"In [illegible] elaborate [illegible] that women feel [illegible] of life. [illegible] readily roused to joy and sorrow and [illegible] grief [illegible]

Therefore Dr. Hollander contends, if judged by her brain and nervous organization together, woman is mentally not inferior to man.

Restore Duke Who Gave Thrones for Cupid?

What sacrifice in modern times can compare with that of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand D'Este, who rejected the thrones of Austria and Hungary and civil lists of $4,000,000 to wed the accomplished and witty Countess Choteck?



Countess Choteck and Children.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Vienna, Feb. 3.—All Vienna is speculating over the rumor, which seems to have its origin in court circles, that Emperor Francis Josef may decree that the heir apparent, Archduke Franz Ferdinand d'Este, had no right to renounce his right of success to the throne. If this should happen, everyone is at sea as to whether the old emperor should insist that the Archduke's marriage is morganatic, or would—and this seems highly improbable—allow the succession to proceed through the family of the Archduke Franz.

When the heir apparent married the woman he loved he waived all right of succession.

His choice was the Countess Choteck, beautiful, accomplished and witty, who was for many years one of the most popular women in Vienna, and [illegible] in Bohemia, where her father has large estates. But one obstacle, huge and [illegible], lay in the path of the happy lovers. She was a mere countess of a non-reigning family, while he was a prince of the royal blood. Such a marriage was [illegible] according to old Emperor Francis Josef.

But the lovers thought differently. In spite of many threats and scoldings from the Emperor himself, enforced trips around the world presumably for his health, but really a futile attempt to cure him of his love-sickness—and many other schemes of discipline known only to royal families who deal with obstinate lovers, the love of the archduke and the charming countess never faltered, but swept on its course with unabated vigor until about seven years ago, their pretty love affair culminated in a secret marriage.

What sacrifice in modern times can compare with this? In one scale be placed the imperial throne of Austria, a civil list of $3,000,000, the kingly throne of Hungary, a civil list of $1,000,000, six imperial and kingly castles and estates, the [illegible] claim to the imperial crown of Rome, the [illegible] claim to the imperial crown of Germany, and the headship of the most ancient of reigning families.

In the other was the hand and heart of a pretty Bohemian countess, as much of personal [illegible] as any Austrian may boast, and the admiration of all the world that "loves a lover."

Do they balance?

The Archduke has said they do. Others have shaken their heads and are not so sure. He ought to know.

Far reaching consequences are involved in his action, for, by the birth of a son in 1902, the future of the dynasty is affected.

It has long been court talk that the time would come, not during the Emperor's life, when the question of the Archduke's right to renounce the throne would be reopened. The present story indicates that it may be considered even earlier.

One candy tablet night and morning, taken regularly for a short time, is warranted to cure the worst case of Constipation or Indigestion that walks the earth.

One tablet taken whenever you suspect you need it will insure you against 90 per cent of all other ills likely to attack you.

This stronger action, producing greater nutrition from food, brings back to the Bowel-Muscles greater strength for self-operation.

The Bowel-Muscles can thus, in a short time, dispense with any Drug assistance whatever.

Cascarets are safe to take as often as you need them, while pleasant to eat as candy.

GREAT PREPARATIONS FOR THE BOSTON AUTO SHOW OF NEXT MONTH

By A. H. C. Mitchell.

This period is really the calm before the storm in automobile circles. The storm will break forth when the annual show opens in Mechanics Building and Symphony Hall on March 1[illegible]. In the meantime [illegible] is [illegible] or a well known [illegible]. We haven't had one in our salesroom yet, but everybody seems to have read about it and all are anxious to see it. No one is more anxious than I am, however. I want to get busy."

Bostonians do not realize, perhaps, that they are to have the largest and best show ever held in the world next month, but such are the facts. In the first place there is more floor space at Mechanics Building, more by 100 per cent. than there is at Madison Square Garden, New York. When one considers that Symphony Hall will be utilized also, one can form some idea of the extent of the Boston show.

I asked Manager [illegible] why he was putting so much money into his [illegible] display and in the decorations at Mechanics Building. He said: "I want to give everybody a show for his fifty cents. Not all of the visitors will own cars and not all are yet ready to buy. I want to make the display interesting to everybody and give them something to talk about." If his plans go right he will convince all the Missourians in town.

Growth of the Industry.

There is no other industry which has so extensive and elaborate exhibits as [illegible] each show [illegible] and middle West [illegible] automobile business [illegible]. A decade back few people [illegible] use the automobile for pleasure. It was a fad and was used only by experimenters or those who wished a new fad.

The first automobile shows were held in 1900. There were but few exhibitors, and the public attended out of curiosity. This is no longer the case. Two buildings will not be large enough to hold all the models or accommodate all exhibitors at this year's show. The people are accustomed to the automobile and will not attend to get a chance to see a machine, but to see the new models of each maker and to look over all types before buying.

The automobile manufacturers of the country have planned to make 40,000 machines of the 1906 type. The price of these cars will range all the way from $500 for the runabouts to $5,000 for the big and high power touring machines. This does not include the big foreign cars, some of which sell as high as $17,000.

This Year's Output $45,000,000.

The average, however, is probably $1,125, which makes the aggregate value of the 1906 American output $45,000,000.

The American public is expected to spend this sum for automobiles during the coming twelve months. This amount is asked after the millions already spent by Americans in past years for the self moving cars. If the country can put this amount into pleasure machines, it shows a wonderful condition of prosperity.

Thirty-two thousand are employed in the American automobile factories in addition to the hundreds of salesmen, agents and dealers in all sections. They are paid good salaries and are able to live well, bringing the money back into circulation through various channels.

Like many other industries the entire automobile output of most concerns is contracted for before the season is well under way. Each agent agrees to take the number of machines he thinks he can market during the season, and as a result many firms have contracts for their entire output. In some cases there is a string to this contract sale, the manufacturer agreeing to take back a certain number of cars if the agent is not at fault in the failure to dispose of the machine.

Demand Exceeds Supply.

Probably the number of cars the big concerns expect to make for the year is 600 apiece. Others run as high as 1,500. Many have not facilities to make the number of machines their agents are demanding. There are a score of automobile concerns which are building additions to their factories in order to double their 1907 output.

Although the contracts for the cars are made by the agent the first of the year, the deliveries are not promised until later. The first cars are usually sent out as early in January as possible, the cars being used for demonstrators. The show cars come next, the manufacturer usually taking them to each big exhibition held in the larger cities. The cars for the customers are sent out in February and March for the early orders. April and May bring the biggest demands, as orders come fast when weather and road conditions permit constant use of machines.

Avoid sudden applications of the brake.

Air costs nothing. Tires are expensive.

Don't let weight rest on deflated tires, even over night.

Running a tire flat, even a short distance, is sure to be costly.

Keep rims in good order, straight and true. Rust is destructive. Paint preserves.

What the Public Wants.

An interesting inquiry has been held by a French motoring paper as to the types of motor cars which are most required by the public. Over 1,000 replies were received, and 160 of those were from doctors. It appears that they would be content with cars of about six horsepower, with an average speed of eighteen miles an hour, and costing under $750. Commercial travelers would like cars up to nine horsepower, capable of averaging eighteen miles an hour and also costing [illegible] $750. Stockbrokers would have [illegible] those holding two.

From the gentlemen of independent means many replies were also received, and they wanted twelve horsepower cars, an average speed of twenty-five miles an hour, and seating accommodations for four. They would go up to $1,700 in price.

All these figures go to show that the general public are very anxious to get a really cheap car, and at the same time it is evident that they are not always reasonable in their demands. It is all very well to say that one would be content with a car of low horsepower, but if it is expected that such a vehicle should be capable of carrying four passengers and maintaining an average speed of fifteen to twenty miles an hour the task set to the manufacturer is extremely difficult.

If a motor car is to be satisfactory it must have good material and good workmanship throughout, and these are two very costly items which just at present cannot be reduced very much.

General Auto Notes.

The Linscott Motor Company have received their 1906 six-cylinder, sixty horsepower National demonstrating car. It will hold seven persons, has a 121 inch wheel base and can travel sixty miles per hour.

The Morrison-Tyler Company are erecting a [illegible] on Ipswich street as [illegible] and repair station. [illegible] is from fifty to seventy [illegible] cars and it will be ready [illegible] March 1.

The Baker-Comerais Company report a busy week in Premier cars, having booked a number of orders. This Boston agency have introduced a little novelty in the way of a Turkish cigarette, on one side of which in gold letters is the monogram "B. C. Premier Air Cooled," and the opposite side reads, "The Quality Car." While it is not expected that the cigarette will in any way influence the sale of automobiles, it speaks for the sociability and good fellowship of Mr. Baker and his associates toward their patrons and the trade.

Mr. Butler of the Butler Motor Company has just returned from the Cleveland factory where he has arranged for early deliveries of the Cleveland car. Mr. Butler has added the "Rapid" commercial vehicle to his line. This truck received much favorable comment at the New York show. It is on its way to Boston now, being demonstrated in various cities en route. It is a double-chain drive truck of one ton and one and one-half ton capacity and is guaranteed for one year in all its parts including the tires.

A. T. Fuller expects to be housed in the Motor Mart, Park square, within two weeks. He reports an unprecedented demand for "Packards" and while he has been experiencing some delay in the delivery of Cadillacs says arrangements have been made whereby this difficulty will be immediately overcome.

Messrs. Lincoln D. and Alfred N. Robbins of Lynn are showing the full line of "Waltham Orient" cars for this section of the country at their new store in the Motor Mart. They still carry on their Lynn business, representing "Wintons," "Waltham-Orients" and Oldsmobiles and conduct a large garage and repair shop. They are very popular in Lynn and vicinity.

Last Monday Colonel Oakes of the 5th Regt. M. V. M. and his staff officers attended Governor Guild's reception at the Somerset, driven there in Premier cars furnished by Baker-Comerais Company.

The garage and repair shop of the Boston branch of the Pope Manufacturing Co., which suffered severely by fire on the morning of January 10th, has been thoroughly renovated. A new system of heating has been installed, the walls cleaned and whitewashed, and everything possible has been done for the convenience of its patrons.

New Pope-Hartford.

The New Model "F" 4-cylinder Pope-Hartford will be driven up over the road from the factory at Hartford, Ct., on Monday next. Many orders have already been placed on the strength of demonstrations given at the New York show.

Mr. C. W. Walker, secretary of the Pope Manufacturing Co., visited in Boston during the past week and the ever genial Edward W. Pope of Lincoln, Mass., for many years one of the officials of the company, sails from Boston on Saturday for the Mediterranean to take an extended trip on the continent.

Mr. Chas. J. Glidden has many automobile touring records on his Napier car to his credit, including being the first to drive around the world, and having driven further in one car than any other motorist. In addition to this he has cabled that after driving from Bombay to the Khyber Pass he drove right across Northern India following the Grand Trunk Road from Ganges to Calcutta, thus making a total of 4,405 miles, which is the longest tour yet made in an automobile in India. Mr. Glidden has completed 29,505 miles in his Napier car which has run further than any automobile in the world. He now intends to continue his lengthy journey to Burmah, Ceylon, Siam and Japan.

DEDHAM HIGH GIRLS BEATEN AT LOWELL

Lowell, Feb. 3.—Dedham High girls scored seven points on the champion Lowell girls basketball team this afternoon more than all other opponents have made this season against the home team. Lowell won 29 to 9. The work of Miss Randall and Miss French was the feature. Miss Mary Sawyer did clever work for Lowell. The summary:

EDESON FAVORS FOOTBALL.

Robert Edeson, who is scheduled for the Park Theatre in "Strongheart" Monday, February 12, has taken a hand in the animated discussion that is now rife over the dangers of football. "Strongheart" is a drama of the pigskin school, and naturally its chief actor, who portrays a football warrior, and who is an old backfield star himself, is loth to see the game abolished.

JIMMY COLLINS AS A HYPNOTIST

Syracuse, Feb. 3.—Captain Jimmy Collins of the Boston Americans spent a couple of hours with Bill Dineen here.

The captain said things looked good for the Americans' campaign this Summer. "We expect to cut more of a figure than last year," said he, with a grin. "The boys will go down to Macon early in March to get in shape. Billy, here, will be along. He's always strong on conditioning."

Captain Jimmy showed no frapped confidence.

"He'll be there, you watch him," he declared.

Then the two seated themselves and had a heart to heart talk. The captain seemed to radiate a gentle insistence and Dineen seemed determined. Finally he accompanied Collins to his train.

A reporter saw Dineen immediately afterward.

"Is everybody happy?" he asked.

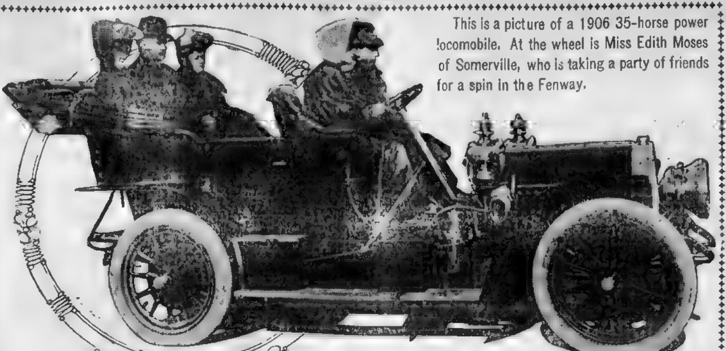
"No," said Dineen, "not yet."

"How does Collins stack up as a hypnotist?"

"Bum," said Dineen with a grin.

ETHEL'S PRIDE TO RACE.

Ethel's Pride, 2:06¾, is being jogged every pleasant day by Charley McDonald. It is the intention of Mr. Shepard to race her in the matinees at Readville the coming season besides giving her a few races professionally when the Grand Circuit strikes this section.



This is a picture of a 1906 35-horse power locomobile. At the wheel is Miss Edith Moses of Somerville, who is taking a party of friends for a spin in the Fenway.

FOUR PROMINENT MEN CONNECTED WITH THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY IN BOSTON

E. S. Breed is agent for the Elmore and the Haynes-Apperson cars. Previous to his connection with the automobile business he was a well-known broker of State street, but the fascination of the automobile was such that he couldn't resist its charms.

C. F. Whitney is manager of the Park Square Automobile Station, the largest automobile garage in the country. He is also a prominent member of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, and is well known to nearly every auto man in New England.

John L. Snow has been connected with the Peerless Motor Car Company ever since its New England headquarters were established. Previous to this time he was connected with the H. B. Shattuck Company, New England distributors of the Oldsmobile and Autocar. His position with the Peerless Company is that of manager.

Simeon E. Baker, a well known and popular figure in automobile circles, has been connected with the T. B. Jeffery Company, makers of the Rambler bicycle for a number of years, severing his connection to join forces with E. Comerais in the Baker-Comerais Company, New England distributors of the Premier cars.

RACING AUTOISTS SAIL TOMORROW FOR CUBA.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 3.—The racing circuit chasers reached here to-night in high good humor over their day's experiences. W. J. Morgan had transformed them into an exploring party and organized the first automobile tour over the new road from Palm Beach to this place, which is destined to popularize Winter motoring in Florida and may, perhaps, some day open the eyes of the State legislators to the advantage of a continuous roadway down the east coast from Jacksonville. Then will Florida be the Mecca of touring as well as racing automobilists.

Six cars carried the tourists—three White steamers, from the Palm Beach garage; two Ramblers and a Cadillac from the garage which C. R. Zacharas of Asbury Park has just opened.

The new road closely parallels the railroad most of the way and is sixty-six miles in length. It is built of coquina rock, which soon becomes crushed and furnishes a white ribbon of level cement the whole way. It is twelve feet wide at present and but few vehicles of any kind are encountered to cause the inconvenience of passing. The road will permit of an average speed of twenty-five miles an hour with comfort, despite its newness.

A fine dinner was had at the inn at Lauderdale, the trading post for the Seminole Indians, where the dancing, singing and clever sayings of a pickaninny kept the tourists laughing for over an hour. So great was the success of the run and so pleased were the tourists with Florida's first long-distance highway that the run is to be an established feature of the future Southern racing circuits.

The race followers will pass the time in fishing and exploring the Everglades until they sail for Cuba on Monday. George P. Tangeman and W. Gould Brokaw are here. The former will accompany Lancia and Cedrino to Havana. The latter has wired instructions for Maurice Bernin to go to Cuba and compete for the Havana cup against Lancia, Cedrino and Demogeot with the ninety horsepower Renault racer.

OTTAWA ICE RACES.

Ottawa has ice races next week, and by the number who slipped up there on the train from the South Station last evening the Hub will be well represented. That is not all, as several were not able to get away till later and are booked to leave Sunday evening.

RECORD ENTRY LIST IS RECEIVED FOR BENCH SHOW IN THIS CITY

The entry list for the New England Kennel Club Show, to be held in Mechanics Building the latter part of this month, closed last week and showed the largest entry ever made for this show. Over 900 dogs were entered, making a total of nearly 1,500 entries. This will guarantee a fine show, easily the best ever held by the local organization. Owners of about all the cracks in this part of the country have sent in the names of their blue ribbon winners, among the owners and breeders who will exhibit at this show being Myron W. Robinson, George Porter, Howard Totten, Reginald Vanderbilt, Mrs. R. H. Davis, Samuel Untermeyer, George Thomas, J. D. O'Gorman, Thomas W. Lawson, who has entered thirty dogs, and several other equally well known breeders and owners.

New York's Great Show.

The thirtieth annual show of dogs will be held at Madison Square Garden, under the auspices of the Westminster Kennel Club, on February 12, 13, 14 and 15.

Nearly $20,000 in special prizes has been offered by individual contributors, and the regular show prizes amount to about $14,000 more, making a grand total of about $34,000 in cups, trophies, bowls, medals and cash prizes.

Altogether there are eighty-three different recognized breeds of dogs, and each breed is allowed seven classes. These classes are subdivided, and three prizes offered in each of them. Consequently the eighteen judges will have all they can do to single out the first, second and third best in each of the groups in the four days that the show will run. The dogs will be judged in rings.

A feature at the show this year will be the exhibition of two new breeds of dogs. They are the Rosemeath terriers and the papillon or butterfly spaniel. The Rosemeath terrier resembles the Scottish terrier in practically every respect, except that the color of the former is white.

The papillon, which is also known as the butterfly or squirrel spaniel, is a type never seen on the bench in this country, and is a rare specimen. Few of them are in existence, and these few are owned by multi-millionaires.

Champion Pointer to Show.

Champion Coronation, probably the most famous pointer yet seen in an English dog show ring, was recently purchased by B. J. Lewis of the Lansdowne Kennels, near Philadelphia. Coronation has won championships galore, but her crowning achievement was when she won the cup for the best dog of all breeds at the Birmingham show. In attaining this triumph she defeated nearly all the recognized English champions of every breed.

Coming over here with Coronation for the Westminster Kennel Club show, which begins February 12 in Madison Square Garden, are other notabilities. Among them are the famous field spaniel, Champion Gotham Queen; Champion Lady Peggy, the Dalmatian, Champion Bit of Courage, the greyhound, and the Irish terrier Red Prince.

A battle royal is on between Samuel Untermyer, the corporation lawyer, and J. Pierpont Morgan for the blue ribbons which will be distributed to the champion collies at the dog show, which begins in Madison Square Garden a week from next Monday.

Mr. Morgan and Mr. Untermyer have the finest kennels of collies in this country. Mr. Morgan's dogs are kept at his country place near Highland Falls, and Mr. Untermeyer's at Greystone, his country place at North Yonkers.

On Tuesday there arrived from England, consigned to Greystone, Parbold Prunella, the recognized champion collie of her sex in Great Britain, and her nine-months-old puppy, who has been named Greystone Enchantress. These two dogs cost $5,000.

Yesterday a noted New York dealer in collies received a cablegram from his London agent, stating that Mr. Morgan, through his agent, was bidding for the Squire of Tytton, the champion collie sire of Great Britain. This dog has been held at $10,000. If Mr. Morgan gets the dog it will be rushed to New York on a fast steamer in time to compete in the coming dog show.

Mr. Untermyer and Mr. Morgan have been rival exhibitors of collies of recent years. Formerly Mr. Morgan had everything his own way, but at the last two shows he saw a number of ribbons awarded to his rival. The dogs just imported by Mr. Untermyer are regarded as sure winners in their classes.

Mr. Morgan has sixty odd collies to fifty in the Greystone kennels. Last Summer Mr. Untermyer imported Southport Sculptor, for which he paid $3,500. This dog will be exhibited for the first time in New York at the coming show.

Athletes are preparing for the Lawrence Light Guard open games at Medford on February 24, and the entries of noted performers in their specialties are getting into prime shape for the games. H. A. The Tufts College relay team has arranged to race Brown instead of M. I. T. and the Light Guard team will try to trim the Malden Rifles in a four-man team race.

New Haven, Feb. 3.—By the score, 231 to 228, the Yale Gun Club members today defeated the Boston Athletic Association team in a hotly contested shoot. At the end of the first round the score was tied. Then the lead alternated till the last shot was fired.

STAR RUNNERS WILL COMPETE IN B.A.A. GAMES SATURDAY.

One of the features of the big B. A. A. athletic carnival at Mechanics building next Saturday night will be the two-mile indoor championship event which has all the leading distance runners of the country entered.

First and foremost is George Bonhag of the Irish-American Athletic Club of New York, who has won the event for the last couple of years. He will have a faster field than ever to confront and his fine running will receive one of the severest tests in his career.

He is one of the greatest performers on the cinder path who ever wore a spiked shoe, as he is the personification of all that is grace in getting over the ground and will have several teammates to help him out in the race. They will see to it that the champion gets a good chance to show his speed when the vital moment comes.

Entry List Large.

The entry list is the largest ever in these annual indoor games and every event has a lot of stars entered.

The first race, the forty-yard dash, has 200 entered, with the pick of the sprinters in the East on deck.

Walter Eckersall, the wonderful University of Chicago sprinter, will come in for a lot of attention when he gets on the mark, and Archie Hahn, the former University of Michigan dasher, will share the honors with him. He will wear the colors of the Milwaukee A. C.

Arrayed against these men of the West will be William D. Eaton, who made a new record for the distance last year.

Charley Seitz of Georgetown, C. M. French of Cornell, John W. Mayhew of Brown, Harry Hillman of the N. Y. A. C., J. F. Doyle of Harvard and a bunch of the fast ones.

Star Milers Will Start.

A star aggregation will face the starter in the mile run, with Melvin Stone, the recent creator of marvelous time in the Columbia games, Harvey Cohn and J. F. Sullivan of New York, who are premier men in their stepping the mile distance.

In all the long distance events, including the 600 and 1,000 yard runs, there are notable entries which will draw out some fine contests.

Marshall of Yale, the intercollegiate champion will be in the high jump, and his most formidable rival will be Gidney, the Malden boy, who is the best we have here.

The relay races bring out the enthusiasm, and Harvard will meet Yale in a two-mile contest. The other races are as follows: M. I. T. vs. Bowdoin, Princeton vs. Cornell, Dartmouth vs. University of Pennsylvania, Amherst vs. Brown, Williams vs. Wesleyan, Cambridgeport Gymnasium Association vs. St. Alphonsus Association, St. Joseph A. A. vs. Newton Y. M. C. A., the Harvard class races, Harvard and Yale freshmen.

The Napier at Ormond

The winning of the 100-mile race in competition against the best and highest powered cars and most noted drivers of Europe and America was a great victory. The fact that the Napier car did over 60 miles of this without one of its rear tires, and that out of six starters the two Napiers finished first and third, is the best proof of the reliability of the Napier cars and a good reason for naming the runabout NIKÉ.

SMILES AND HANDSHAKES WILL BE IN ORDER AT READVILLE THIS YEAR

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL

Social equality is to run rampant at the Readville track this year. The watchword is to be popularity. The directors and secretary of the New England Breeders' Association are to be as genial as a politician before election.

When Ralph B. W[illegible] A. H. Parker [illegible] were [illegible] the work[illegible] Johnson they immediately looked about to see how every [illegible] worked to place the track ahead in the estimation of the general public as well as its patrons.

They knew that it had always been the idea to give the very best [illegible] to [illegible] the Readville meeti[illegible] they realized that the [illegible] thing lacking and [illegible] great [illegible].

In some way [illegible] Breeders' Association [illegible] in the way of [illegible] the air of aristocracy in [illegible] atmosphere so heavily that their joy spirits were dampened. Then again others maintained the Secretary was so lacking in his dealings with the horsemen that [illegible] place of making friends the opposite was the case.

Shortcomings Unintentional.

Of course, none of this had been intentional. In the bustle of attending to [illegible] of the things rising during the progress of a meeting the secretary could not give required time to everybody who was after him, and a short answer made some of these persons feel they had been slighted.

After thoroughly going over the [illegible] the working committee decided nothing of the sort should occur again. To make the secretary always good-natured his salary has been increased $100 per annum.

This is a wise move, as what is there to make a tired, overworked man better behaved when he feels like being real rude than having a roll of the "yellow boys" floating his way? It is the only panacea that will make the most jaundiced man as entertaining in a public position as a college youth when out with his best girl.

Diplomacy Will Rule.

In the future when it is necessary to turn down a person who thinks he is in line for a pass the secretary will do it so diplomatically that it will be a pleasure to be refused and hand over the dollar at the gate. Smiles will cluster all over that man's face as he walks to the grandstand with the paid coupon hanging from the lapel of his coat, and all of the afternoon he will be busily telling his friends what a "jolly good fellow" the secretary is.

And the working committee is to be on the bustle too. During the meetings the members are to help the secretary in entertaining. Each will be stationed at the gates so if anything is [illegible] will be Johnny on the spot. Acquaintances will be greeted by the hand when they come in, who in turn will introduce their friends, and be made happy.

The result of all this is expected to [illegible] greater crowds to see the races, and [illegible] doing the gate receipts will swell to an extent never before known in the history of the local turf.

But it is a great idea. Don't you all think so?

Lost Name for Farm.

[illegible] Blue Hill Farm."

But in doing this he was not aware that when Mr. Forbes bought the place many years since that he had the same idea [illegible] was called off through another farm near by owned by Augustus Hemenway having the right and title to the name he wanted.

Now when Mr. Johnson came out and told the turf world what in the future the farm was to be known very naturally Mr. Hemenway wanted to find out under what rules could it be done. Realizing the right of the question Mr. Johnson immediately gave away, deciding to call it Ponkapong Farm, but again struck a snag, and now all of his friends have persuaded him to name the noted home of many of the countries famous horses "The Johnson Farm."

Furbush's New Racers.

The local horsemen have been returning from the sale at Madison Square Garden this week. One said that John Shepard would have got more money for Promise, 2.10, had he not been shown by A. H. Perrin, who bought him for $1,300, as some would have bid only they concluded that Mr. Perrin was protecting Mr. Shepard. He was sold, however, and has been shipped to Buffalo. The promising pacing mare [illegible], which Lester Dore started [illegible] season, was not sold [illegible] J. B. Campbell [illegible] of Newburgh got a good [illegible] $1,200 [illegible]

On Tuesday evening, Feb. 13, the Lynn Driving Club is to hold its third annual banquet, and everything possible is to be done by the members to have it the banner event in the history of the organization.

Among the invited guests is Mayor Barney of the city and Board of Aldermen. It is a well known fact that there is nothing to cause men to be so liberal in their views and actions as a good square meal. The Lynn Driving Club has for several years been after a quarter of a mile speedway. All of the other prominent cities in the country already have one, and the city fathers have promised that Lynn should follow suit, but delay has followed delay to the present time.

SCENES AT HOCKEY GAME IN STADIUM AND NEWHALL OF HARVARD.

HARVARD TOO FAST FOR ROXBURY BOYS IN HOCKEY GAME.

Crimsons, Despite Their Lack of Practice, Win as They Please from Their Rivals in the Stadium by Score of 14-1

The Harvard hockey team pulled off its first [illegible] game of the season on the [illegible] yesterday afternoon, [illegible] the Roxbury hockey team 14 [illegible].

Th[illegible] worked brilliantly at [illegible] during the whole game they showed [illegible] lack of team play and throughout the second half tired very noticeably. The ragged team play and poor condition was undoubtedly due to lack of recent practice on the ice, the game yesterday afternoon being the first really substantial work out that the Harvard men have had in the past two weeks.

Roxbury Boys Outclassed.

The Roxbury men were outclassed throughout by their college opponents, but in the second half of the game braced and kept the Harvard men from scoring but four goals, though the big Crimson forwards were doing their best to send the little rubber puck into the net. Harvard in the second period began to rough things up. Dan Newhall would get the puck far down the end of the rink and carry it by sheer weight through the entire Roxbury team, but the Roxbury goal tenders were more alert than at first, and the big Crimson captain got but a single goal in this manner. Newhall was fooled and cleverly passed several times when from the cover-point position he tried to stave off the rushes of Van Amringe and Brown down the rink.

Townsend's Star Work.

Though he showed a tendency to loaf in the second period of play, Dick Townsend stood out above the remainder of the men in the play. His shooting was at times cool and accurate to a remarkable degree and his carrying and passing the puck steadily brilliant. Pell made good use of the side boards in carrying the puck down the rink, though his opponent, Brandt, kept the big Harvard man moving.

The most promising work for Harvard was that done by Townsend and McLeod at left and right centres. These two at times worked very well together. If they can perfect the game that they showed sporadically yesterday afternoon, they will be a dangerous pair for Yale on February 17. Summary:

HARVARD.	BOX. HOCKEY CLUB.
Pell, l. e.	r. e., Brandt
Townsend, l. c.	r. c., Davis
MacLeod, r. c.	l. c., VanAmringe

HERMAN MEETS THE MEXICAN FRIDAY ON THE COAST.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.—With less than one week more in which to train for their battle, Kid Herman and Aurelio Herrera are straining every muscle to be in the best possible shape when the gong rings to send them together next Friday. Each boy realizes the importance of victory, and nothing will be left undone by either one which would help defeat his opponent.

Herrera's condition to-day is superb, and unless he trains off before Friday the Bakersfield fighter will meet Herman in grand shape. When he fought "Young Corbett" a few weeks ago the Mexican was trained to the minute, and the same conditions will prevail when he hooks up with Herman.

The Chicago boy is right there, too. A total abstainer all the time, it does not take Herman long to get into trim and fit himself for any kind of a battle. Road work for the wind and boxing and bag punching as speed producers are about all the exercise the Kid needs to put him on edge, and it is always a safe bet that he will go into the ring as fit as he ever was.

Both Herman and Herrera are confident of victory, and as the winner has been promised a go with Battling Nelson for the championship, the fight will undoubtedly be one of the hardest and fastest ever pulled off in this city.

The men will be equal favorites in the betting, as the experts are undecided as to their choice. Herrera's last fight, that with "Corbett," shows just how dangerous the Mexican is with his right hand, and Herman's clever win over Eddie Hanlon stamps the Chicago boxer as one of the coolest lightweights that ever fought here. With these things as a basis for the dope, the bettors are finding it a hard job to decide on the winner.

HOLY CROSS FIVE SNOWED UNDER AT HARVARD

In a rough contest Harvard defeated Holy Cross in the Hemenway Gymnasium yesterday in basketball, 25 to 10.

The Crimson started away with a rush and threatened to sweep the Worcester team off the floor, getting five points before being checked.

BELL FAVORS MORE STRINGENT RULES

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—John C. Bell, Pennsylvania's representative on the football rules committee, has made these comments on the recent work of that body.

"The rules increasing the penalties for brutality, unnecessary roughness and unsportsmanlike conduct will, I think, meet with general public approval. Personally, in cases of disqualification, I favored an additional penalty prohibiting a substitute taking the disqualified player's place for a period of five minutes. I think this cumulative penalty would be more severe and prove a greater detriment than the distance penalty agreed upon by the committee. The rules adopted, however, with a view of opening up the game are but a short step in the right direction, and if not further amended will in my judgment prove ineffectual and disappointing." By restricting seven men to both rush lines at all stages [illegible] rules committee can attain the desired reforms.

JACK O'BRIEN MAY FIGHT PALMER IN THIS COUNTRY.

New York, Feb. 3.—Jack O'Brien may induce Jack Palmer, the heavyweight champion of England, to come to this country to fight here, instead of O'Brien going across the big pond.

This fight O'Brien claims will be for the heavyweight championship of the world, and as matters stand at present, it is billed to come off in Bettinson's National Sporting Club in London.

[illegible] however, who has been [illegible] Philadelphia [illegible] cabled to England asking if Mr. Palmer cannot journey to this side to settle the question of superiority.

Jack very temptingly sets forth the fact that there is more money to be gained from a fight in this country, and in his letter says he is not without hope that this trifling detail will appeal somewhat to the British soul of the Palmer person.

O'Rourke will outbid the English club for the match and will start in by naming $15,000.

Croker's Trainer Gives Tip on the English Derby

New York, Feb. 3.—J. J. Parkinson, who trains Richard Croker's racehorses in Ireland, and who has been on a visit here, sailed on the Campania en route to his home. All told, Mr. Parkinson has eighty-five horses in his charge, thirty-five of which are the property of Mr. Croker, who had his best year on the Irish turf in 1905, winning about thirty races and $30,000 in prizes.

Added money is not as large in Ireland as in England, because public patronage is not so remunerative, yet the turf is in a healthy state there. The soil, rich in limestone, being extremely favorable, Mr. Parkinson says, to the breeding of thoroughbreds.

Croker's Racing String.

Richard Croker's thirty-five racers include many by the once well known American [illegible] as well as by the late Dobbins, the horse who shared with Domino the honors of the year 1893 here, when, as two-year-olds, they ran a dead heat in the match made as the result of the Futurity of that year, won by Domino. Mr. Parkinson said last night that Mr. Croker has perpetuated the dead Dobbins by an Italian marble statue of the horse, which is the most striking object to be seen at his breeding farm.

Asked what colt he thought would win this year's English Derby, Parkinson said: "Lally is [illegible] the best on his two-year-old form, and in my opinion he will win the Derby. He is an Irish bred colt, by Amphion out of Miss Hoyden. I know that his owner, W. B. Purefoy, one of the shrewdest men on the English turf, has declined an offer of $150,000 for Lally. You can draw your own conclusions."

Parkinson added that Mr. Croker's filly Vain Glory, which won all her races last year, was not entered in the English Oaks because she is bred from a family not thought to be stayers. When asked about the colt Gingal, which ran like a colt who would stay, Parkinson replied that no son of Carbine that he could recall had shown any great speed, though they ran like plodders."

Admired Yankee Horses.

Parkinson, after a visit of ten days to Chicago, where he has some old family friends, spent part of one day at Sheepshead Bay looking over A. J. Joyner's string, which includes about forty horses, the property of August Belmont, Sydney Paget, J. B. Haggin and E. R. Thomas. Parkinson much admired Tradition and Hamburg Belle, as well as some well developed, racy looking two-year-olds under Joyner's care.

Mr. Croker has no colt or filly of Derby class for 1906, Parkinson says, though he owns a good looking, well tried colt in the chestnut Orby, by Orme, out of the American mare Rhoda B. (dam of Rhododendron, a winner in Ireland), by Hanover, out of Mayrgerine, hence full sister to The Commoner. Orby is in the Derby of 1907. Nearly all of Mr. Croker's horses are the product of either American sires or dams. The two-year-old Senator Tim, named after Timothy D. Sullivan, is evidently a good one, for Parkinson admitted that he had tried him satisfactorily. He expects a good year in 1906 with Mr. Croker's horses, many of which were sick last year.

ANDOVER DEFEATS ARLINGTON 3 TO 2

Andover, Feb. 3.—Phillips-Andover hockey team defeated Arlington High to-day in a close game by the score of 3 to 2.

Little team work was shown on either side, due to lack of practice, but there was some good individual playing, Fels, Merritt, Hicks and Sloan being particularly good.

Both teams scored in the first minute of play, Heintzman for Andover and Sloan for Arlington. The game was then tied until the last of the half, when Waterman shot the puck in during a mixup in front of the goal. Hicks tied the score in the second half, but Heintzman won the game by a successful shot in another mixup in front of the goal. Summary:

MALDEN WON ROUGH BASKETBALL GAME

Malden, Feb. 3.—The fast Brookfield High school basketball team ran up against a tough proposition when they tackled the Malden High school team in the Malden Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this afternoon, the home team running up thirty points while the visitors could only make four.

The first half ended with the score 19 to 0 in favor of the Maldens, the visitors being unable to make a point in this half, so well did the Malden boys cover their men.

In the second half Brookfield managed to cage the ball twice, Balcon being the one to save the Brookfields from a whitewash, both of these baskets being made in the last two minutes of play.

After seven minutes of play in the second half Referee Rander disqualified Durkin of the Brookfield team for slugging Howard [illegible] in the ribs with his clenched fists. New York, Feb. 3.—Remarkable time was made in several events at the games of the Irish-American A. C. in the Garden to-night.

In the four mile handicap relay race between teams representing the Irish American Athletic Club and a combination from the Pastime and Xavier athletic clubs, the Irish team giving 150 yards handicap to the other runners, won by a margin of thirty yards in 17m. 56s., a new record for this kind of a race.

The winning team was made up of J. P. Sullivan, George V. Bonhag, H. W. Cohn and M. W. Sheppard. LOU CRIGER IS VERY ILL AT HIS HOME

Elkhart, Ind., Feb. 3.—Louis Criger, catcher for the Boston American League baseball club, is critically ill. He is suffering with neuralgia of the spine, and fears are entertained that it will go into spinal meningitis. He has been ailing for some time, but his illness only became serious three days ago. He suffered intense pain, and yesterday his cries were distinctly audible to passers-by on the street.

He was slightly better this afternoon, but reports from the bedside this evening are far from encouraging. His friends fear that even if he pulls through he will be unable to join the Bostons for spring practice this year.

SIMON WON AT LEWISTON.

The distance was a third of a mile, and Simon went in 43 seconds—a 2.09 gait.

The game was very fast, but few fouls were called and both teams gave good exhibitions of team work. Gunning, Murphy and Hennessey played well for the home team, and Hosmer and Sherwin for the visitors. Summary:

Candy is the answer. Wouldn't you like a box of candy free to give her? You needn't tell her it didn't cost you anything if you don't want to.

Or maybe you'd like a box of candy for your sister, or your mother, or your wife—or even for yourself, especially if it's free.

And especially if it's real good candy—Lowney's chocolates.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN offers one thousand pound boxes of this candy free to its readers. They are offered as prizes in an interesting and clever contest over a cut-out puzzle.

In another column is printed the picture of the cut-out puzzle.

Look through to-day's SUNDAY AMERICAN and write out where the different sections of the puzzle appear.

Do this neatly. Three points will be particularly noted—correctness, neatness and time of mailing. To the thousand prize winners a pound box of Lowney's will be sent, delivered free of charge.

Here's a rare chance for double pleasure—to please your intellect with solving the puzzle and tickle your palate with the candy. Here is the list of winners of last week's prizes.

William J. Hanna of No. 629 Tremont street, Boston, wins the first prize. He evidently believes in the old maxim that "early to bed, and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." It certainly made him more wealthy, for he is $10 richer for getting up early.

H. H. Wardwell of No. 108 Stoughton street, Dorchester, captured second prize of $5 for his speed in solving the puzzle and mailing an answer.

One of the neatest answers received was that of Mrs. C. E. Annis of No. 119 High street, Charlestown. Several other correct answers arrived at exactly the same time, but she received third prize of $5, owing to the neatness of her letter.

Other prize winners were:

Eleventh prize, $2—B. S. Richmond, 75 Bloomingdale street, Chelsea.

SICK OF TOBACCO

New Remedy SENT FREE

"Oh! what a pleasure to see your man or boy turn, with a wry face from tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, or snuff, disgusted and sickened by the very odor! And Oh! the joy of knowing that he rejoices too; rejoices to be free from bondage. I have had that pleasure. Anyone can have it. I have given it to hundreds. I will gladly give it to you, as I have nothing to sell and want no money. My husband was a Tobacco fiend. This wonderful new remedy cured him, restored his broken health, and I am determined that the whole world shall know of this Heaven-sent blessing for women, who cure their loved ones, the powders being odorless and tasteless, may be GIVEN SECRETLY in tea, coffee or food.

MEN CURE THEMSELVES easily and gradually, by taking the remedy in tablet form three or four times a day. They like this remedy because they don't have to quit. It makes them quit as the dose dissolves slowly in the mouth and takes away all craving for tobacco.

The Free Treatment has cured hundreds, although merely sent to show how harmless it is, how it may be used, etc. If you need more, it will cost less than tobacco, and thus you will save money and health, and lose no pleasure. Send me a letter NOW, state if secret remedy is wanted; send two stamps and you will hear from me in plain envelope, promptly. Address:

WHY YOU'RE SKINNY!

Women often inquire, Why is it that I'm so thin, flat, scrawny and have no bust or shape? A real reason for this physical degeneration is had in the confined life and mental strain necessary to have standing in the advanced studies of the schools of to-day. Again, in the sedentary, strained, confined life at the desk, typewriter, office, store and such positions as the "lady" will occupy. Coming as it does at an age of immaturity, when development of organs and body, as well as strength and growth, must fail without care and healthy and varied exercise. So when called upon to perform work and functions natural to woman, they are unequal to the demand upon their physical strength, for they lack nerve force and bodily vigor needed by the true woman. To make a girl or woman full, plump and vigorous, filled with life, vitality and action, with sparkling eyes, sprightly step and thrilling bosom, she needs Dr. Conway's Bustoids. They produce these results in young and old without injury or failure. Dr. Conway's Bustoids make the bosom large, plump and elegant and bring joy, real health and happiness. If you want a full, firm, plump and entrancing bust, Dr. Conway's Bustoids enlarge them 4 to 10 inches more EVERY TIME without injury. $1,000 if we can't. There's no substitute for them. PATERSON READ OUT BY THE DEMOCRATS.

Denied Right to Vote for San Domingo Treaty, He Withdraws.

COLORADO SENATOR DEFIES HIS PARTY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The Democratic senators, to-day, in caucus assembled, after a five-hour debate, decided that any Senator who voted for the Santo Domingo treaty proposed by President Roosevelt will be read out of the Democratic party.

Never before in the history of politics has such a drastic action been taken in the Senate. It means that Senator Paterson of Colorado will have to walk the plank if he votes according to his ideas and sentiments as set forth in his recent speech before the Senate—a speech in which he declared positively for the Roosevelt policy in the treatment of the Black Republic affair.

PATERSON STANDS FIRM.

Before the rule was laid down at the caucus to-day Senator Paterson explained to the members his position. He declared that so far as his voting for the treaty was concerned and his favorable attitude toward President Roosevelt he had no explanations to make. They were a matter of conscience and conviction with him and he did not propose that any man should dictate to him in either. He asserted that so far as the action of a caucus could go he was not the least concerned for the most it could do against him was to read him out of the senatorial Democratic party, which he did not admit was the body, boots and breeches of the Democratic party of the nation, but were a very small part of it. While the caucus could do this yet it could not read him out of the ranks as a Democrat, for his own State would vouch for his Democratic integrity and would rule upon the thoroughness of his Democracy.

Withdraws from Democrats.

It was asserted to-day that the President had been advised that he was sure of five votes that are necessary to get the treaty through; that he would get them from the Democrats.

The present outlook is that the treaty is finally beaten as only McEnery and Patterson will vote for it.

With this idea in view Senator Lodge to-day began whipping into shape a joint resolution that he hopes will accomplish the purpose denied by the caucus to-day.

This move the Democrats say cannot avail, for while it would serve were the administration going to annex San Domingo it cannot be used in cases where the treaty making power is concerned.

FIGHT PASS GRAFT FOR CONGRESSMEN AND JUDGES.

Washington, Feb. 3.—With never more than two score members on the floor at any one time, the House to-day devoted its six hours of session to a further discussion of the Hepburn railroad rate bill. Those who spoke were all friendly to the measure, but several desired more stringent laws than the present bill proposes.

Representative Randall (Texas) offered a bill in the House which he will offer as an amendment. It makes stringent provisions against the giving or accepting of railroad passes or franks by senators, congressmen and judges. He proposes a fine of not less than $1,000 or imprisonment for not less than one year or both, and disqualification from everyone holding office. The agent or official of the company giving the pass or frank, upon conviction, is to be fined not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than one year, or both.

MAN FROZEN, DEAD, WIFE UNCONSCIOUS

Fitchburg, Feb. 3.—Mr. and Mrs. John Gillen, forty-six and thirty-five years old, respectively, well known in Fitchburg, but with no regular place of abode, were found lying face downward in the woods in the Cleghorn district, three miles from the centre of Fitchburg, at noon to-day by two boys who were on their way skating. Gillen was dead and the woman was unconscious.

Scattered about them were several whiskey bottles.

The man's body was frozen to the ground, and he had been dead some hours. The woman was barely alive, and her body was becoming rigid when found. Mrs. Gillen was taken to the Burbank Hospital, where the physicians say she will not recover.

"MR. PIPP" GUEST OF "MOONSHINERS"

The "Molly Moonshine" company entertained the "Education of Mr. Pipp" company at the Hotel Langham in return for the merry evening furnished to the "Moonshiners" by "Mr. Pipp" in Baltimore, earlier in the season. There were about fifty members of both companies and a few guests in the party.

The entertainment was under the direction of Guy Woodward of the "Molly Moonshine" company and J. Davenport Hamilton of the "Mr. Pipp" company.

These were the entertainers: Miss Marie Cahill, with songs; Mr. Digby Bell, with stories and a song; Augusta Van Biene, cellist; Miss Edith McBride, soprano; Mr. "Jack" Hamilton, baritone; Mr. Ivan Lytton, tenor of New York, in two selections; Mr. George Beban, with stories; Mr. William Wood, tenor; the Trans-Atlantic Quartet.

ANCIENT PAPYRUS FOUND.

SPURN INVITATION TO MAYOR'S DINNER.

President William F. Dana of the Senate and Speaker John N. Cole of the House of Representatives have had the honor of being invited to an "informal luncheon," at which they were to meet themselves and be Mayor John F. Fitzgerald's guests—and they also had the unusual opportunity of refusing to attend the reception to themselves.

In their mail yesterday President Dana and Speaker Cole found a printed invitation, which read thus:

> Mayor John F. Fitzgerald requests the honor of your presence at an informal luncheon at Young's Hotel on Tuesday, February 6, at 12:30 o'clock, to meet President Dana of the Massachusetts Senate, Speaker Cole of the House, the publishers of the Boston daily newspapers and representatives of business men's organizations in Boston.

"H-m-m-m," mused President Dana. "This is funny. First I've heard of it. I don't think I want to meet myself." So he dictated a polite declination.

When a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter saw him, President Dana said: "Mayor Fitzgerald's invitation to the informal dinner at Young's was the first intimation I had that there was to be such an affair. While I shall be glad to talk over such legislation with Mr. Fitzgerald, the talk must be at the State House and not at an informal dinner.

Speaker Cole held similar views.

INDICT HOTEL MEN FOR PERMITTING GAMBLING.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Ten hotel keepers and three alleged managers of poker rooms were indicted by the Grand Jury to-day as a result of the investigation by that body into the charge that gambling existed in Chicago under police protection. The report of the inquisitors did not seriously involve the police. The hotel keepers indicted, of "unlawful keeping of a gaming house," are the proprietors of the Sherman House, Morrison Hotel, McCoy's Hotel, Windsor Clifton Hotel, Kaiserhof, Hunt's Hotel, Hotel Irvine and Veley Hotel.

The finding of true bills against the hotel owners caused surprise in the Criminal Court. It was thought that the Grand Jury did not take the gambling investigations seriously, and that no indictments would be found against any of the hotel owners because of their plea that it was impossible for them to find out what guests were doing in their rooms.

ROCKEFELLERS IN LAND FRAUD PROBE

Tacoma, Kan., Feb. 3.—The Rockefellers may be involved in the Kansas land frauds investigation. Frank Rockefeller of Cleveland, brother of the Standard Oil magnate, according to the statement of A. A. Greene, special inspector of the Department of the Interior, owns a ranch in Kiowa and Commanche counties which it is understood contains government land illegally fenced.

Greene did not state positively that Rockefeller would be investigated, but talked about making a trip to Rockefeller's ranch.

SLAVE WHO FOUGHT FOR SOUTH IS DEAD

Platte City, Mo., Feb. 3.—Jeppta Taylor, better known as Jep Walker, a negro slave of the Walker family, is dead. Taylor was a Confederate soldier throughout the Civil War, and was with his master at the famous duel near Little Rock, between General L. M. Walker and John S. Marmaduke, in which the former was killed.

Thermometer Reaches Zero for First Time in Two Years, Only to Sail Upward Today.

Just a taste of cold weather; that's all. Winter hurdled through the defence of Spring, but was thrown back for a loss.

In other words, while yesterday was the coldest February 3rd in the history of the Boston Weather Bureau the severe snap was of comparatively short duration.

At 6 o'clock yesterday morning the thermometer had fallen to the one degree below zero mark. This was the lowest point touched, and then there was an upward tendency. The weather bulls got afoul the market and made things a little brighter for those who are fond of the tropics. According to official Forecaster Smith the weather, beginning to-day, will resume its springlike condition, in which it will remain for about a week.

In consequence, the ice man, who was as full of glee yesterday morning as an egg is of meat, was gloomy last night. The bright promise of a big harvest seemed to be swept away. The Florida January had returned. The coal men did not wear the smile that won't come off, for they, too, realized that business for them would not be any too lively.

The cold wave came here from Northwest Canada. The warm wave is due here from the East and will remain much longer than its predecessor. While New England and the South showed a great fall in temperature, in the West there was a rising thermometer. This rise will extend to New England.

The advance guard will be here to-day; the full array of heat will be here some time during the coming week.

Not only was yesterday the coldest morning of the Winter by nine degrees, but it was the first time in two years that the temperature, as indicated by the official glass has been down as low as zero.

The coldest February 3 in Boston for the last thirty-four years was in the year 1881, while on the same day in 1877 it was 53 degrees above. On February 3 of 1876 it touched zero.

PARIS SOCIETY HAS CHEWING GUM HABIT

Paris, Feb. 3.—Dr. Meunier has startled society by advocating the adoption in France of the chewing gum habit. In a learned communication to the press Dr. Meunier has explained the benefits to be derived from mastication of gum.

Society just now is mad on questions of hygiene, and notwithstanding its disapproval of gum chewing as a pastime, it is pretty sure that we shall soon see the jaws of the Parisian society leaders busily engaged masticating tutti frutti and kindred gums.

BEAR ROUTS CAMERA AND MAN BEHIND IT

He wanted to wait a few minutes and get a snapshot at the bear, but bruin declined to have his picture taken and made for the camera and the photographer so fiercely that Barraclough had but one course open to him—flight. In his attempt to escape he fell over a high cliff, fracturing one rib and injuring himself quite severely.

EXPECT CONTEST OF YERKES'S WILL BY MRS. MIZNER.

New York, Feb. 3.—There is considerable speculation to-day among the friends of Mrs. Mary Adelaide Yerkes-Mizner and the associates of her late husband, Charles T. Yerkes, as to whether or not the statement of young Wilson Mizner, now settled in the Yerkes's Fifth avenue residence with his bride of three days, that Mrs. Mizner would have something important to say in a few days concerning the public bequests in the Yerkes will means that she intends to contest the instrument.

Mr. Mizner this afternoon said: "We understand that the will of the late Mr. Yerkes is to be filed in Chicago on February 18. I don't think that Mrs. Yerkes can very well say anything until after it is admitted to probate.

"So far as our other plans are concerned, we intend to remain here, probably for months."

Some of Mrs. Mizner's close friends were authority for the statement to-day that on the reading of Charles T. Yerkes's will his widow was so dissatisfied with the provisions that she immediately decided to appeal to the courts for the establishment of dower rights in the Yerkes' estate, thus securing a third of the estate for herself.

Should Mrs. Mizner be able to establish her dower rights in the courts it would completely upset the provisions of Charles T. Yerkes for the hospital and art gallery endowments.

MANY KILLED IN FIERCE RACE BATTLES.

Armenians and Tartars in Desperate Conflict in the Caucasus.

QUARTER IS NEITHER ASKED NOR GIVEN

St. Petersburg, Feb. 3.—A dispatch received to-day from Elizabethpol, in Caucasus, states that fierce fighting is in progress throughout the district between Armenians and Tartars. The rival factions have met in large numbers and the fighting is said to resemble a general engagement. The Armenians and Tartars are the bitterest enemies and the fighting is certain to be of the fiercest order. Quarter, in these conflicts between the races is neither given or asked.

No details as to the progress of the fighting, except that the conflict extends over a wide territory and has been attended with many casualties, have been received. The latest reports give no indication of how the battle is going. The authorities are powerless to prevent the struggle.

"3-CENT JOHNSON" IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—Tom Johnson, Mayor of Cleveland and exponent of three-cent trolley fares, had a long conference with Mayor Weaver, Director of Public Safety Potter and F. B. Smith, head of a big banking firm. Mr. Johnson declined to discuss the conference but a man closely identified with the movement for three-cent fares declared that Johnson came here to look over the ground with a view of financing an independent trolley road.

CRITICISM MAY KILL MINISTER

Spencer, Feb. 3.—Rev. H. C. Hoffman, superintendent of the Children's Industrial Home, recently investigated because the children were not sent to school, is dangerously ill with heart failure and is not expected to live. His physician says that his health is undoubtedly wrecked by criticism of the school.

MUST PAY DAMAGES FOR BROKEN BARGAIN

Providence, R. I., Feb. 3.—Damages of $483.11 were awarded by Judge Baker in the Superior Court in the suit of Max Rubin, a wool merchant of Boston, against the Greenville Woolen Mills. Rubin, who bought cloth, was informed that the day before the cloth was sold to another party. As he had resold some of the goods, he had to buy elsewhere at a higher price.
